Lang sworn in to replace Missing on village board

by LYNN ASINOF

Wheeling Trustee Al Lang was sworn into office early yesterday morning, just hours after the Wheeling Village Board voted 5-1 to appoint him to fill the trustee seat vacated by Richard Missing.

Lang lost to Missing by only three votes in last month's closely contested village election. Village Pres. Ted Scanlon moved to appoint Lang, saying he was the next-highest vote-getter in the election.

In making the motion, Scanlon noted the way winners are chosen in other races when the original winners are disqualified.

"I do not mean in any way to compare this election to a horse race," he said. "But the Preckness was just run this past Saturday. If horses one, two and three were disqualified for some reason, number four would move into the money."

Missing did not take office to prevent a possible conflict of interest between his job and Illinois law. Missing is employed as manager-buyer at Mark Drugs, a store that sells liquor. State law prohibits any elected municipal official from the sale or distribution of liquor.

IN FILLING the seat vacated by Missing, trustees had three choices. They could have allowed the seat to remain vacant, called a special election or appointed a trustee to serve until the next village election in 1975.

The board opted for the appointment despite the fact more than 400 residents signed petitions calling for a special election. Only Trustee Don Jackson voted against the appointment, saying he thought the board should call a special election.

"It seems to me to do justice to the residents of the village we should entertain the idea of holding a special election," Jackson said. He said such an election would give residents confidence in their officials and would make the person chosen to sit on the board more comfortable in his position.

Scanlon, however, said Lang already had the confidence of the people in the village. He said there were not enough names on the petitions calling for a special election to give a valid indication of the feeling of the residents. He said he had been contacted by several persons who opposed the idea of a special election.

"The people said they had gone to the polls and had voted," Scanlon said. "They said they did not want to go back to the polls."

After the appointment was approved, those persons who had advocated a special election said they were not unhappy with the decision.

MAUREEN PITT, 294 W. Strong St., who circulated the petitions, said she was satisfied because outgoing trustee Michael Valenza was not appointed to the board. Valenza had continued to sit on the board in Missing's place since the law does not relieve outgoing trustees of their duties until their successors take office.

"Thank God Valenza was not appointed," Mrs. Pitt said. "That was the biggest fear of the people who signed our petitions, that Trustee Valenza would be reappointed."

Mrs. Pitt said she thought the people of the village would accept Lang's appointment even though the board did not call for a special election. "That's all right. At least Valenza wasn't appointed," she said.

Jackson said he still thought the board should have called a special election. "But if they had to appoint one, I think Mr. Lang is qualified," he said.

In calling for the appointment, Scanlon said the money that would have been spent on a special election could be put to better use. The village clerk estimated such an election would cost $2,400 based on figures from last month's village election.

Scanlon said the money will probably be used to hold a special census. He said this census was needed to increase village revenue by updating the population figures for monies received from the state.

The village president said members of the board will meet to work out committee assignments as soon as Lang takes office. Each trustee serves as chairman of one board committee and as a member of two others. It is unknown if the trustees will continue in their present committee assignments or substantially change their committees.

CURTAIN TIME IS 8 p.m. for "Once Upon a Mattress," a musical to be performed by Wheeling High School students tomorrow through Saturday. Sitting in front are Jim Hecker and Jan Egan and behind them, Robert Kexels and Pamela Menas. Tickets are $1.50 per person.

Trustees refuse to consider special election petitions

Most members of the Wheeling Village Board refused to consider special election petitions signed by more than 400 residents in opting to fill the trustee seat vacated by Richard Missing by appointment.

The petitions, presented to the board by Maureen Pitt of 294 W. Strong St., called on the board to fill the seat by special election rather than appointment.

Mrs. Pitt said the first 300 signatures were collected in six hours. She said that since the overwhelming response from citizens was in favor of a special election, the next 100 signatures were only a sampling of different areas of the village.

"Every house that we went to all wanted a special election," she said. "All board members are located in different areas of the village, so we felt they could go out and see what their neighbors wanted."

MRS. PITT aid the people circulating the petitions did not think it worth the effort to keep asking for signatures. "To keep going on and on, we could have collected from everyone," she said. "We thought you people would know."

Several board members, however, said they did not think 400 signatures was an adequate sampling of the feelings of the village residents. Village Pres. Ted Scanlon said many people may have signed the petitions just to get rid of the people who were circulating them.

Trustee Ed Berger noted that the petitions represented only about 10 or 11 per cent of the total number of votes in last month's election. "What about the other 80 or 90 per cent?" he said.

In order to see if petitions did represent a cross-section of the village, Trustee Bill Hein asked that the board be polled to see who had been asked to sign the petitions. Only Jackson had been approached to sign the petition.

Members of the audience objected that this was not a fair indicator of whether the petitions were a representative sampling.

MRS. ESTHER DAVIS, 15 E. Jeffrey Ave., said she has never asked a village employee to sign a petition.

"Whenever we have approached a person employed by the village, we have been told they are in a precarious position and could not sign," she said.

Sheila Schultz, 393 S. Meadowbrook Ln., said she did not think it was necessary for the trustees to be asked to sign since they would be the ones receiving the petitions.

"You trustees are voting on the situation," she said. "You have the last word."

Trustee Michael Valenza then asked why Trustee Jackson had signed the petitions.

Before Jackson could answer the question, Scanlon banged the gavel and asked for a vote on the question. Only Jackson voted against appointing Al Lang to fill the board vacancy, saying he favored the special election.

Force-annexed homes get zone break

Wheeling officials have passed an ordinance exempting involuntarily annexed single-family houses from village zoning codes.

Many of the annexed houses do not meet zoning requirements and are thus considered nonconforming buildings. Under village ordinances, they were subject to eventual razing.

The ordinance passed unanimously by the village board Monday night removes houses from the nonconforming classification. Homes annexed involuntarily can now be changed structurally or rebuilt if more than 50 per cent destroyed, both of which were formerly forbidden. They will also escape the eventual razing formerly required.

This action was recommended by Bill Bleber, director of building and zoning, during the April public hearings for the rezoning of the W. Strong Street area. The ordinance will affect residents in the Strong Street area, on Lee Street and in other isolated pockets of the village.

The ordinance also corrects a con-tradition in the multiple-family zoning classification. Previously, the ordinance defined the purpose of the zoning as providing a multiplicity of housing types from single-family to apartments. In the next paragraph, the ordinance expressly prohibited single-family houses.

THIS CONTRADICTION also was discovered at the W. Strong Street zoning hearings. Residents in the area complained that their houses could be removed as nonconforming uses if the village approved changing the zoning to R-4 to allow apartments.

The ordinance was reworded to allow single-family homes under the R-4 zoning where water and sewer lines are installed. Since most of the homes in the W. Strong Street area, do not have water and sewers, they are not affected by this part of the ordinance.

In other action, the board also approved an ordinance prohibiting drainage connections to the sanitary sewer system. This ordinance was recommended to the board by the Metropolitan Sanitary District.

After other business, the board met in executive session to discuss, personnel, land acquisition and litigation.

Nurses Club awards scholarships

The Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Nurses Club will award $1,375 in scholarships for the next school year.

The winners of the new scholarships are:

- Paulette Gundlach, Prospect Heights; $600.
- Roberta Horcher, Wheeling; $300.
- Linda Smith, Wheeling; $200.
- Anna Bevins, Long Grove; $200.
- Mrs. Emmitt Griffie, Buffalo Grove; $75.

Mrs. Griffie's grant is a "continuing education scholarship" which is being awarded by the club for the first time this year. A mother of three children, Mrs. Griffie is a graduate of Waterbury Hospital School of Nursing in Waterbury, Conn., and plans to use her scholarship while attending Barat College.

Miss Gundlach plans to use her scholarship for her second year of studies at Loyola University. Miss Horcher, a senior at Wheeling High School, will use her grant to study at Augustana Hospital School of Nursing.

Miss Smith, also a senior at Wheeling High School will go to Evanston Hospital School of Nursing, while Miss Bevins, a senior at Stevenson High School, will attend Southern Illinois University.

Since 1966 the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Nurses Club has awarded almost $5,000 in scholarships. Each year the club sponsors an auction and the proceeds go to the scholarship fund and the "Lending Closet." People from the community may borrow sick room equipment from the "Lending Closet" free of charge.

Poor weather leading to boosts for dairy products

Food leads cost-of-living rise in area

Food prices accounted for the biggest chunk of the over-all Consumer Price Index increase in the Chicago area during April, according to government figures released yesterday.

The index rose at a 5.4 per cent annual rate in the Chicago area for the month, somewhat higher than the 5.1 per cent national average, according to the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor statistics. The consumer price index which rose to 130.7 nationally and 129.9 in the Chicago area, represents a composite of the cost for goods and services compared with a 1967 base period.

NATIONALLY, the increase means that goods which cost $10 in 1967, cost $13.07 last month.

Prices for food and apparel in the Chicago area increased faster than the national average, with food leading as the largest factor. The 1.6 per cent increase in Chicago area food prices during April compares with the 1.5 per cent increase on a national scale.

Fruits and vegetables were the biggest culprits in rising food costs for this area. Apples, green peppers, lettuce and potatoes helped to jack this category up 3.9 per cent over the previous month.

Pork prices declined slightly, while hamburger and baloney remained stable. Prices for other meat items rose during April. Canned milk, fresh eggs and restaurant lunches also were reported increasing in price for the Chicago area.

THE 0.7 PER CENT increase in the Consumer Price Index in April followed advances of 0.9 per cent in March, 0.7 per cent in February and 0.3 per cent in January. The relaxed Phase III controls began Jan. 11.

The BLS said that while food prices went up 1.5 per cent in April, it has the smallest increase in four months. Food prices rose 2.6 per cent in March, 1.9 per cent in February and 2.1 per cent in January.

Officials said that the smaller food price increase in April was due in part to ceilings ordered by Nixon at the end of March on meat prices to curb sharp rises.

But the BLS said the price index for meats, poultry and fish, went up 1.8 per cent in April to a level 23.4 per cent above a year earlier. Prices of fruits and vegetables went up 3.7 per cent last month.

AMONG nonfood items, used car prices increased 3.2 per cent, while new car prices rose 0.3 per cent last month. They usually decline in April. Prices for gasoline and motor oil rose 1.5 per cent and men's and boy's clothing prices increased 1 per cent.

The BLS said the prices for services increased 0.3 per cent, mainly because of higher charges for rent, household services, recreational services, personal care services, dental fees, auto repairs and clothing services like cleaning.

Despite the higher cost of living, the BLS said wages for the average worker more than kept up with inflation.

Average weekly earnings of factory workers increased $1.12 in April to $141.72, due to a slight increase in the average work week and a two-cent increase in average hourly earnings to $3.82.

That more than offset the increase in consumer prices, giving the average worker a 0.4 per cent increase in purchasing power of his weekly earnings.

THIS WAS only the second time in the last six months that the workers' wages had showed a real increase in purchasing power. Over the past 12 months, weekly earnings registered a 0.9 per cent increase in purchasing power.

House Speaker Carl Albert joined a growing number of congressmen calling for the imposition of "strong, enforceable" wage and price controls.

"I do not like the idea of controls, but I believe the American people will accept them and support them if they are fair and equitably administered," the Oklahoma Democrat said in a speech Monday to the board of directors of the National Association of Home Builders.

"The President made a dramatic turn about nearly two years ago when he reluctantly used the power Congress gave him to bring the economy under control," Albert said. "Let us hope he chooses to use that power once again. The stakes are high and the time is now."

In the midst of federal government announcements that the cost of living is rising at a more leisurely pace, dairy industry spokesmen are talking about another increase in bottled milk prices.

A 4 to 6-cent-a-gallon boost in retail prices for milk may be coming up July 1. Distributors who have not raised their prices in anticipation of the current negotiations between Chicago milk wagon drivers also may have to increase their prices in June.

The July increase would reflect an increase in the "superpool" price charged by the Central Milk Producers Cooperative, an organization whose membership supplies approximately 95 per cent of the milk distributed in the Chicago metropolitan area. Its 22,000 members are located in Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana and part of Michigan.

Robert J. Van Lier, executive secretary of the cooperative, said no specific increase has been announced, but it might amount to an increase of a few cents a gallon at the retail level.

THIS SUPERPOOL charge is levied in addition to the price the farmer gets as specified in the U.S. Department of Agriculture's federal milk marketing orders. "Feed, labor, the cost of machinery and all the costs we use in determining the cost of production have gone up," said Van Lier of the need for an increase in the farmer's price for raw milk. "Some costs have gone up 500 to 600 per cent in the past year, such as soybean meal."

Poor weather conditions point to a continued trend to higher prices for dairy products, Van Lier said yesterday. "I think the American public will have to get used to spending more of their income on food," he continued. "Instead of 16 per cent, it may go up to 23 to 25 per cent (of income)."

Van Lier had no comment on a current case in Washington, D.C., involving milk cooperative donations to the Nixon reelection campaign and government milk price support increases. He is the regional manager of the Associated Milk Producers Inc. (AMPI) one of three dairy coops which gave the Nixon campaign $422,500. A pretrial deposition of a lawsuit in which consumer groups charge the Nixon Administration raised milk price supports because of the donations included testimony by a former AMPI officer. Harold Nelson, former general manager, said the 1971 decision to reverse an earlier rejection of price support boosts was made by the White House rather than the Secretary of Agriculture.

John Loss, president of the Chicago Milk Distributors in Cicero, echoed Van Lier's contention that dairy prices will continue to rise for some time. He said he has received indications that the superpool charge will increase 45 cents a hundred weight. This would translate into a 4 to 6 cents a gallon increase in bottled milk prices, Loss said.

Would be financed by state lottery

Dems in stew over regional transit bill

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Amid angry denunciations by Democrats, GOP legislative leaders introduced a bill setting up a regional mass transit plan in six north-east counties, to be financed partially by a state lottery. The measure also calls for a half-cent decrease in the state sales tax.

The bill, which apparently caught some Democrats by surprise, would provide for $160 million in financing for the regional transit system in 1975, its first full year of operation.

It would require a hike in the parking tax in the six counties of Cook, Lake, McHenry, Will, Kane and DuPage, but would reduce bus fares throughout those areas to 25 cents in non-rush hour periods.

IT ALSO WOULD reduce the statewide nickel sales tax by a half-cent, but that tax would be reinstated by the transit authority in the six counties where the transit system was operating.

Republican leaders said they hoped the tax reduction could be put into effect by October, if the plan does not run into legal problems.

Money to operate the system could be obtained primarily through the six-county sales tax, which would provide $100 million. Another $30 million would be obtained through a state lottery, which is not yet legal, but could be passed in this session of the legislature.

Of the remaining $30 million needed, $15 million would be provided by the City of Chicago and $15 million by an increase in the parking tax on commercial garages. The amount of that hike has not yet been worked out.

HOUSE SPEAKER W. Robert Blair, R-Park Forest, said the measure "may well be a unique plan, in that no one that I am aware of has proposed the establishment of such a far-reaching authority in a major metropolitan area without also imposing new and heavy tax burdens."

Democrats, however, saw it differently.

Sen. Cecil Pardee, D-Chicago, minority leader in the Senate, received his copy of the bill minutes before it was introduced and offered strenuous objection.

"I perhaps feel I am going to be bludgeoned into accepting what you are suggesting," Pardee said. "I find some of these financing suggestions very distasteful and very surprising."

Both Pardee and House Minority Leader Clyde Chaste, D-Ana, indicated the measure may have trouble getting Democratic support in the legislature. Both asked for time to study the proposal further.

THE TRANSIT plan was introduced at a meeting of the Illinois Transportation Study Commission, which was appointed by the legislature to come up with a transit system. Blair, chairman of the commission, accused Chaste and Pardee of being "dilatory" when they suggested the plan be sent to a subcommittee for further study.

"It seems to me I can perceive that Republican support seen for Walker flood bill

Republican support can be expected for a Walker administration bill calling for $9.1 million for flood control despite the fact that the bill omits sizeable amounts of money sought in separate bills by the GOP.

State Sen. David J. Regner, R-Mount Prospect, said recently that he will support the bill prepared under the guidance of Democratic Gov. Daniel Walker because it provides the vehicle for obtaining federal funds for construction of a retention reservoir for Salt Creek in Busse Woods north of Elk Grove Village.

The administration bill, introduced in the Senate yesterday by Sen. Donald Wooten, D-Rock Island, provides $3.15 million as the state's share of a $10 million flood-control and recreation-area project.

BOTH REGNER and Sen. John A. Graham, R-Barrington, expressed limited approval for the administration bill, but indicated they would pursue through separate legislation some projects they have proposed which are not included in the "omnibus" bill prepared by the Division of Waterways at Walker's instructions.

Included in the administration bill is $60,000 for channelization and clearing of Willow-Higgins Creek, which passes through Des Plaines. That matches the amount sought in separate legislation by Regner and Graham.

Also in the bill is a proposed appropriation of $100,000 for clearing and shoring the banks of Weller Creek in Mount Prospect and Des Plaines. Regner and Graham have sought $100,000 for this project, but Regner said the amount in the Walker bill would be sufficient to complete work on that portion for which the state has already acquired right-of-way.

OMITTED from the bill, however, is $2.5 million sought by Regner and Graham for work on the Upper Salt Creek north of Busse Woods, and $100,000 for projects on Poplar Creek, which runs through Hoffman Estates. Regner said he would confer with Graham to determine what action they will take in furthering those projects.

Graham said that he will work closely with the Division of Waterways in attempting to secure those flood-control projects which "are fiscally responsible."

"We will exercise all the pressure we can on the governor to accomplish what is needed," said Graham. "But if the money is not there, it would be irresponsible to argue about it."

Lang selection satisfies voters

by RICH HONACK

The Wheeling Village Board of Trustees is finally complete. The board's appointment of Albert Lang to fill the vacancy of Richard Missing came as no surprise and to most residents it was met with a sigh of relief.

Many residents feared the board would appoint outgoing Trustee Michael Valenza who has been sitting in Missing's chair since Missing announced he would not accept the post. Many people feared Valenza would stay in that seat until 1975, despite his not running for reelection in this year's campaign because of business reasons.

The appointment of Lang is a good one, even though a special election should have replaced the person sitting in Missing's seat.

Lang is a qualified individual and ran what seemed to be an honest and open campaign.

Lang is also the type of individual who should be able to work with both the old trustees and newly elected Wheeling Independent Party member Don Jackson. It seems Valenza got his last digs into Jackson before coming off the board Monday night when he unnecessarily attacked the new trustee for signing a petition calling for a special election.

According to reports from the village board meeting, Village Pres. Ted Scanlon quickly called for vote on the appointment of Lang, ending what could have been a verbal confrontation between Valenza and Jackson.

AS FOR THE petitions, it is a bad move when the village board, again with the exception of Jackson, didn't even use them as possible sign of what the people wanted in the case of vacant trustee seat. The board insisted the petitions were not a good cross-sampling of the village and ignored them.

This has long been a flaw of the Wheeling board. Whether it is one or 15,000 residents requesting something from the trustees, those requests should not go unnoticed and should be studied. Obviously, the board was in no hurry to replace Missing since it took three weeks of deciding what to do in the matter. Another week to study the petitions and see if they were a cross-sampling might have left a better taste in the residents' mouths.

But even the people circulating the petitions, said the appointment was all right with them. They said they mainly worked to stop the possible appointment of Valenza.

Maybe now the village board will start working for the people of the village.

Maybe even though the election changed the face of only one person on the board, it was the right person.

Murder case to grand jury

The case of a Wheeling Township man charged with murdering his wife has been turned over to the grand jury.

The grand jury will decide June 6 if John Smith, 403 Oriole Ln., will go to trial on charges brought against him by Cook County Sheriff's police. Police have charged Smith, 45, with stabbing his wife to death on May 16.

Smith, who police say apparently stabbed himself after stabbing his wife, appeared at his preliminary hearing yesterday in a wheelchair, according to police. Court Officer Irvin Kraut said Smith said nothing and "apparently has suffered a loss of memory as to the events."

Smith has been transferred from Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights to Brkwell Hospital, the county prison hospital in Chicago.

Police believe Smith stabbed his wife Irene, 53, in the stomach with a kitchen knife after a quarrel in their home in unincorporated Mount Prospect. Mrs. Smith was the mother of 10.

Rainy spring delaying construction projects

Several local construction projects, including the new Wheeling Road extension, are being delayed because of wet weather, according to Larry Oppenheimer, Wheeling director of public works.

Oppenheimer said work on the Wheeling Road extension, started last fall, "will begin again as soon as we get five to seven days of dry weather. The ground is still to darn wet," he said.

When completed, Wheeling Road will be a new north-south route through the village, connecting with McHenry Road at Dundee Road.

New curbs and gutters for the project have already been installed on the south side of Dundee Road. When the ground dries, construction crews will begin work on the curbs and gutters for the north side of the road as well as laying the road bed for the new Wheeling Road.

OPPENHEIMER SAID if the weather remains dry, the road extension could be completed in one month to six weeks. He said even if the weather is wet, the project should be finished before fall.

The public works director said rainy weather has also delayed restoration work at two sites where new sewer lines were recently installed. Oppenheimer added that work will begin on Anthony Road and at the intersection of S. Wayne Place and S. Dennis Road as soon as the ground dries.

"It's almost ready," Oppenheimer said. "But the recent rain will knock us out of the box a little way." He said it will only take contractors about two days to restore the area affected by the new sewer lines.

Oppenheimer is also waiting for the ground to dry to begin working on two connections to Wheeling's retention basins. The ditch that connects the Dunhurst sewer system to the Heritage Park west basin is scheduled to be widened. Plans also call for a new connection from the Wheeling Drainage Ditch to the shallow basins at Heritage Park.

HE SAID IT WILL take at least a couple of weeks of dry weather before these areas dry up enough to begin construction.

"I don't know if that's ever going to dry up," he said. "It's just mush. I don't think that thing has any bottom. It's like quicksand."

Oppenheimer said wet weather has also been affecting developers in the village. "They have been extremely backed up," he said. "They're even thinking about working Memorial Day."

LION GEORGE SCHMITT handled the griddle Sunday at the Prospect Heights Lions Club Pancake Day at MacArthur Junior High School. The club sponsored the event to raise money for a new ambulance, library equipment, the Hadley School for the Blind and the Illinois Camp Lions.

Board asks 5-year guarantee

Carpet at new school rapped

by WANDALYN RICE

The High School Dist. 214 Board came down sharply on a representative of a carpet manufacturer Monday because his firm has delivered a carpet that does not meet the board's specifications.

Board members told Tad Stockfisch, division manager for Lee Carpeting Co., they want to make sure the carpet, scheduled for installation in Buffalo Grove High School, does not fall apart.

To protect the district, board member Jack Costello suggested an arrangement which would give the board a full five-year guarantee on the carpet and which would mean Lee would not be paid in full until five years after the carpet was installed.

STOCKFISCH SAID he would have to consider the offer and added, "I must admit I've never been in a tougher situation. You've got this offer so tight it's completely one-sided."

The burnt-orange carpet which is planned for the classroom areas at Buffalo Grove was found not to meet specifications by a laboratory after it was delivered. The loops of the carpet pull loose from the backing with 12½ pounds of pressure instead of with 20 pounds of pressure as provided in the specifications, Stockfisch said.

Board members expressed the fear that the carpet would ravel and not stand up to school use, but Stockfisch said his company would at least give the board a five-year guarantee because it was convinced the carpet would cause no trouble.

"We do not normally give a five-year guarantee," Stockfisch said, "but we are very satisfied that we aren't going to spend any money. We do not want the carpet in your building if in any way we're going to get a black eye."

Stockfisch said the carpet did not meet specifications because of an engineering error and said it was not short on materials. He added that it would probably take 10 weeks to manufacture new carpet for the school.

STOCKFISCH ALSO told the board the Lee company was willing to stand behind its product and added, "My competition would love for us to have a bad school here."

Costello, saying "I have no lack of faith in Lees," suggested the company should give the school district an immediate 10 per cent discount from the $66,000 purchase price and then provide a lease-purchase arrangement for the duration of the five-year guarantee.

Under the lease arrangement, he said, the district would pay 10 per cent of the cost of the carpet each year and, at the end of the fifth year would pay the remaining bill if the carpet was satisfactory.

"In our experience," Costello said, "once we pay the money to the contractor that's it." He added, "I think we'd be in a foolish position if we weren't doing as much as we can to protect the district."

August target date for firehouse

Construction of an addition to the Prospect Heights fire station may begin in the middle of August, Fire Chief Donald Gould said last week.

"We've set the middle of August as a target date," he said. "We're hopeful."

Funds for the expansion of the current fire station, at Ill. Rte. 83 and Camp McDonald Road, were included in a $275,000 bond referendum approved by voters two years ago. Since then, the Prospect Heights Rural Fire Protection District has been negotiating for land next to the fire station. In February they reached an agreement.

The district will pay $35,000 for the 280-square-foot lot that includes a one-story brick house. The district has given the house to a Prospect Heights resident who has agreed to move it.

"HE'S SAVING us money," Gould said. He said it would have cost the district between $2,500 and $3,000 to have the building torn down and the debris carted away. "We'd get little for the house if we put it on the market." He said the occupants of the house have indicated they will move by May 27.

Once the property is vacated, the fire officials will have to arrange with Cook County to relocate an alley that separates the current station from the new lot. Bob Venit, attorney for the district, said the district will have to petition the Cook County Zoning Board to remove the alley. He said a hearing would then be conducted for anyone to voice objections to relocation or removal of the alley.

Venit said more information on the alley will be available at the district's monthly meeting June 19.

PHIA going to Supreme Court?

The Prospect Heights Improvement Association (PHIA) is considering taking its battle for incorporation of Prospect Heights to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Jack Gilligan, PHIA president, said yesterday the PHIA has not ruled out appealing to the U.S. Supreme Court, even though the Illinois Supreme Court twice refused to hear the case. The Illinois Supreme Court's second refusal came last week.

"It's bad news for us and hurts us," Gilligan said. "But it doesn't end all hope in the courts."

Since the PHIA filed an incorporation petition two years ago, Wheeling and Arlington Heights have objected to the proposed city of about 13,000 residents. The Cook County Circuit Court and the Illinois Court of Appeals have upheld their objections.

Gilligan said PHIA officials will meet this week or next to discuss further court strategy. He said Don Kreger, attorney for the PHIA, recommends against filing an appeal with the U.S. Supreme Court. Kreger could not be reached for comment yesterday.

"But there is a lot of support for going to the U.S. Supreme Court among PHIA members. We have to discuss it. We don't know the cost involved," Gilligan said. "If we do have other alternatives, then there is no point going the route that will cost money and may not be effective."

GILLIGAN AND other PHIA officials are still hoping to get consent for the incorporation from Arlington Heights, Wheeling and Mount Prospect. The PHIA is discussing boundaries with Arlington Heights and Wheeling. Mount Prospect officials have indicated they will probably agree to the incorporation.

While talks with Wheeling have not begun, PHIA officials have met several times with Arlington Heights officials. Arlington Heights trustees Monday night agreed they wanted Dale Avenue to be the boundary between the village and the proposed city. This would mean that residents on Waterman Avenue, west of Dale Avenue, would be in Arlington Heights.

"We can't agree to Dale Avenue," Gilligan said. He said the PHIA is committed to including Waterman in the city's boundaries because Waterman residents want to be part of Prospect Heights.

The PHIA is also hoping that legislation pending in the Illinois General Assembly will be passed, thus removing the consent requirement for incorporation as a city of 7,500 residents or more. The House of Representatives bill, sponsored by State Rep. Robert Juckett, R-Park Ridge, has passed the House and is on its way to the Senate.

A SIMILAR bill sponsored by State Sen. Bradley Glass, R-Northfield, is pending in the Senate. Jack Siegel, attorney for the village of Arlington Heights, said Monday that Glass intends to try to amend the bill to give neighboring municipalities a chance to object to the proposed boundaries of an area requesting incorporation.

Glass could not be reached yesterday to confirm Siegel's statement.

Gilligan said he agrees that neighboring villages should have a chance to object to boundaries but said the PHIA does not want the bills amended. He said he is afraid if Glass tries to amend his bill, it will die before a vote is taken.

"We're going to try everything we can to get one bill through without amendments to it," Gilligan said.

Juckett's bill passed the House without amendment. Juckett said yesterday he has heard of no attempts to amend his bill in the Senate.

To determine needs of workers, availability of social services

Survey of backstretch conditions planned

The Illinois Racing Board has begun a survey of conditions and employees on the backstretch of Arlington Park Race Track.

The study is aimed at determining the needs of backstretch workers as well as the availability of local and county social services, according to Lucy Reum, chairman of the racing board's backstretch committee.

"We went with Arlington first because they opened the thoroughbred season and have the largest group of people on the backstretch," Mrs. Reum said.

Interviewers will talk to half of the nearly 800 men and women who care for the 1,000 thoroughbred horses stabled at Arlington Park during the racing season.

Preliminary results of the survey should be available in about two weeks, Mrs. Reum said. Information on community services will take longer to compile, about 5 to 6 weeks, she said.

"WE HAVE A TOTAL group of people on the backstretch who are very important to the financial health of the state, but who aren't receiving the services they need and are entitled to," she said.

"Racing associations have been sharply criticized for neglecting the backstretch. So has the state for not fulfilling its obligations to race track employees and the racing public. And so have the horse owners for not living up to their obligations to their employees."

The survey was commissioned by the racing board in order to get "some hard demographic facts," she said. "We kept getting conflicting stories about the number of people on the backstretch, where they came from and what they need."

"Once we know what they tell us they need, we can arrange needs in terms of priority, short, middle and long range," she said.

Among the social services, Mrs. Reum cites education and health as among the most pressing. Basic education classes for backstretch employees are in their second year at Arlington Park. Teachers use a mobile classroom furnished by the racing board.

IN THE AREA OF health services, the

Correction

Prospect Heights School Dist. 23 was mistakenly listed in the Herald yesterday with school districts that have purchased civil rights insurance. Dist. 23 has not purchased the insurance and has no plans to do so, according to Supt. Edward Grodsky.

Cook County Public Health Department has agreed to look at a program of testing and immunization to cut down on communicable disease, she said.

"We already know that there are basic human needs to be met on the backstretch. The community there is a microcosm of social problems of a highly mobile and impersonal society," she said.

Surveyors will also contact village officials to find out what local welfare agencies can do for backstretch employees.

"I found that many of the social service groups don't know about the backstretch. And then, many of them work on a referral basis," Mrs. Reum said.

Frank Charlton, director of health services for the Village of Arlington Heights, said yesterday that he had been interviewed by a doctor hired by the racing board about public health for backstretch employees.

"WE HAVE NOT experienced a crisis problem and have not had to intervene," Charlton told the interviewer.

He said that he was asked about the water supply at the track, which comes from a deep water well on the grounds.

A sampling of the water was tested and found to be very similar to village water, he said.

Spots language, hearing problems

SLIDES aids handicapped children

by KATHERINE BOYCE

When Debbie was 4 she had the vocabulary of a 2½-year-old.

She had an infection in both ears since she was an infant. The doctor treating her said her language problem was probably not related to the infection and she would learn more words as she grew older.

But preliminary tests by SLIDES, a state funded program to test preschool children for hearing and vision handicaps, showed that Debbie did have a hearing problem. She was referred to a hearing specialist by SLIDES and is now wearing hearing aids in both ears. Debbie is doing well in school now, said Joan Wootton, hearing consultant for the program and her "vocabulary is growing by leaps and bounds."

Debbie is an unusual case, said Helen Appeldoorn, director of the program. Most children tested don't have such serious handicaps, she said, but even a minor hearing or vision problem can put a child at a disadvantage in the classroom.

A child with a mild handicap, one who doesn't hear well but is not deaf, or doesn't see well but is not blind, often goes unnoticed by parents and teachers. The child is usually not aware of the problem because he is not used to hearing or seeing any other way.

THESE HANDICAPS often affect a child's education, usually his language ability. He may have an underdeveloped vocabulary because words sound distorted or are inaudible or he may not be able to see printed words and letters clearly. Too often this child appears to be just a slow learner. When the problem is recognized it can often be treated or the child can be placed in a special class to compensate for his handicap.

The job of SLIDES is to identify the mild handicap before the child enters school. The program was created by the state in 1968 after passage of a federal law granting state money to test children between age 2½ and 6 for mild handicaps. The program office, located in Washington School in Park Ridge, serves children in 49 school districts in Cook and Lake County.

Testing is performed free in local schools or in the slidesmobile, van equipped with testing instruments that is parked at each of the school districts every year. The slidesmobile is testing children in Schaumburg at Dirksen School this week at Keller Junior High School, May 29 to June 1 at Keller Junior High School, May 29 to June 1 at Nathan Hale School, June 1 through 8 and at the Des Plaines City Hall June 28 and 29. Parents should register their preschool children at the local school district.

Identifying learning problems among preschoolers is especially important, said Miss Wootton, because most communication skills, like language ability, are learned in the first three years of life. After a child reaches age 6 he has passed the period when learning skills is easiest, she said. After he enters school it is difficult for the handicapped child to catch up with his peers.

THE SLIDESMOBILE contains equipment used to test the hearing and vision abilities of preschool children in the north and northwest suburbs. A small percentage of the children tested have a handicap, are referred to a

The preliminary tests administered by SLIDES are called screening, said Miss Appeldoorn. They do not diagnose a handicap, they only show that a handicap may exist. The children are then referred to a specialist for further examination and treatment.

ABOUT ONE-THIRD of the preschoolers in the area come in for testing each year, a total of about 10,000 children. Of these children 2.5 per cent have a hearing handicap and 3.5 per cent have a vision handicap. About 96 per cent who are referred to a specialist have needed treatment.

The slidesmobile is equipped with a soundproof room where children are tested for hearing problems. The child wears earphones and listens to a variety of tones. When he hears a sound he raises his hand.

A child's vision is tested as he looks into an instrument and sees a slide of animal pictures, said Helen Gibbons, vision consultant. He must tell the examiner which figure a capital E points toward.

When a parent registers his child, he is given a game to take home and play to prepare the child for the tests. Some children are still frightened by the testing instruments and can't be examined. They are asked to come back for testing in a few months. All children should be tested each year because some handicaps may disappear and recur later.

SLIDES FOLLOWS the progress of children whose handicaps have been identified. The office works closely with doctors treating the children and with school personnel if the child enters a special learning program when he enrolls in school.

Two other services provided by SLIDES are testing the acoustics of classrooms and testing the accuracy of equipment used in schools for children who have hearing problems.

Equipment is tested to determine whether it meets with the manufacturers' claims. The program contributes the test results to a statewide study designed to help schools purchase the best equipment.

Testing acoustics in classrooms is a service provided by SLIDES since last year. The examiner uses a sound meter to determine how much reverberation of sound occurs in the rooms. Too much reverberation can cause a problem for a hard-of-hearing child who is listening to a lesson. Ten rooms in the SLIDES area were tested last year and the program hopes to increase that number this year.

During the month of July, SLIDES consultants will evaluate the results of the tests given during the year. Next year's testing program will begin in August.

The changed world of a 'fired' teacher

by BETTY LEE

On Friday afternoon, John Fender was quietly reading a newspaper on his porch, occasionally putting it down to check his 3-year-old son, who was playing beside him.

Afternoons have changed for Fender, who had been accustomed to spending time in an Arlington Heights school where he was a teacher for 10 years.

It has been almost a year since School Board Dist. 25 fired him for "violence and cruelty in his relations to students" at Miner Junior High School. Since then, the time has brought about a long chain of events and a multitude of changes for Fender and his family.

During the year, Fender has been caught in limbo. Two weeks ago, Cook County Circuit Court Judge Edward Healy reversed the school board's decision to dismiss Fender. By law Fender apparently won his job back, but the school board immediately announced plans to appeal.

AND IT WILL BE six months to a year, Fender says, before any decision will be made on the appeal. It will also mean another six months to a year of uncertainty for Fender.

He also fought a battery charge brought against him by parents of a seventh grader who claimed he hit her in a class "without provocation." Fender was found innocent last September.

If you have met Fender before, you'll immediately notice some of the changes. He has lost weight and the work shirt and blue jeans suggest he has taken a different kind of job — a welder in an Elgin factory.

Fender now prefers his anonymity and remains secluded from the public in his house hidden in a wooded neighborhood of Elgin.

Not very many here know about me, or have connected me with the news in Arlington Heights," said Fender.

HIS WIFE MARTHA, a teacher's aide in the Elgin school district, is also working nights as a waitress, "to make ends meet."

"I would like her to cut down on this night business, but she'll be off for the summer."

"It has been kind of a comedown," said Fender. "I was up on the salary scale, making as much as teachers in my position make. Now my wife has to work two jobs, and with mine, we're making what I used to make alone."

Fender held a part-time job as a security guard at Woodfield Shopping Center in Schaumburg and tried a stint selling real estate but abandoned it after he realized he wasn't making enough money.

"I was interested in houses and enjoyed it, but I got the idea that I may not have been the world's greatest salesman," he said.

FENDER FOUND a job as a welder six weeks ago, and considered himself lucky when he was hired. "I've got too much education that has to be used, and they don't like that sometimes."

A veteran of some nine years of working at Rock Island Bridge and Iron Works, near where he was brought up in Mercer County, Fender was forced to return to factory work.

"I enjoy welding and it's something I can do worthwhile," said Fender.

His first teaching job was in San Antonio, Tex., where he walked into an independent school district office after finishing a hitch with the Army, asked for a position and got one in ten minutes.

"THE MAN SAID, 'You don't know how lucky you are. A guy just resigned 10 minutes ago,'" said Fender.

"But basically, I enjoyed teaching. I've done a lot of thinking about teaching during the last year. I just didn't turn it off. I want to help in education, teaching and kids."

Will Fender go back to teaching? Would he go back to teaching in Arlington Heights if he was reinstated?

"Sure I would go back," said Fender, "but I don't know if I'd be comfortable in Arlington Heights. I understand the community and generally thought I had a half way decent relationship with parents and a good one with teachers."

BUT AFTER BEING dismissed, Fender states that is "pretty hard to get a job."

"I feel I may not be worth a heck of a lot. I think it would be impossible to get a teaching job, unless a school district says, 'Hey, you're the guy we want.' But they haven't been knocking at the door."

"But it will depend on what happens next year. All I can do is anticipate, and I would anticipate staying with this job (welding)."

Fender had spent a lot of time thinking of his future and confides that it is something to "think about at night when there is nothing else to do."

"It's almost been a year and I've been rattling around," he said. "The question is what does a 42-year-old man, blasted out of his career, do for the next 20 years of his life? Welding? I haven't come up with any ideas."

HIS DISMISSAL last June was "stunning," and Fender said he did not realize anything was wrong.

"If the matter was as serious as it was, they (school board) should have communicated that to me earlier, like in February or March," Fender did not think he had bad relationships with students and felt that the school board was wrong in firing him for those reasons.

"I thought that the school board was wrong, otherwise I would have resigned last summer," said Fender.

"And when the court ruled a reversal on the school board's decision, and Dr. Schlott (Richard Schlott, Dist. 25 board president) argued that this didn't give the school any ways of firing tenured teachers, I said, 'Thanks Dr. Schlott.' I seem to be losing something. All of a sudden, the issue changed to the right of the board to fire tenured teachers. It doesn't make me feel anything at all."

The school board contends the weight of evidence was against Fender and that he was rightfully dismissed. The district charged there were several incidents of the former language arts teacher striking students.

THE COURT upheld that Fender should have been given written notice to stop corporal punishment before any charges were brought against him, and that the school board attorney should not have acted as prosecutor and counsel for the board.

That decision was not based on whether Fender was innocent or guilty of the charges.

The hearing, the court battle and now more waiting have taken their toll.

The year for Fender has been "pretty painful. I felt pretty bad last summer. I lost a lot of weight. I worry and it gnaws inside," he said.

Two weeks ago, Fender apparently won his job back as teacher in Dist. 25 when a Cook County judge reversed the school board's decision to dismiss him. Since then, the school board has decided to file appeal.

Fender doesn't know if he'll continue fighting if the courts decide in the school board's favor, mainly because of funds.

Meanwhile, Fender will work his shifts in the sweeper factory in Elgin, thinking of teaching and ways to improve education. "Just thoughts," he said.

Walker joins 800 in honoring Katz

In a rather remarkable tribute to Rep. Harold A. Katz, D-Glencoe, some 800 or 900 Democrats, including some of the top names in the Illinois party, turned out for a dinner at the Orrington Hotel in Evanston Sunday night.

Staged by New Trier Township Democratic Committeeman Lynn Williams, the party for Katz attracted such luminaries as Gov. Daniel Walker, former congressman Abner Mikva, now head of Walker's Governmental Ethics Commission; former State Rep. Anthony Sciarano, now head of the Illinois Racing Board, and former Lt. Gov. Paul Simon, who lost the Democratic nomination for governor to Walker.

Also on hand to pay tribute to the nominal and actual leader of those Democrats who term themselves "Independent" (from Mayor Daley, that is), were fellow Representatives Eugenia Chapman of Arlington Heights, Richard Mullan of Palatine and Aaron Jaffe of Skokie.

Rep. Harold A. Katz

AMONG THE unusual aspects of the courtesy dinner was the time which Walker devoted to the affair. It is accepted procedure at such gatherings for the governor — or whoever may be the headline speaker — to appear just after the dessert course, sit politely through a glowing introduction, make some brief remarks and depart rapidly, shaking a few hands on the way to his waiting car.

At the Katz staiding, however, the governor arrived just before the appetizers and stayed until the end of the program, a gesture of time which was not lost on those party leaders experienced at these dinners. It appeared to be a subtle acknowledgement of the loyalty of Katz and his independent followers to Walker, who needs all the help he can get with the Illinois legislature.

What's more, Walker did not even take advantage of the large assemblage of Democrats to make any political points. His entire speech lasted something like 22 seconds. After referring obliquely to his tribulations with the legislature, he turned to his former primary election foe, Simon, and asked, "Paul, do you still want the job?"

Walker then told the crowd, "I wish I had a legislature full of Harold Katz's," and sat down.

THE LEVITY during the dinner was also a refreshing change from the usual political dinner, at which the atmosphere usually ranges from dull to oppressive.

Simon came closest to voicing anything of political significance when he anointed Mikva as "congressman-to-be" (in reference to Mikva's expected bid to defeat U.S. Rep. Samuel H. Young, R-10th, next year, and his pronouncement that "no one could be a better supreme court justice than Harold Katz.") Neither Mikva nor Katz took any pains to dispel the possibilities raised by Simon.

The former lieutenant governor also got off the best line in a night highlighted by chuckles. Telling Walker how much he enjoyed parts of the governor's speech on Inauguration Day, Simon said: "There was one line which I particularly wish I had said myself. It was the one that started 'I do solemnly swear...'"

Choose new mate or alimony—not both

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — If you're collecting alimony and living with someone new, you'd have to give up one or the other under a bill passed by the Illinois House.

Rep. Charles J. Fleck, R-Chicago, who sponsored the bill, said persons who eat together and share household chores and expenses would be defined as cohabiting. No sexual relationship would have to be established.

Some members objected that there was no guarantee of support for someone denied alimony under the bill. Supporters of the bill, which passed and went to the Senate on a 109-26 vote, said it would encourage the affected people to get married by removing the economic drawback.

REP. THOMAS J. HANAHAN, D-McHenry, reports he will retire from the General Assembly at the end of his current fifth term. Hanahan cited his election as executive vice president of the Chicago Janitors Union No. 25 as the reason for his retirement.

He hinted he may retire earlier if a pending bill providing for the appointment of legislative successors is enacted. Under a bill sponsored by Rep. Edward E. Bluthardt, R-Schiller Park, Hanahan, as the county chairman of the largest county in his district, would be able to name his own successor.

ON A VOTE OF 45-3, the Illinois Senate passed a bill that will provide $20,000 for the Evanston Bus Lines, long plagued by financial problems and recently shut down by a strike.

The measure, which has passed the House, will now be sent to Gov. Daniel Walker. It will reduce the amount some other bus lines are receiving. Among those who will receive less are the bus lines in Quincy, which will get $12,000 less and the bus lines in Galesburg, which will receive $500 less.

Education Today

by Wandalyne Rice

This is a "law and order" column — written as much in despair as anger.

The subject is the relationship of public officials to the law — and by that I don't mean Watergate or any assorted national crimes.

The law I'm talking about is the Illinois Open Meetings Law, a tough statute written by former State Rep. Anthony Sciarano, the fellow now making news on the Illinois Racing Board.

The public officials I'm talking about are the ones at Harper College in Palatine who seem to be unable to find an easy, convenient way to obey the open meeting law.

LAST SPRING the Herald had several stories on the fact the Harper board was allegedly holding dinner meetings to discuss board business without giving proper notice and without abiding by the rules that say only a few things can be discussed in private.

The law provides that public boards have to notify the public when they meet. In most cases the notice can be accommodated by posting an announcement at the meeting place 24 hours in advance and by officially notifying any newspapers that have formally requested that all such announcements be sent to them.

Any board can discuss matters of personnel, land acquisition, collective bargaining and some other carefully defined areas in private. They must take any formal action in public and they cannot discuss just anything that pops into their heads — only the things defined in the law.

THE PURPOSE of the law is to ensure that public business is handled in public. It is also to ensure that boards don't keep all discussions behind closed doors and then only vote in public — a procedure that can keep public enlightenment at a minimum.

After we questioned the Harper board about its dinner meetings last year it seemed for awhile as though it was going to watch out for the law. We received notice of many meetings, particularly executive sessions called to talk about personnel. That way, even though the members were getting together to talk privately about something the law let them talk about privately, they had told the necessary public that they were going to meet.

This week, however, I found out about a Harper meeting, not from Harper officials, but from officials of High School Dist. 214. Dist. 214 Assistant Supt. Rod McLennan told his board Monday that the Harper board was meeting that night to, he thought, talk about cooperating with Dist. 214 on an auto mechanics building.

I had never heard about that meeting, so I called Harper and was told, yes, the board met, but discussed personnel, as allowed by law, not auto mechanics which would have been illegal.

AFTER CHECKING with several people I decided to believe the denials related to auto mechanics — but another question remains.

How come Harper College officials can't find a way to regularly and routinely notify the press of meetings as required by law?

Anyone who has been around Harper for any length of time has heard boasts about administrative efficiency made by board members and administrators. College Pres. Robert Lahti often makes speeches about Harper's "management by objectives" program that puts business principles into an education setting.

SO WHY CAN'T they notify the necessary people of meetings when the law requires it?

In thinking about that question I think I've come up with an answer — Harper officials don't really care about setting up a good procedure to notify anyone of meetings.

When Harper board Pres. Jessalyn Nicklas interviewed with us before the last election she lamented the fact that the open meetings law has cut down the amount of "brainstorming" the board can do without fear of being quoted. She alluded to the good old days when the law wasn't as tough.

I suspect that Mrs. Nicklas' attitude is common among Harper people. They resent the open meetings law and as a result they have never really taken steps to effectively implement it.

So, once this column appears, I'm sure Harper officials will be diligent about notifying the paper about meetings for awhile. And then they'll forget, because the necessity for complying with the law has never been impressed on them by their bosses on the board.

As I said, this is a law-and-order column. I don't think it bodes well for anyone when the public officials don't respect the laws that govern them.

Illinois laws are 'operative'

Once again, perhaps for the umpteenth time, elected officials in the Northwest suburbs have curdled the laws of the State of Illinois for their own purposes.

In two instances last week laws which were written, proposed and passed for the benefit of the private citizen have been thrown out the window for the convenience of what elected officials choose to call "the public good."

If any more of these violations of the law occur, the "public's good" will be as tattered as the images politicians themselves now hold in the public's eye.

The most serious incident took place in Arlington Heights where, in a clear violation of the intent and letter of the Illinois Open Meetings Law, the village board and plan commission met to confer with a developer.

The Open Meetings Law is the favorite target of suburban office holders who, as a group, seem to regard the law as an annoying inconvenience but nothing more.

This time, the village board and plan commission had a cozy chat with the developer of a giant sports complex to be built just outside the village limits.

No notice was given of the meeting. Instead, the village bigwigs met before their regular board meeting to get a preview of the developer's plans.

Worse, when called on the matter, Village President Jack Walsh pool-pooled the whole question of a violation of the law and made it clear such minor things will not stand in his way. Walsh characterized the meeting as "strictly informal" and said, "As far as I'm concerned, there was nothing formal about it. No decisions were made, just general discussion. We could have had it in a restaurant."

Oh, really.
For the village board to meet before a board meeting without formal notification is illegal. Further, it is illegal to meet "informally" in a restaurant. It is illegal to meet at the country club. And it is certainly illegal to have the plan commission and village board get acquainted with a developer without formal notice.

Incredibly, Walsh seems to think only if the board took final action would the law be abridged. In fact, the law specifically says the reverse, that final action can only be taken in public and that only in specific instances can the board meet privately. And in no case can the board meet without delivering notice to the public.

In a final show of arrogance, Walsh dismissed the idea of notifying the public of his meeting with the developer. "There is a limit to how much conscious preparation we can do when we're under a lot of pressure to get things done," he said. And those words are the exact echo of every politician who has felt over the years that the laws are for someone else to follow.

The second violation of the law last week came in Wheeling where the village manager admitted he is not conforming to the state laws on letting bids.

Village Manager George Passolt said he is having so much trouble buying gasoline for the village that he has suspended the state law on bidding and is buying gasoline a little at a time, thus avoiding the idea of seeking bids.

Passolt's plight is not an easy one; the gas shortage apparently is real. But for anyone to suspend the law is shaky ground and one instance will always lead to another.

In Wheeling's case, it's just a matter of the law not conforming to what the village wants to accomplish. In the parlance of the day, the state law in Wheeling is "inoperative" this week.

'As others see us'

To the Russians, the world is a circle divided into two halves, the capitalist camp and the Soviet camp.

The Chinese see the world as a sandwich, with the Soviets and the Americans representing the slices of bread which are putting the squeeze on the other socialists and industrial nations of the world.

These images are suggested by German political scientist Dr. Klaus Melmert, who is currently senior fellow at the School for International Relations at Columbia University.

Europe and Japan have a still different view of the world, he told delegates to the recent 14th annual conference of the Regional Council for International Education, held at the University of Akron.

Both Europeans and Japanese see the world as four lines converging to a point either at Europe or Japan, depending upon whether the viewer is European or Japanese.

And what is the U.S. view? The United States, says Melmert, sees the world basically as two triangles, a large one and a small one.

The three corners of the large triangle represent the United States, the Soviet Union and China. At the corners of the small triangle are Japan, Europe and, again, the United States.

In order for the United States to be on both triangles, one corner of the small and one corner of the large triangles meet. This symbolizes that the United States is the only power communicating with all other camps.

Hemispheres, sandwiches, lines, triangles, corners, schmorters.

If the professor were to ask the common man, he might find still another view of the world. This fractious globe is really a Yo-Yo bobbing up and down at the command of those who like to think they've got it by a string.

Column draws local fury

In his "Editor's Notebook" of May 10, 1973, regarding the Buffalo Grove Village Board's action to resolve the Aspen Ditch matter, Rich Honack of the Buffalo Grove Herald has written:

"If you're a builder and you want to make money come to Buffalo Grove. There are four guys on the Village Board who will do anything to help you make money. Look at the facts."

Mr. Honack thereupon proceeds to distort and garble those same facts he has invited his readers to view.

This deplorable instance of gutter journalism leads us to question not only Mr. Honack's competence as a newspaperman, but more fundamentally, his motives. Any newspaper worth its salt has ample reason to be ashamed of such a performance by a titled member of its staff.

In the interest of correcting, for Herald readers, the inaccurate and misleading effect of Mr. Honack's comments, we herein set out in summary fashion the relevant background, as it shaped the issues confronted at the May 7 village board meeting.

Essentially, the ditch in question needed corrective work by Levitt before the village would be required to accept it. Levitt could have put the ditch into acceptable condition by installing a 36-inch diameter drainage pipe, covering same, grading and seeding, at an expense of some $16,000. This is all Levitt could be legally required by the village to do — a most important fact, but one not to be found in Mr. Honack's article. There would have been a significant improvement over the ditch's current condition, but it would still have left an open ditch which would frequently contain water, and could conceivably pose erosion problems.

The village was anxious to eliminate the ditch entirely, which would involve a 60-inch pipe and an expenditure of some $35,000. Levitt was willing to expend the extra money required for this solution, but only if the village would grant it one or another concession in return.

Levitt proposed one such, that it be allowed to build four (not six, as Mr. Honack stated) homes near Twin Grove School. Another, discussed between Levitt and the village, was that Levitt be allowed to build four homes on the "Neighborhood Park" site on the Koelper-DeMuth parcel, or six homes, with profits on two to go to the Park District. These proposals all drew objections not only from village trustees but also from representatives of the Buffalo Grove Park District and School District 96.

Thank you

My wife and I wish to commend and thank the Arlington Heights Fire Department paramedic team who responded to my call at 5 a.m. on April 13 to see if they could save my son, aged 20, who evidently died in his sleep.

The members of the paramedic team — I was unable to get their names — did everything humanly and mechanically possible for my son, but to no avail.

Their compassion and understanding were exemplary.

EDITORIAL: Gov. Walker should lead Illinois' tax reform movement.

when they were discussed at an open meeting May 2 at the Village Hall.

Between the time of that meeting and the board meeting of May 7, Levitt advised the Buffalo Grove village president that it would consider as a viable alternative a 10 per cent increase in density on the Wagner parcel. This was the point President Armstrong broached at the May 7 board meeting.

Since the board desired unanimously to have the ditch filled in by means of the 60-inch pipe, the issue was how to accomplish it. The board rejected giving up public use land for new homes, either at Win Groves School or on the Koelper-DeMuth park site. The decision then became whether: (A) for the village itself to absorb the $19,000 expense (Levitt agreed to participate to the extent of the $16,000 it would have spent for a 36-inch pipe); or (B) to allow Levitt to build up to 28 more units on the Wagner parcel. The first alternative held out the possibility that the Park District would try to contribute a portion perhaps $3,000 or so, of the village's costs. School Dist. 96, however, flatly refused to contribute even a nominal portion of the expense. A narrow majority — 4 to 3 — favored the latter route.

Relating this brief factual summary to Mr. Honack's diatribe, a number of points need to be made.

First, Levitt offered the 10 per cent approach to the village, not vice versa. Moreover, Levitt offered it only as a last resort suggestion. Levitt had earlier and more forcefully urged the village to allow it to build four or six more single family homes. (At the May 2 meeting, the village asked Levitt to give further thought to a density variation in the Wagner-Koelper DeMuth parcels, as an alternative to "taking back" public use land. Levitt did precisely that.)

Second, as for Mr. Honack's suggestion that "Levitt went home with what could be the best deal any developer has gotten in the Northwest suburbs," the facts are these: (A) the overall density of the development will be increased, at most, from 6 to 6.25 units to the acre (Levitt has built at much greater density in another Northwest suburb); (B) the same development was unanimously approved by the Village Plan Commission at 8.8 units per acre; and (C) the additional units, if they are built, will be subject to Buffalo Grove's ordinances and policies in such matters as flood control, school donations, permit, inspection and water tap-on fees, building codes, etc. — these are, in all respects, among the most stringent in the area.

What the village and Levitt have done, through intelligent negotiation, is to eliminate some 400 feet of a potential maintenance and aesthetic problem, while preserving intact donated public use land and without expending any of the village's badly needed general funds. Board members differed in good faith regarding which of the two solutions was the preferable, but this is precisely the sort of situation in which, as elected officials, they are called upon to exercise their best judgment. It scarcely justifies Mr. Honack's abusive and unworthy suggestion that some board members were motivated by a desire to increase profits for Levitt.

We deplore Mr. Honack's scurrilous attack, and we suggest that the Buffalo Grove Herald carefully reconsider his qualifications as a Paddock spokesman.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The contradictions in this letter speak for themselves. The Herald notes Mr. Armstrong's admission that he offered what became the final ditch settlement after it was given to him privately by Levitt representatives. The point of Rich Honack's column stands. Levitt came out of the deal smelling like a rose, with an increase in profit of more than $200,000. The village board came out smelling quite differently.

Dist. 25 test stand criticized

I have read with great interest two recent articles in your newspaper which I consider quite contrary. Both articles are related to the transmittal of standard test data from junior high schools to the public. I was impressed and encouraged by the April 26 article in which Assistant Superintendent Stevenson, from Elk Grove Township School Dist. 59, reported and explained the average test results their students achieved over the past five years. It represented some reduction in standing and remedial suggestions were made.

On the other hand, the April 17 article, which appeared on the Herald's front page, related Superintendent Strong's (Dist. 25, Arlington Heights) inability to obtain or relate any test data to the public. Quite frankly the article made me sick! Superintendent Strong states, "There is no comparative (test score) data available." I say phooey — has he tried to obtain it from High School Dist. 214, who does administer a standard test to eighth graders? The high school administration will informally admit that Dist. 25 students are behind most others. For that matter, has Superintendent Strong compared the average test results from schools in his own district? In the past few years, teaching techniques have been changing markedly and schools within districts are using different techniques. They are not all equivalent and some comparison and modifications should be made. I say advise the parents!

Superintendent Strong states, "We want to try new ideas, but we don't want to experiment just for the sake of experimentation." Fine, no one disagrees with experimentation as long as there is monitoring of results and modification to the program. It is not apparent to me that this type of logical plan is being employed. In fact, one gets the feeling that there is no plan. Superintendent Strong suggests a visit to the neighborhood school will reassure the parent. Again I say Phooey! If anything, a visit to the neighborhood school will confirm your worst suspicions!

Too often I've heard from new neighbors or those former neighbors who have moved away just how far behind Dist. 25 schools are. New kids just entering Dist. 25 schools can coast for 2-3 months whereas those who move away must struggle to catch up. It is about time that Superintendent Strong be challenged. His uncooperative — uninformative program has gone on long enough. It is the school board's responsibility to get to the bottom of this hoax and report to the public. The many, many dissatisfied parents of

She lauds help at Center dinner

On behalf of the advisory council to the Salvation Army Community Counseling Center, I'd like to thank those persons who made our annual dinner meeting, April 7, such a great success.

Our first thanks go to the people who attended the dinner. Their support of our agency is important in helping to maintain the Center's vital services to the Northwest suburbs.

A special thanks to Gov. and Mrs. Dan Walker for gracing our dinner with their presence and to the Governor for the commentary he offered in support of the Salvation Army and its services in our area.

Thanks are also extended with special feelings to Robert Kopecky of Nelson's Bo Kay Florist, Palatine, and to Mrs. JoAnn Hoste of the Brass Rail Restaurant, Arlington Heights. The professionalism, care and quality they demonstrated through their businesses helped greatly in making the event successful for those who planned it and enjoyable for those who attended.

My personal gratitude is extended to all who, through serving on the dinner committee, helped make the event successful.

'Night court needed'

Why not a night court for Arlington Heights?

The other evening, at around 5 o'clock, on Hicks between Euclid and Industrial (Rolling Meadows), there was a squad car facing the wrong way with his lights flashing. All traffic seemed to be halted. Finally, after cars making left turns to avoid what might be ahead, I got to where I could see the squad. The car in front of me went around a car turning left, going on the shoulder, but I did not leave the road. The officer stopped the driver in front of me, and me and the party in the rear and gave us tickets.

I was innocent, but the officer would not listen to reason. The thing is that I'm a family man with eight mouths to feed. I certainly can't take time off from work to pay something like $15 of my hard earned money for something that isn't called for.

I surely would like to go to court in the evening to stand up for my rights, as a citizen, to such foul play.

I think Paddock is great.

'Save Palatine'

I wish to protest High School Dist. 211's suggestion that old Palatine High be torn down.

Palatine High has been a tradition since 1929 and no amount of money can ever replace what Palatine High School has meant, means and will mean to all the students of Palatine. As a former student, I totally reject any plans to tear down such a fine old school which contains many happy memories for me and I'm sure for many others. Most people may say this is sentimental nonsense, but I want my children to go to this school when they grow up.

Looking at this from a taxpayer's point of view, surely it will cost less to repair the old school than to build a new one at today's prices and so far out of town. Tearing down Palatine High would mean there would be no high school for the in town students to walk to, which to me would be more desirable than to have to rely on busing.

In my opinion, the school board may need their heads examined if they decide on this horrible action.

Business Today

by LAWRENCE MEREDITH

LONDON — The dollar gained ground and demand for gold eased in Europe Tuesday but the U.S. monetary outlook appeared uncertain until the Watergate affair is resolved.

In London, gold changed hands in the afternoon at $110.50 an ounce, down from Monday's record of $112.

The slackening demand for gold was linked by bullion brokers to the White House denial of rumors that presidential national security adviser Henry A. Kissinger would resign.

But a spokesman for Samuel Montagu and Co., Ltd., which operates the London gold market with four other merchant banks, said, "The lack of confidence in the administration of the world's most important nation has given rise to massive uncertainty in the markets which is going to persist until Watergate is cleared up."

IN PARIS gold sold for $112.55, down $1.75 from Monday. In Frankfurt, the price was $110.33, down $1.80.

Gold declined in Zurich to a $110.50-$112.50 range from Monday's closing of $111-$113.

An increase in the price of gold is generally an indication of weakening in the dollar.

The dollar gained ground in London, reaching 2.5635 dollars against the pound by midafternoon against Monday's closing rate, an all-time low of 2.5780 dollars.

In Frankfurt the dollar moved up to 2.7485 marks at one point from Monday's close of 2.7405 marks.

The commercial dollar strengthened in Paris to buy 4.42 francs, up from 4.396 Monday night. But the tourist dollar bought 4.395 francs compared with 4.40 at Monday's close.

The stampede for the metal began last Monday when gold breached the $100 level for the first time.

OAKLAND, Calif. — A spokesman for Safeway Stores Inc. says the firm is paying back in lower meat prices almost $81,000 it overcharged customers.

Safeway, under price regulations imposed to halt inflation, was to have established prices on the basis of a 30-day period prior to last March 28.

The spokesman said Monday that through a misunderstanding the company used the date of March 23 in figuring the prices on 88 items.

Safeway, he said, has agreed with the Cost of Living Council to lower the prices until the money is returned to customers who were overcharged from one to 20 cents a pound.

He said the price reductions have been in effect in the Bay Area for about a week.

Farm program not working

Common Market pillar is crumbling

by RICHARD C. LONGWORTH

BRUSSELS (UPI) — One of the two pillars of the European Common Market is beginning to crumble.

This is the much-praised, much-ridiculed farm program — called the Common Agricultural Policy, or CAP. Along with the customs union, the CAP is the market's only major completed accomplishment in its 15-year history.

But hard times have hit the CAP. Sniping from Washington, opposition from Britain, protests from inflation-worried housewives and a built-in bent toward scandal and nonsense have made the once sacrosanct program look surprisingly vulnerable.

Most politicians still echo French President Georges Pompidou, who said recently, "Without the CAP, there is no Common Market."

A GROWING BAND of others, however, would agree with German Agricultural Minister Josef Ertl. Although German farmers are among the big winners from the CAP's maze of supports, levies and subsidies, the burly Bavarian said the whole system was "idiotic."

No country — not even the United States, which detests the CAP — is calling for an end to the system, because that could bring the Common Market crashing down. But agreement is growing daily that some major changes, including the financing of the CAP, cannot be long delayed if the policy is not to collapse of its own weight.

The purpose behind the CAP is to have food prices uniform throughout Europe — and to have them high enough so that European farmers earn as much money as factory and office workers.

Food prices are kept high by two means — a shifting tariff on cheaper imports from the United States and other outside nations to make sure that they always cost more than European farm produce, and a fixing system, backed by supports, that keeps food budgets for European households well above the American level.

IT HAS NOT worked. Prices remain high, but a Common Market survey this spring showed farm incomes still lagging behind city wages. The policy works so unevenly in fact, that farming incomes vary widely. Dutch farmers earn nearly three times as much as those in Ireland.

Ertl's explosion against CAP as "idiotic" came just after a 20-hour, all-night session of European farm ministers to fix prices for the coming season. That meeting failed and it was left to a later, 24-hour meeting to reach an agreement that satisfied no one — particularly not consumers who ended up paying higher prices.

Since 1958, farm ministers have been setting both prices and policies in these marathons. Often, decisions reached in exhaustion are so badly scrambled that they must be revised later.

THERE ARE OTHER signs that the CAP is getting out of hand.

The whole system is based on a stable relationship between the nine European currencies. So when European currencies were revalued or floated in February, the Common Market commission had to send out a teletypewriter message 25 yards long just to inform governments of new prices.

Even in normal times, commission bureaucrats must make 70 separate calculations on each of 300 different price-controlled products every week.

More embarrassingly, the CAP made headlines recently when the market sold 200 million pounds of butter — half the surplus stock amassed because of high price supports — to the Soviet Union at a bargain price of 21 cents per pound. This is only one-sixth the normal price charged to shoppers in European supermarkets. The Market defended the Russian sale on grounds that it was more economical than storing the stuff.

The Financial Times of London called the CAP "simply unworkable," but the bureaucratic wheels could turn forever were it not for outside pressure.

PART OF THIS pressure comes from the United States. A secret study by the White House estimated that the Common Market tariffs against imports — particularly wheat — cost America billions of dollars each year. When world trade talks begin later this year, the Nixon administration will say it is subsidizing European farmers and will demand more access to European markets.

Market officials have agreed publicly that Europe must be willing to negotiate on the "instruments" of CAP, while leaving the "principles" intact. Both Americans and Europeans agree that the battle will be to separate the instruments from the principles.

The bargains in backyard swimming pools soon will be blossoming in the ads — and along with the flowers that bloom in the spring, tra la, we can count on an excellent crop of pool promoters.

They will provide thousands of families with a type of soaking that was not quite what the buyer thought the contract called for.

Backyard pools have become big business — so big that there's a multimillion-dollar take in it just for the fly-by-night promoters and their hit-and-run salesmen who fan out across the country every summer, according to the National Swimming Pool Institute.

THE INSTITUTE, representing major manufacturers and dealers, last year reported a flood of complaints from the victims of the gyp artists. "Bargain" pools leaked, rusted out, sagged, cracked and, in several instances, collapsed in a strong wind.

Filters and pumps wouldn't work, the service promised by warranties didn't materialize, and warranties and guarantees themselves proved worthless.

Pool promoters are now operating in all sections of the country, the institute warns, and offers this advice to prospective purchasers:

Dealing with a reputable company is the only way to insure that somebody will stand behind promises and guarantees. Check the company out with a Better Business Bureau or Chamber of Commerce. And when a salesman tells you he's selling the product of a company you know to be reputable, check his credentials with the company.

BE DOUBLY suspicious of special deals, today-only discounts and other types of buyer bait that promoters typically use.

Before signing anything, make sure you read it carefully and understand it.

Wall Street chatter

NEW YORK — Lionel D. Edie & Co. says the next few weeks will answer some important questions on the financial markets. Edie expects interest rates for long-term debt to move lower and on short-term debt interest rates will rise slightly. The short-term market will be heavily influenced by Federal Reserve actions and the longer term markets by consumer spending and saving, and inflation.

THE INDICATOR Digest Warning Service says "the spreading ramifications of Watergate, which this week led directly to the doors of the stock market with the resignation of the SEC chairman, have further undermined investor confidence both here and abroad." As the market searches for a bottom, the firm says, "the technical condition of the market looks terrible." It concludes the market situation will continue as such until the "inherent values in the many reasonably priced stocks now available become apparent."

SPEAR STAFF says in its market report "Watergate, recession, tight money — the bad news is being or has already been factored into the present decline." Thus, it recommends to investors to hold stocks and to take advantage of "dips to purchase issues with sound fundamentals."

THE DINES Letter says the market has moved excessively in both directions and now it is moving excessively on the downside. It does not advise purchase of stocks noting "we cannot and will not fight downturns." The letter says, "President Nixon's limit on dividends and profit margins might be responsible for the lower range of P-E ratios." If such is the case, it says, "stocks might sell down to the 5 per cent or 7 per cent yield level, and heaven help the non-dividend payers."

NEW YORK — The New York Stock Exchange has asked the Securities and Exchange Commission for permission to delist Dynamics Corp. of America, trading in whose shares was halted April 25. The company is operating under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy law.

"Well," said West philosophically, "I guess the only good reason I had for my jack of hearts lead was that it was right there in my hand."

After that sterling start, East and West had little trouble letting South make his two-diamond contract.

East cashed his ace and king of hearts and gave his partner a ruff.

West returned the three of clubs. A low club was played from dummy and East won with the king. A club return by East would have left South one trick short but East led his last heart.

West ruffed and dummy overruffed. South drew trumps; knocked out the ace of spades and later discarded a club on one of dummy's spades.

South couldn't resist the impulse to go. "Against defenders like you I can afford to make lousy overcalls," was his comment.

This annoyed West. He replied, "Against bidders like you I can afford to defend badly. If you had just kept out of the bidding we would almost surely have been set at some contract or other. You scored plus 90 for your two diamonds. It won't be much of a score for you."

West's last remark was right to the Sacred Heart graduation June 1

Sister Anne White will be the commencement speaker at graduation ceremonies at Sacred Heart of Mary High School in Rolling Meadows at 8 p.m. on June 1.

Sister Anne was selected by the 107-member graduating class to deliver the address. She is a former Sacred Heart teacher and is currently teaching at St. Edward's School in Richmond, Va.

The cap-and-gown ceremony will begin with a media presentation prepared by the students highlighting school activities during the past year.

"We've tried to make it a relaxing ceremony," said Jim Marx, graduation moderator. "We want it to be an event that has some formality but is also meaningful to the students. Most of the planning has been done by a series of student committees."

Diplomas will be presented by Principal Gerald Giles, as Associate Principal Louise Jacobs calls the students' names.

The Sacred Heart of Mary Mothers' Club will hostess a party for the graduates in the school cafeteria following the ceremony.

One of the two valedictorians, Janice Takata and Mary Fitzsimons, will speak at the graduation ceremony while the other will speak at the awards banquet at 7:30 p.m. on May 31 at the Arlington Park Towers hotel.

The banquet will begin with a liturgy celebrated by the Rev. James Michael, superintendent. Senior Kathy Demmert will give a homily reflecting the graduation theme, "you can fly but that cocoon has to go."

Following the dinner, the faculty will present awards to the seniors in recognition of academic and social service achievement.

The Doctor Says...by Dr. Lawrence Lamb

Meaning of a fast heart rate depends on its cause

Dear Dr. Lamb — Could you write about the diagnosis referred to as "sinus tachycardia" dealing with the heart. Is this diagnosis damaging to the heart? Is there a treatment for it? etc.

Dear Reader — Doctors use terms to classify different diseases and even different functions of the body. Heart specialists refer to the normal beating mechanism of the heart at its normal rate, between 60 and 100, as normal sinus rhythm. That is what most of us have when we are resting quietly and aren't anxious, drinking too much coffee, smoking too many cigarettes or overly excited about a football game. When the normal heart beating mechanism speeds up so that the rate is over 100 per minute it is called sinus tachycardia.

Its real significance depends on its cause. If it is an indication of poor physical condition, one should do something about that problem. If it is from cigarettes and coffee, the answer is obvious. If it is from anxiety, why then one should find out what is producing the anxiety and deal with the basic problem. A fast heart rate is sometimes an indication of an overactive thyroid.

A fast heart rate is just a symptom like an elevated body temperature. If you exercise a little bit so that you speed up your heart, you'll have it! And if you have usual functions for a person in reasonably good physical condition, when you rest, it should disappear. Incidentally, some people have "sinus tachycardia" just because of seeing the doctor.

Dear Dr. Lamb — I am 24 and have one child which my doctor delivered by Cesarean section. I had X-rays which my doctor said showed a pelvis too small for a nine pound breech baby to pass through. I didn't have time to give it much thought since I went into labor that same day. I know that you are not to wait until labor begins before a section but my water had broken and my contractions had started coming at about four minutes apart, but they almost stopped in a couple of hours.

Now that you know a little something about the problem, would you please give me the straight facts about a section. What are the do's and don'ts that make a doctor do such surgery?

Dear Reader — Perhaps the common good medical indication for Cesarean section is when a normal birth cannot be accomplished through the bony pelvic birth canal. Some women have a small pelvis and measurements accomplished early in pregnancy should identify this problem in most instances.

Once a woman has had a Cesarean section many obstetricians then feel that all subsequent pregnancies should also be delivered by Cesarean. The concern here is that the scar from the previous incision in the uterus might rupture during the forceful contractions of normal labor.

You are correct in saying that it is preferable to do the section before the water has broken and before significant contractions have started. The nature of pregnancy and labor, being what it is, it is not too surprising that every once in a while labor gets well under way or even the water breaks before the woman is able to get to the hospital for operative delivery.

Newscaster Jorie Lueloff to address Harper graduates

Chicago newscaster Jorie Lueloff will address the fifth commencement exercises of Harper College at 8 p.m., June 3, on the college campus at Algonquin and Roselle roads, Palatine.

Miss Lueloff is the only female newscaster in Chicago to anchor a major newscast — the Channel 5 News: Noon Report, seen six days a week.

She'll speak on the topic of "Passe the Roles — or Down with Roles and Up With People."

Miss Lueloff has appeared on NBC's Today program with news and feature interviews from Chicago. Before joining the network she was a feature writer for Associated Press in New York.

She is on the board of governors of the Chicago chapter of the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences, and is one of the first two women to be elected to the Chicago Press Club's board of governors. She is married to Richard E. Friedman, Midwest Regional Director for the U.S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

Harper College this year will graduate about 260 associate in arts degree recipients, 110 associate in science recipients, and 215 associate in applied science recipients. Also, 75 certificates will be awarded.

There's some spice mixed with Chris Evert's sugar

by IRA BERKOW

NEW YORK — "There's a lot of meanness in Chrissie Evert. And that's what probably makes her so great. She's a tough cookie. But that's also what separates Chrissie and Laurie. They're really not that much alike at all."

Fred Weinman, tennis coach, was discussing his pupil, Laurie Fleming. Laurie Fleming has been compared to Chrissie Evert for about 10 years now. The two live only about a mile apart in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., have been bosom companions as well as intense and sometimes fearful rivals.

Similarities abound, especially in their play. Both use a distinctive two-handed backhand, eschew a net game, employ a reaching open forehand. Both are meticulous about eye make-up, wear dangly gold earrings, walk with a cute fluffy step and emit girlish giggles.

Their fathers are both tennis instructors. Each girl has a 15-year-old sister and 11-year-old brother who are topflight tennis players for their age groups.

Laurie Fleming, a delicate-looking 17-year-old with long lustrous black hair which she twists into a prim bun before playing, left home to play in her first tennis tournament as a professional in the Family Circle Cup at Hilton Head, S.C. Her father told her she was under no pressure to be spectacular, that all she needed to do was concentrate on the job.

At the tournament, Laurie said she was not feeling pressure. Coach Weinman, however, said, "Laurie is feeling unbelievable pressure. She's bringing it on herself. She always has been compared to Chrissie and she's always followed in Chrissie's footsteps."

For example, the year after Chrissie won the national 14-and-under girls' championship, Laurie won it. The year after Chrissie won the national 16-and-under championship, Laurie won it.

Laurie is embarking on her pro career, a year after 18-year-old Chrissie began hers.

But there are differences. For one, they are not so evenly matched. Laurie does not possess Chrissie's killer instinct on the court. In countless head-to-head tournament matches, Laurie has never beaten Chrissie. She got close last year and that put a wrench in a relationship that has been so chummy that, said Laurie, "We always talked about when we'd turn pro and room together and play each other in the finals."

They were playing in the tennis club in Fort Lauderdale. Laurie was ahead 4-3 in games after having split two sets. As they passed each other to switch sides, Laurie said, "It's 4-3 my favor, isn't it, Chris?" According to Weinman, this set Chrissie off. She snubbed Laurie the rest of the way and beat her, to boot. Weinman remembers Laurie crying in the clubhouse afterward. "I hate that girl, she's so conceited."

When Laurie came home, a note had been delivered to her. It was from Chrissie. Laurie happily opened it, thinking it was a patch-up note. Laurie read and began to cry. Chrissie had blistered her.

They soon made up. "They fight and make up like normal high-school girls," Weinman said. "They just happen to be exceptional tennis players. But Chrissie's not the sweet All-American type that everybody makes her out to be. She'll scratch your eyes out to win. I remember watching her play her little sister. Her sister was bawling her eyes out."

Chrissie had beaten her 6-love and was eating her alive 5-love in the second set. But that attitude makes Chrissie a champion."

She hurt Laurie another time, according to Weinman. After beating Laurie in a local tournament, Chrissie told a newspaperman, "I practice more. I play harder. I want to win more than Laurie."

"It was true," said Weinman, "but Chrissie could have been more tactful." Laurie also says it's true and that's why she says she is not envious of Chrissie's successes. "I practice all week the late morning and afternoon," said Laurie. "Chrissie plays earlier in the morning and she plays later under the lights, too."

Weinman said that Laurie is just not as totally consumed by tennis as Chrissie is. "Laurie has other interests, such as writing sports on her high school paper, and being selected to the coming-of-age court, said Weinman."

Yes, said Laurie, taking a bit different view. "Sometimes school does interfere with my tennis." She does not plan to go to college. She feels that the tour "will be like going away to school."

And though she is in the "renegade" Virginia Slims circuit and Chrissie is with the United States Lawn Tennis Association group, Laurie says she still hopes to travel and room with Chrissie.

Meanwhile, Laurie is trying to make her way. In her first tournament as a pro, Laurie solidly beat Julie Heldman in the first round, then lost to Rosemary Casals, the eventual winner of the tournament, in the next round, 6-1, 6-1.

"I can't believe I played so poorly," said Laurie, with an unsure giggle. Weinman soothed her. "Not even God could have beaten Rosemary today," he said. "You did fine. You just tried to overhit too much. It'll come."

Later, Laurie mentioned that a mutual friend, Pam Teeguarden, had talked to Chrissie on the telephone before the tournament. Chrissie told her, "Tell Laurie that I think she can win it all."

Laurie, flattered, said, "I guess Chrissie has more confidence in me than I have."

WINNER'S CIRCLE RECEPTION. Bill Beckman (wearing glasses) has become an avid racing fan and celebrated Boau after a winning effort in his first race. Beckman, the athletic director at Forest View High School blends the two correlated duties under a program of patience.

Paddock Patrol

by Jim Cook, TURF EDITOR

PATIENCE IS A VIRTUE — an important virtue in the field of coaching athletic teams and horses.

The unlikely combination is, however, very compatible for Forest View Athletic Director Bill Beckman who credits his successful stints in the coaching ranks and the thoroughbred strip to the common denominator of "walk, don't run."

"There's quite a correlation between training horses and coaching," the proud owner of a filly and colt explained. "There are certain things that you can apply in horse training and coaching track boys, for example," the veteran in both fields continued.

"Both have personalities that are specialized among each individual and patience is the only way to cope with them. You push a kid or a horse when he's not ready to run and you destroy his temperament and risk injury at the expense of being anxious for a quick return on your original investment."

Beckman's association with the flats is still a two-month-a-year hobby that supplements his athletic directorship at Forest View. But summertime employment at Arlington Park since his high school days has kept the snow-capped disciplinarian in close contact with the Sport of Kings.

"At one time, I was a timekeeper, made out the payrolls and served as a night watchman at Arlington Park," Beckman remembered. But it wasn't until 1967 that Bill went into the racing game with the intent "to work from the bottom up and learn all I could."

Under the direction of public trainer Eddio Cole, Beckman brought his colt Jim Beau and filly Marvelous Marg for a dollar apiece in a micro-miniature version of the Keeneland Yearling Sales.

"I wanted to raise them from weanlings," Beckman said, "and fortunately I was a good friend of the Klehms who I'd known for the 30 years that I'd been in town."

"They allowed me to keep both of them there where they'd have a lot of room to run. I used to get up at 4:30 in the morning to go take care of them before I went to school."

Beckman's patient rearing program paid instant rewards.

Entered in his very first race in late October of '72, Jim Beau covered six and one-half furlongs in the slot at Sportsman's Park in 1:21.4, baptizing Beckman with his first appearance in the winner's circle.

Lions try again

The weatherman waited until mid-afternoon yesterday before opening up the skies with rain, forcing postponement of six area baseball games.

The most significant contest postponed was St. Vitor's clash with Addison Trail in the Elk Grove Regional Tournament. The Lions will try again Wednesday at 4:15 p.m. on the Elk Grove diamond.

World Team Tennis names commissioner

World Team Tennis, yet another huge financial sports venture, made its press debut Tuesday morning in Chicago with the disclosure of 16 franchises already purchased plus the naming of WTT's first commissioner.

George MacCall, a 55-year old former non-playing captain of three U.S. Davis Cup teams, has been awarded a $400,000, five-year pact as WTT's chief. He served on Davis Cup teams in 1965, '66 and '67.

WTT made its debut during a mid-morning press conference in the Ambassador West Hotel in Chicago. Among those present were Jordan H. Kaiser, owner of the new Chicago franchise.

Kaiser, and brother Gordon, own the Chicago Cougars of the World Hockey Association. Their other interests include the Arlington Indoor Tennis Club.

Jordan will serve as WTT executive vice president. Other league officials are president Dennis A. Murphy plus chief administrator Larry King.

Murphy is current president of the World Hockey Association Los Angeles Sharks. King is a Hawaii attorney, vice president of TennisAmerica and husband of tennis star Billie Jean King. He will also own the Los Angeles franchise.

WTT matches will feature mixed doubles plus men against men and women against women. Each of the current 16 clubs will have three men and three women when play begins in May, 1974.

Next order of business for the WTT will be drafting of players plus naming of coaches and managers. Alignment into two eight-team or three six-team divisions will be announced, the latter if two additional franchises are sold.

Franchises have been purchased for Boston, Chicago, Cincinnati, Denver, Detroit, Houston, Los Angeles, Minnesota (probably Twin Cities), New York, Philadelphia, Phoenix, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, San Diego, San Francisco and Toronto.

It is not known whether Chicago home matches will be played at the Arlington Club.

Sportsman's Notebook

by Bob Holiday

BOB COBB, WHO edits Bassmaster magazine, a publication of the Bass Anglers Sportsman Society out of Montgomery, Ala., writes currently of a new lure that is exciting even the sophisticated professionals who fish for money in the B.A.S.S. contests throughout the south.

According to Cobb, one fisherman received an offer of $1,000 for his own version of the plug, and turned it down!

The plug is the Big-O and it's currently the hottest bass weapon to hit the professional bass tournament trail. Cobb reports that "it looks like a pregnant guppy, has better moves than a hopped-up go-go dancer, costs even more than a prime-cut New York strip, and is winning big dollars for the pros who have one."

On one cast, an angler landed the biggest bass of the Rebel Invitational at Ross Barnett Reservoir, with the Big-O, and earned himself over $2,000! Roland Martin, the current leader in the money standings on the pro tour, used one of the home-made plugs carved from balsa to win the $17,000 fish-off in the Rebel. Runner-up in the Rebel, Bobby Murray, got hung up, lost his version of the Big-O and had a special shipment rushed in by bus to fish the finals.

The Big-O is a murderously vibrating lure invented by Fred Young, an east Tennesseean who hand-carved a few for special friends out of a block of balsa wood. The job is a meticulous task, requiring at least an hour and 20 minutes, plus the several-layer lacquer coating process.

The tricky job, according to the experts, is to carve the Big-O to give it its distinctive wiggle. Roland Martin said: "Most diving type baits have a lazy wiggle, but the vibrations from this lure are more like a bait fish swims."

Once an angler gets hold of a Big-O, according to enthusiastic reports, he takes special care of it. The soft balsa lures are usually carried in styrofoam egg cartons to protect the lacquer finish, prevent nicks and cushion shocks and scratches.

Several Tennesseeans are carving Big-O's and selling them to fishermen who don't mind coughing up $5 to $10 for a plug. But reports indicate that the price isn't the problem. The better lure whittlers have a four to six month waiting list!

One industrious kiltizer at a recent professional tournament wasn't entered in the competition, but he had seven lures fishing it. He rented them at $5 for 10 hours of fishing... $30 if you lost it.

The "little old luremakers" obviously can't keep up with the demand for hand-carved wood Big-O's, so a plastic version is in production and it is planned to retail at a more reasonable $2.50. Whether the plastic Big-O will work as well as the hand-carved balsa lures remains to be seen. The fellow who purchased the registered name from the inventor, Cotton Cordell, has a good deal of experience in building super-lures, including his own "Hot Spot" to name just one. Cordell says the plastic lure is identical in size, 5/8 oz., and with the same unique shape and balance.

Softball play begins for girls

The conference softball for girls gets underway today with all schools having games at one of two sites in the conference, either at Arlington High School or Wheeling High School.

Each school will play two games per day in the conference schedule with all schools playing eight games during the season. Only seven games will count in the final conference standings, as the eighth game will be a repeat of a team already played in the season.

Just how popular is the Big-O? Cordell's sales manager says they haven't even officially announced the thing, but word has spread and before the first one is "off the line," they are 8,000 dozen lures behind!

If you're lucky enough to get hold of a Big-O, or its similar cousin, the Big-N, the pros recommend: "Fish it hitting, bumping or working heavy cover. Crank it and keep it coming."

The stir over the new lure is reminiscent of the Rapala, when that great lure first crashed the American market. Early versions of the Rapala were, also, balsa, and they were in tremendous demand. There were, then as now, stories of Rapala's for rent, from $5 to $10 per day... and very high prices for purchase.

COHO 73, LAKE Michigan's next salmon and trout derby, opens June 2 and runs nine days through June 10.

The contest is sponsored by Salmon Unlimited, a non-profit fishermen's club, and they'll be charging a $1 per day entry fee for contestants. Coho, chinook, steelhead, brown trout and lake trout are all eligible species in the Coho 73 contest, and a total of 10 grand prizes will be awarded. There are also daily prizes for big fish each day, plus "wet line" prizes, selected in a daily drawing.

Contest hours are from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. and you must register at contest headquarters at the Waukegan Harbor boat launch. There is no launching fee at Waukegan Harbor, but you'll have to pay to park your boat trailer in the nearby park district lot.

There's a fascinating reenactment of a historic event underway this month. It was 300 years ago that seven men from French Canada entered Green Bay, in Wisconsin, by canoe to "discover" the upper Mississippi river. The men, in two canoes, made a historic 2900 mile, four month trip that took them down "the great river" to Arkansas, before they returned home in September.

The original explorers, whose trip is being duplicated, day by day and mile by mile by a modern group of seven men in fiberglass canoes, were Father Jacques Marquette, a Jesuit priest, and explorer Louis Jolliet, with five canoe men, who set out from St. Ignace on Michigan's upper peninsula on May 17.

On May 22, Marquette and Jolliet reached Washington Island, on the 28th they entered the Fox river, and by mid-June they had successfully crossed the state of Wisconsin by way of the Fox, the portage at what is now the city of Portage, on the Wisconsin river. On June 17, they entered the Mississippi, the first Europeans to see the great stream, except at its mouth in the gulf.

The seven explorers duplicating the route will adhere to the original schedule, camping along the way and fixing most of their own meals from provisions they carry with them.

What a fantastic trip that original trek must have been! This may be the first time I've personally felt I was born 300 years too late. Imagine being able to boat on the Mississippi river without tyrold shots!

UOP'S SHADOW RACING TEAM, with George Follmer at the wheel of a Formula 1, recently took a third place in the Spanish Grand Prix. Follmer, sponsored by Universal Oil Products of Des Plaines, finished sixth in the South Africa Grand Prix. Points earned in those starts have given Follmer one of the most impressive international debuts by an American driver in many years. Follmer generally burns up one engine every time out on the course. His Formula 1 car is fitted with a 450 horsepower, three-liter Cosworth Ford V-8 engine. The car runs on lead free gasoline.

Busy schedule at Arlington Indoor Club

Summer activities at the Arlington Indoor Tennis Club, 1350 E. Northwest Highway, Palatine, will begin on June 18, according to Bob Brockenridge, pro-manager at the club.

Highlight of the summer schedule is the Arlington Tennis Institute, which has been planned to teach players of all ages the basics of tennis quickly and correctly.

Professional instructors at the Arlington Tennis Institute have been trained to teach players at all levels, from beginners to advanced. Specially planned teaching devices will be utilized to improve skills rapidly. Sound recordings, filmstrip viewers, instant videotape re-play, super 8 sound movies, mirrors, stroke groovers, hitting alleys, ball machines and printed materials have been designed to help players learn tennis.

Arlington Tennis Institute will place players in a class at their playing level, with never more than six students to a court. The cost of a series of nine three-hour sessions is $75.

Other summer activities at Arlington include Ladies League, Friday pizza nights, private and group instruction, Sunday Men's League, and free attended nursery.

Four of the eight courts at the Arlington Indoor Tennis Club are air conditioned for summer playing comfort. All courts will be open until 11 p.m. nightly during the summer months, said Brockenridge.

Memberships are available at the Arlington Indoor Tennis Club for summer as well as year long. Summer memberships, which are half price.

Membership in the Arlington Indoor Tennis Club is reciprocal with the Lakeshore Racquet Club in Chicago. Both clubs are subsidiaries of Sports Centers International a Chicago based recreation firm which also owns the Chicago Cougars Hockey Club. For information on all summer activities, phone 394-9860.

LADIES' DAY has a different meaning these days as would-be female Little Leaguers such as Jackie Adams, 8, of Attleboro, Mass., left, and Carolyn King, 12, of Ypsilanti, Mich., try to integrate the playing field. The girls had earned spots on Little League boys baseball teams but their playing status remains clouded by controversy.

Just Dogs

Sell the BREED

Your editor does not profess to be an expert in newspaper and magazine ad layout, however, he has been around long enough to know that when you spend good money for a display ad relative to dogs, many folks miss out on response because they fail to show the BREED name in the ad.

True, the ad can be placed under a particular breed section in a publication, but too often it is not with the result that you have inch after inch of ad space with no mention of the breed. Remember, you may know the breed and some other dog folks who know the kennel name or blood lines may also, but the general public does not.

One recent example was a large display ad placed in a West Coast publication. It told about "Lucky" moving from East to West Coast, listed the owner's name and some other information, but nowhere did it list the breed of dog. Now some folks may know who "Lucky" is, your editor does not and I suspect there are others who don't. That was a lot of advertising dollar down the drain.

A check made of display ads placed in a current edition of a well known dog magazine showed so many without the breed name worked into them that your editor gave up counting.

This all boils down to getting the most out of your ad dollar. A picture might help, but I'll guarantee you that a lot of people still would not know the breed. When you make up your ad, get the BREED name into it.

The Fox River Valley Kennel Club will hold its annual All-Breed Dog Show and Obedience Trial on Saturday, June 2, at Kane County Fairgrounds, N. Randall Road, south of Ill. Rte. 64, St. Charles.

We are in the midst of the many summer shows and the Fox Valley event is one of the larger ones. Judges from nine states will officiate with the Best-In-Show dog picked by Rutledge Gilliland, of Siloam Springs, Ark. Show hours are from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Keeshond Specialty

Members of Keeshond Fanciers of the Central States will be hosts on Sunday, June 3, when the Keeshond Club of America holds its first Midwest National Specialty show. This event will be held in conjunction with the Stone City Kennel Club All-Breed show at the 4-H Fred Francis Field on Francis Rd., New Lenox, Ill.

Judges will be Tom Stevenson, Carmel Valley, Calif., for the regular classes and Rodney Nickerson, Sinclairville, N.Y., handling the Futurity.

An after-show dinner has been planned at Brun's Restaurant, Rte. 30 & Cedar Rd., New Lenox. All Keeshond owners and their friends are invited. Checks for $5.75 per person should be made payable to: Keeshond Fanciers of the Central States, 840 S. Cleveland, Arlington Heights.

Barks & Bays

Like this one — it was relayed by friends, from a veterinarian. It seems that a woman could not understand why her female dog was having pups. She told the vet that her two dogs, a male and a female, were always kept apart during the day!

Area baseball program needs help for survival

Whether or not Big League Baseball, a program chartered by Little League, Inc. for young men 16 through 18, will be launched in the Maine-Northfield area this season is in the hands of about a dozen young players and two managers.

According to Bill McCarty, president of Maine-Northfield Little League, which is ready to provide a Big League program and has 26 players signed up, the operation can't get under way unless there are at least 36 registrants. "And now," McCarty stated, "we've lost two prospective managers."

Maine-Northfield undertook the organization of a Big League last fall after a large group of boys completing Senior League (ages 13 to 15) play petitioned McCarty and the League for an extended program. Last fall, 65 MNLL "Alumni" expressed an interest in continued play, but as the young men took jobs or became involved in other activities, the interest dwindled until the actual enrollment was down to 26.

"The caliber of manager candidate it takes for a league like this is never easy to find," McCarty said, "and when only a handful of boys show up for organizational meetings, it's hard to expect any possible manager to be very enthusiastic."

At this point, MNLL is hoping to reach at least 12 more boys 16 to 18 who earnestly want to play ball on Saturdays and Sundays only through this newspaper's article. They're also looking for two experienced volunteers to manage. If they get them by Sunday night, May 27, the Big League still will come to the community. If not, the program will have to be shelved for this area.

"I'm awfully sorry for the boys who signed up and really want to play," McCarty said. "This was an ideal opportunity for young men not playing in high school or Legion or other programs. There aren't many other places open for them to play now. This is about as close as we've ever come to having a league like this for the boys in this area. We have a place to play, equipment, characters and two sponsors. I don't know whether it will ever get off the ground again if it fails this year."

Interested players or managers should call Bill McCarty before the Sunday night deadline at 299-1286.

The 1973 Junior Sports Jamboree, for all youths between 10 and 15 years old, will be held Sunday, June 2, at Prospect High School, 801 W. Kensington, Mount Prospect. The events will commence at 8:00 a.m.

The annual event is being sponsored by the Mount Prospect Jaycees.

Winners of the Mount Prospect Jamboree will be eligible to compete in the regional and state Jamboree to be held July 26-28 at Lincoln High School in Crystal Lake.

The local Jamboree is open to all boys and girls 10-to-15 years old who will not compete in any other local Jamboree. More than 7,000 entry forms have been given out to Mount Prospect area elementary and high schools. Entry forms are also available at the Northwest Suburban YMCA, 300 Northwest Hwy., Des Plaines.

The completed entry forms are to be mailed to Tim Perko, 9612 N. Greenwood, Des Plaines, Ill. 60016. They should be postmarked no later than May 30.

Registration the day of the Jamboree will begin at 8:00 a.m. at the high school. Boys and girls will be divided into three age groups: 10 and 11 year olds, mid-12s; 12 and 13 year olds, juniors; 14 and 15 year olds, intermediates.

Events for the midjet division are the 50 and 100-yard dash, the long jump, high jump, baseball throw and 440 yard relay. The same events will be held for the junior entries.

In the intermediate division the events are the 50, 100 and 220-yard dash; long jump; high jump; baseball throw; 440-yard relay; and — for intermediate boys only — the 880-yard relay.

Every contestant will receive a certificate of participation at the conclusion of the Jamboree which will end about 2:30 p.m., June 2.

Several hundred Mount Prospect area youths competed in last year's Junior Sports Jamboree.

Coach and star outfielder Bob Campbell takes a rip.

Bruins' year?

Have national reputation — want world's title

by BARRY SIGALE

They tell the story of the 36-year-old guy who had so many trophies he had to put them in a special room in his home.

His prizes pointed up his athletic prowess, his ability to athletically cut it. At his age they had a more poignant meaning. They served as a direct link to the youth he could never regain. In short, it was his one last gasp before the old legs gave out.

But the guy's wife complained. She said her husband spent too much time pursuing dreams, that his efforts were just so much child's play. Why did he have to be out of the house three nights a week, neglecting her and their two young children? she asked. So she filed for divorce.

The guy has so many trophies — but now he doesn't know what to do with them.

Call it what you will — the need to compete and achieve, the search for self-gratification and success, an ego trip or just plain love for the sport. Whatever it is, it will be the guy in his mid-30's and early 40's who is going to excel in the game of 16-inch softball.

And the more he excels, the more the team wins, the longer the season goes. He is away from home more. This summer, when league competition heats up and tournament action begins, softball "widows" will pop out of the woodwork.

For the fervent softballer, an understanding wife is a bonus. If she complains, he says, then she complains. There's nothing much he can do about it. For him, the game must go on.

If there is a problem at home it helps if the player performs for a winner. There's no use risking his life at home for a loser. For a select few, a winner means playing for the very best. In the Northwest suburbs, and, indeed, throughout most of the country, that team is the Bruins.

The Bruins is a 20-man team made up of former high school baseball and basketball stars who typify the spirit and determination of the average "jock."

With no other outlet for their athletic abilities (such as pro baseball or basketball), these super-athletes have unleashed their talents in local competitions and have made a mark for themselves nationwide.

The Bruins have a record of dominance against other teams. They have a 214-21 record in four years, had winning streaks of 44 and 40 games and were 44-1 during their best seasons. Even in their worst year they still were awesome. They finished at 68-12.

The Bruins have won several tournaments in their history, including the Mission Bells Classic in California last year. They will be defending that title this weekend against some of the best teams in the country. The Bruins finished fourth last year in the world championships in St. Louis.

There are several reasons why the Bruins are so good. According to their coach, Bob Campbell, the players are loyal and cooperative, two prime requisites for winning in amateur sports. They are also determined to wear the world championship gold rings. Additionally, they are excellent softball players who have improved with age.

"The best players are between 30 and 40 years old," said 31-year-old shortstop Paul (GOOSE) Duval of Buffalo Grove. "They have the ability, the experience and know the other players and teams. It's like the major leagues. At 21 or 22 you play on rinky-dink teams, like in a farm league, until you develop your ability and are recognized and picked up by better teams."

Duval is playing a lot less this year to devote more time to his family, especially his son who has begun little league play. Because of this, Duval is going to play in only a few games this season.

"It was an extremely difficult decision to play less," said Duval. "This year I'm not even going to get into 15 games. My situation has changed. I'm out for the exercise now. My personal attitude is that I'm retired from playing big-time softball. It's not that I'm worried that someone is threatening my shortstop job."

"I will go watch the Bruins play. Sure there will be a twinge of desire to be out there. But all that is relative to what I've achieved the rest of the year. I have something to give to these (little league) kids."

Though he is unselfishly giving now, the lanky Duval selfishly took while a member of the Bruins.

"Playing was selfish, for self-gratification," the Maine East High School graduate said. "I had so much glory, primarily with the Bruins. There's not much more you can ask from a game. We've gone to California and St. Louis. And we're recognized."

"There is an internal drive, that's why we compete. It's not just softball but the competition. Everybody says they play for fun but I've never played for fun in my life. I always play to win. And it's only other players who understand what it means to play."

"In athletics," he said, "there is never a middle of the road. You experience total peaks of exhilaration whether winning or making a great play. On the other end you can be a bum or get beat. You're at the bottom of the barrel. The great point about this is that you can always come back tomorrow."

Playing with the Bruins, said Duval, is an honor. The name is synonymous with winning, like the UCLA Bruins in college, basketball. Being a Bruin, he said, means being a star among stars.

The Bruins, behind Campbell, who is recognized as one of the sport's few superstars, are trying again to win the elusive world title. They finished behind the perennial champion Bobcats, the runner-up Sobies and "Tumble Inn Lounge" of Champaign in last year's world tourney. Campbell sees this as the Bruins' year.

Listen to Campbell, 33, also of Buffalo Grove, and you'll hear a few Chuck Tannerisms. "We've got the best attitude and better personnel this year than ever before," said Campbell, an outstanding outfielder.

"We're after the prestige of being world champs. We want the gold ring and the five-foot trophy. We've got a lot going for us. We've got the horses to go all the way. We've got a great team on paper."

Games are not won on paper, as everyone knows, so Campbell has done his best to pick and choose players who will fit into a team system. In the four years of the Bruins, Campbell feels he has picked a winner.

"I pick guys who won't choke," he said. "Although I know they can't play perfect all the time. And guys who don't get to play should be enthusiastic about the team. They should be better guys."

Campbell said he looks for an all-round player, one who is good both on offense and defense. But he is primarily interested in a good hitter. Good hitting is how most games are won.

"We've always prided ourselves on our defensive ability," he said. "We haven't had a good hitter with no fielding ability. If we have a weakness it's that we may field better than we hit."

Campbell's philosophy is that the 10 players who are performing the best will play. Because he has many players who are on the bench but could start with just about any team around, he is able to make that claim.

The season began for the Bruins with a practice session on a cold day. The hitters took 10 swings apiece then the fielders were drilled like major leaguers: The outfielders shagged fly balls and the infielders scooped up grounders and worked on the double play.

Campbell characterizes his offensive team as a mixture of spray and power hitters who are able to adjust well under varied game situations. The premise is that power hitters alone are not necessary to winning but that a relentless, shotgun attack is.

"Home runs don't win ball games," said Campbell. "Softball is a science. You hit according to the defense, in the slots, in the holes. You hit deep when the outfielders are playing in and short when the outfielders are playing deep."

In other words, there's more to hitting in softball than just stepping up to the plate with a hunk of lumber, hauling back and powering the ball as far as possible. It means hitting behind the runners, the batter sacrificing himself to move a runner along and exploiting the other team's fielding weaknesses.

Unlike baseball, where pitching dominates, hitting accounts for 50 to 80 percent of the game. But a solid defense and strong pitching go hand in hand with winning.

"The key to defense is to eliminate errors," said Duval. "There's no way to prevent scoring, the defense is out to hold it down."

Duval said shortcenter is the toughest position to play and one of the key spots. The short center fielder plugs the hole between the shortstop and second baseman and must cover second base on double plays and throws from the outfield.

One of the premier pitchers in softball is the Bruins' Don Welker. Welker, 35, of Schaumburg, is a senior computer operator at Continental Bank in Chicago and also plays for the talented bank team. To him, pitching is a science.

With four or five different deliveries, by altering the speed of his pitches and by changing the ball's arc, Welker is able to upset the timing of opposing hitters.

"A pitcher must make the batter hit a bad pitch," he said. "By keeping ahead of him and keeping him off stride I can make the hitter hit my pitch. I try to get the hitters to press."

One of the routes to the world championship is through the Sunday league of the Buffalo Grove Park District. With better than average speed, solid defense, good hitting depth, and a smart team, said Campbell, the Bruins should win this league enroute to the world title.

Another incentive is for the Bruins to carve a niche so big they'd vault right into the new Softball Hall of Fame in Oklahoma City. That and another trophy for the home. If they still have a home.

Don Welker, the pitching machine for the Bruins.

Rich Urbanski, shortstop, is a Bruins' youngster at 21.

Elk Grove High Alabama trip

Help—but little hope—for jazz band

The students and parents challenging an Illinois High School Association (IHSA) rule that prohibits the Elk Grove Jazz Band from going to Alabama got some help, but little encouragement, Monday from the High School Dist. 214 Board.

The board agreed that Elk Grove principal Robert Haskell should ask the IHSA to give the protestors an explanation of the reason for the rule. However, several board members said they personally support the IHSA rule.

The board listened to explanations of the issue from Elk Grove student William Busse and some of the dozen parents of band members accompanying him.

Busse said he has contacted the American Civil Liberties Union and private attorneys about challenging the IHSA rule in court and explained the group wants an explanation of the rule from IHSA officials before they make any final decision on a lawsuit.

THE BOARD ALSO heard explanations from Elk Grove High School staff members that they had not heard from Busse or his group about details of the challenge. In addition, band director Douglas Peterson said he had never intended to take the band to Alabama regardless of the IHSA rule.

Busse told the board that he had been approached by members of the jazz band who were unhappy because the IHSA rule prevented the band from going to a national festival June 6 to 9 in Mobile, Ala., because the students would miss three days of school. The band won the invitation to the festival at a contest in Crown Point, Ind.

In addition, Busse said he and fellow student Jeff Sherman had originally understood that band director Peterson wanted to go to the festival but could not because of the rule. Once they began investigating the rule and the possibility of suing the IHSA to have it changed, he said, Peterson changed his position and said he did not want to go to the festival under any circumstances.

PETERSON TOLD the board he had never intended to take the band to Mobile and said Busse had "misquoted" him. "I said, 'Yes, I would like to go but there are reasons we can't go and one of those is the IHSA ruling,'" Peterson said.

"I try to make decisions for the band that will be in the best interests of the entire band program and of the students of the entire school program," he said.

Busse said his main goal at this point is to get an explanation of the IHSA rule, which says students cannot go to non-IHSA sponsored festivals if they must miss school. Under the rule, Busse said, the jazz band could miss school to go to Mobile if it went alone, but it cannot go because other bands are participating.

A LETTER SENT for the students to the IHSA by Haskell has received no reply, Busse said.

Board members Arthur Aronson and Jack Matthews said they believed the IHSA should have the courtesy to answer the students' request for an explanation. Matthews said, "In this case I, in my mind, would support the IHSA position."

The IHSA, an organization of Illinois high schools that regulates interscholastic competition, is governed by the principals of each school. Any changes in any rules would have to be approved by the principals of each school in the state.

About Ghosts

by Ed Landwehr

With rare exception, TV picture ghosts are caused by the antenna or the set's location. Sometimes if you move your set a short distance, a correction can be made. However, more times it's the antenna's fault and this is particularly true with color TV because color requires a "broader band."

Better antenna equipment is important for superior color reception. Landwehr's Home Appliances, 1000 W. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights, has serviced antennas in this area for black and white and for color and has noted what is necessary for the best results. Your phone call 255-0700 will not start a costly experiment for the type you need. We will know. Chances are there will be efficient antennas near your home that we have installed. Try us. We'll assure your satisfaction.

You don't have to be a big group to have the best in company health insurance.

The North Maine Fire Department in Des Plaines has only 15 people on the payroll. Yet they're covered by Blue Cross-Blue Shield. And your group can be covered, too.

Blue Cross-Blue Shield has programs to fit groups and companies of as few as four people.

Programs that can give you and your employees more complete medical care than you have now. For the same money, or just a little bit more.

If you'd like to talk about it call Jim Erickson, Manager of our Old Orchard District, at 679-3700 and he'll arrange for one of our Blue Cross representatives to call on you. With no obligation.

He'll review your company's present health insurance coverage and show you how it compares with Blue Cross-Blue Shield.

In coverage. And in cost.

Sure, Capt. Bligh, I'll help paddle

by JO ANN VAN WYE

Sure, it's a crazy idea. It doesn't make sense. It has a loony ring to it that causes people to raise their eyebrows and give you a squint out of one eye.

The idea is simple though — take maybe 830 canoes with, yes, 1,700 paddlers and send them shooting hell for leather down the Des Plaines River on a Sunday afternoon.

And if you think the idea is crazy, think again. It's been done 16 times so far, and each time is another reason to celebrate the ingenuity and rock-hard stamina of the pioneers.

The event — the 16th Annual Des Plaines River Canoe Marathon.

The smell of bacon cooking over an open fire from campsites near the registration booth filters the air, as people line up to get an early starting time. Car licenses indicate this is more than just a local event.

THE RACE DRAWS all kinds, old and young, serious and fun seeking, families and singles. Some are donned in jackets plastered with badges from races throughout the country, others have water bottles strapped to their backs with hoses leading to their mouths and many carry special racing paddles. But, a common desire to experience the elements of nature as the pioneers did when the land was young unites all.

Our aluminum canoe looked like a tub as we set it along side the lightweight, streamlined and often homemade canoes on the muddy banks.

We found ourselves looking into a river that has experienced a century of crime against nature. It reeks of pollution. Dip your hand into it and feel the grit of the industrial age. But, it doesn't really matter for the next four hours as you set out south paddling with all the strength you can muster.

As the canoes swept past, our initial impression was confirmed that we were up against some serious paddlers. Few took time to speak and those who did kept it to a terse "Hello."

WE SOON discovered the next four hours were to be ones of experiencing and not conversation. Experiencing the river, the scenes along its banks and most important — your body as every muscle is set in action. Dialog between my husband, Bill, and I was short and simple:

"Keep your paddle straight! Put more back into it!"

"What? I can't hear you up here!"

"Straighten out your paddle!"

"Okay, okay!"

"Listen, I'm not criticizing, just offering some helpful hints."

"Sure, sure . . . I'm doing the best I can. If you'd stop worrying about my paddle and try keeping the canoe straight we'd be a lot better off."

"Fine, next time you're sitting in back. It's not as easy as it looks."

THE SPECTATORS lined the banks, hung out of trees and over bridges content to be on the sidelines but anxious to get caught up in the spirit of the venture. Words of encouragement like "Free Geritol at the finish" and "If she slows down splash her" were offered, along with a can of beer, but there wasn't time to stop.

After three hours of paddling non-stop, the energy just wasn't there to portage Dam No. 1. Spurred on by the spectators anxious to see some paddlers make a fool of themselves, we decided to shoot through. "To the right and then a quick left," the spectators shouted. Heeding their advice we headed for the right bank, only to find ourselves staring into a pile of rocks. It was too late to change course and fear of capsizing and meeting the dirty river face to face prompted to get down low in the canoe. This wasn't the thing to do; the lower center of gravity only served to wedge the canoe between the rocks. As panic spread across my face the crowd seemed delighted. After several desperate body contortions we managed to shift our weight enough to unlodge. A round of applause went up as we headed back downstream.

BILL HAD STARTED out feeding me some line about paddling at one-fourth his capacity. Three hours later he was ready to call it quits. With only two miles to go I was the one urging him on, promising him back rubs, and telling him to forget the muscles that were going to ache tomorrow and worry about the race today.

As we rounded the final bend and saw the finish line our bodies were numb to the aching sensations. We knew we had made it. The people on the banks cheered but we didn't pay much attention knowing they had no idea of what we were experiencing at the moment.

And to take a few words from T. S. Eliot: "It ended not with a bang but a whimper."

A few body contortions were called into action by Paddock Paddler Joann Van Wye to get through Dam No. 1 and head back downstream.

Bill Winter, center, shouts directions as the canoes line up for the 19-mile downstream journey.

Not exactly a clean start.

Which is it going to be as the Paddock Paddlers get situated in the S.S. Herald canoe, courtesy of Nelson Marine, Inc.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The Herald Newspaper does not knowingly accept HELP WANTED ads that indicate a preference based on age from employers covered by the AGE DISCRIMINATION IN EMPLOYMENT ACT. HELP WANTED headings directed specifically toward either men or women are used merely for the convenience of our readers, to let them know which jobs have historically been more attractive to persons of one sex than the other. The placement of an ad under a heading is not in itself an expression of a preference, limitation, specification or discrimination based on sex. For further information contact the Wage and Hour Division Office of U.S. Department of Labor at 4032 N. Milwaukee Ave., Chicago, Illinois. Telephone (312) 736-2909.

Should Watergate oust soap operas?

HOLLYWOOD — Television's live coverage of the Senate Watergate hearings has raised the same questions for the networks that breaking news stories always bring up for broadcasters.

For example, networks — and local stations — hear from viewers who don't want their regular shows interrupted or pre-empted under almost any circumstances.

The Watergate hearings are on at hours that normally feature soap operas and game shows on CBS-TV, ABC-TV and NBC-TV, and, as might be expected, some viewers have already protested the preemptions.

A breaking story like Watergate also brings up other matters for the networks. For instance:

The news departments invariably want as much air time as they can get. They generally feel they almost never get enough video exposure to cover things as fully as they would like.

BUT FINAL decisions about air time allocations at the networks come, as a rule, from corporate figures who juggle various options in their minds in each given situation.

The financial impact of regular daytime programming on the networks is large. Big profits are possible because production costs of series like game shows are small as opposed to prices of prime time programs.

Some years ago, when CBS-TV's daytime soap operas were more of a force than they are now, it was said that the network's daytime program schedule was the most profitable part of its lineup of shows.

So factors like these — as well as judgment of news and the response of viewers — are considered whenever a breaking story comes along.

But then there are other factors as well. And one of them is that, in any case involving a decision about whether to pre-empt a large bloc of programming to carry a sensitive breaking story, networks face the prospect of criticism from those who watch the decision closely.

THERE WERE headlines in 1966 when CBS-TV news boss Fred Friendly resigned over a decision at the network to put on a fifth rerun of "I Love Lucy" rather than Senate hearings on Vietnam.

CBS-TV was embarrassed by these headlines. There was some criticism of the network. And, undoubtedly, there were those who agreed with the management decision. A news judgment case became, it was, a political issue.

There also are network research departments to figure out just who is watching what. And regarding last week's live Watergate hearings coverage, NBC research estimates about 35 million persons watched all or part of it Thursday and about 33 million Friday.

Hollywood Profile

Ed McMahon more than Carson's copy

by VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD — Easy Ed McMahon, the drinking member of the Carson-McMahon team of the "Tonight" show, may look relaxed on the tube but he's a dynamo on his own time. McMahon likely is the most astute businessman in show business, Bob Hope notwithstanding.

In addition to his appearances on television — and recently in motion pictures — the big, bluff McMahon is deeply involved with commercials for a brewery, real estate development, manufacturing and other enterprises.

McMAHON is torn between his burgeoning business activities and his family. He and his wife have been separated for a year and live on different coasts. His four children make their homes in the East.

To complicate matters further, Ed has four homes. His estranged wife lives in the family headquarters in Bronxville, N.Y., a suburb of New York City.

Son Michael, 22, and daughter Claudia, 28, work and live in Avalon, N.J., where the McMahons have a large summer home. Jeff 13, lives at home with his mother, Linda, 18, in school in Boston.

McMAHON's third house is in a development on Florida's west coast called Rotunda West. He is a member of the corporation which bought scores of acres in the area, including the old Vanderbilt estate where housing eventually will provide homes for 80,000 persons.

It also boasts seven golf courses. McMahon's house perches on the shore of a small lake overlooking a fairway.

The home in which he spends most time, however, is a large apartment right on the water of Marina del Rey, a few miles from downtown Los Angeles.

"I'm a Pisces," McMahon said. "I love the water. It's great to get up in the morning and look out over the Pacific, seeing the same sight that greeted Balboa and Magellan."

White sails dot the oceanfront in an ever changing panorama. McMahon doesn't have a boat of his own because there isn't time to take care of it, much less spend his days sailing.

AS IT IS, he arises early to conduct business by telephone in various parts of the country. By noon he is off to Hollywood for a combination lunch-business meeting. After lunch he reports to NBC studios in Burbank where the Carson show is taped.

There is little rehearsal for the ad lib show, except for commercials which McMahon attends to.

McMahon, despite his busy schedule and obvious symbols of success, misses his children. He flies to New York at least once a month to spend a day with one or another of them.

"It's a good way to get to know your kids," he said, "seeing them one at a time. I just wish we had more time to gether."

Reunion planned for '54 Schurz class

Suburban residents who were graduated from Schurz High School, Chicago, in 1954, are invited to help plan a class reunion.

A list of names and addresses of class members is now being compiled, and persons who may be able to add to the list are invited to contact the planning committee.

Members are Betty Buell Kohlman, Arlington Heights, 439-2365; Elaine Lovgren Boggs, Des Plaines, 824-0014, and Jean Schupsky Kropke, Schaumburg, 529-4528.

The Lighter Side...by Dick West

Aw, c'mon, don't buy it --you know it's no good

WASHINGTON — A number of oil, gas and power companies are conducting negative advertising campaigns that urge their customers to use less oil, gas and power.

The trouble with these anti-commercial messages, brought about by current fuel shortages, is that they are presented in a public service format stressing voluntary conservation.

High-minded advertising that appeals to our better nature simply is not effective. The only way to persuade us to buy less of a product is to employ the same sexy, hard sell technique that worked so well in the days when the companies were trying to persuade us to buy more.

HERE ARE A few suggestions for turnabout ads on television:

• The camera zooms in on a distressed oaf sitting on the edge of a bed, head buried in hands.

"I can't believe I used the whole thing," he moans.

"You used it, Ralph," his wife, a tramp in a faded wrapper and hair curlers, reproaches. "You burned up an entire tank of gasoline driving all over town looking for an all night pizzeria."

This message, brought to you by a major oil company, makes the point that wasteful gasoline consumption leads to marital strife.

• A hospital operating room. The camera zooms in on the incision, revealing a brain surgeon in the crucial stage of a difficult lobotomy.

Suddenly the door swings open and a young girl wreathed in smiles, skips up to the operating table. "Look, Daddy," she cries triumphantly. "No goose-bumps!"

The surgeon lays aside his scalpel and lifts his surgical mask, showing a pleased look on his face.

"My family has had 57.6 per cent fewer goose pimples since we turned up the thermostat on our electric air conditioner," he reports happily.

This scene from a power company anti-commercial makes... well, I don't have to tell you the point it is making. You already will be jumping up to set your thermostat higher.

Marilynn Meissner

Her job: to challenge the gifted child

by BILLIE BACHUBER

Her manner as sparkling as her vivid red hair, Marilyn Meissner would brighten up any home or office.

Mrs. Meissner, mother of five children, lives and works in Arlington Heights, where she directs services for North Suburban Area Service Center, which helps to educate gifted (talented) children in some 70 school districts, including those in Kane, Kendall, DuPage, Lake, McHenry and North Cook Counties.

The Service Center, funded by the state, is provided to school districts through the Illinois Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction (OSPI). "Our job is to help school districts to develop good programs for the gifted," said Marilyn. Her office works as a liaison between state and school districts.

MRS. MEISSNER and her staff (an assistant and part-time personnel who reproduce materials) work with other educators to set up programs for talented children in the area. Their main concern is to see that these talents are not wasted, she said.

Marilynn explained that most parents worry about the handicapped child, or the one with problems. But rarely do they worry about the exceptionally talented child. Parents expect the gifted child will succeed without their special attention, an expectation that may prove false, she cautioned.

She cited as example, a bright, clever youngster handicapped by lack of challenge and by lack of exposure to classes and subjects that keep pace with his abilities to learn and to comprehend. The talented child may become bored and react by withdrawing and rebelling against school in particular and the world and society in general, she added.

TO HELP COUNTERACT this loss of talent to society, the Service Center works in several ways. The staff help schools to set up programs for different kinds of talented children. For instance, experts no longer define "giftedness" in academic achievement only. Children who are creative in art, music, drama and those who have mechanical, electronic and physical skills, etc., are encouraged to broaden their individual talents.

In grade school Learning Centers, the director explained, mechanically proficient pupils are encouraged to bring to school old clocks, radios and other devices and to figure out what makes them tick. They also are encouraged to change and redesign the devices.

"In our complex society, we need all kinds of skills," Marilyn reminded. "If we take greater pride in philosophy than in our plumbing, neither ideas nor pipes may hold water," she commented with a laugh.

ACADEMICALLY GIFTED or high IQ youngsters may or may not join the ranks of society's "thinkers." If recognized, these children can be taken into programs designed to jog their minds into higher thought levels. Instead of regurgitating facts, bright kids are taught to interpret ideas, make them different and to use them effectively, Mrs. Meissner explained.

The Service Center will come into the schools to help them design, set up and run the type program teachers think will best benefit their particular students.

Besides helping school districts develop and maintain effective programs, Mrs. Meissner works to secure funds to keep the program going. She also coordinates the center's efforts with other local agencies and works with PTAs, other interested groups and individuals. She gives advice and talks to interested parents, teachers and administrators. (Anyone interested in helping gifted children is encouraged to call the center, telephone 394-4220.)

MRS. MEISSNER'S job encompasses a myriad of services and responsibilities to the community. She trains teachers, conducts workshops and teaches college courses. She plans and directs a summer institute, for example, which offers teachers a $50 weekly fellowship. (This summer's sessions are already filled, she noted.) Marilyn also chooses books and materials for the center's circulating library, and no stranger to hard work, she also keeps busy away from the job.

First, she's raising a family. There are grown sons, Craig, Kerry and Jeffrey. Youngest son Chris, 14, attends Thomas Junior High and is very "sports-minded." Only daughter Laurie, 16, loves animals and is "an avid horseback rider," according to her mother.

Having a sizable family hasn't prevented Marilyn from finishing her education, interrupted when she married Joseph Meissner, who's in sales work.

A CO-ED AT Northwestern University for a year and a half, Marilyn dropped out, married and started a family. However, she continued her studies via TV instruction, and when the youngest came along, she returned to the classroom at Wright Junior College, eventually earning a bachelor's in education at Northwestern in Chicago. She taught primary grades on Chicago's West side for a year and a half.

When the Meissners moved to Arlington Heights, Marilyn took a position with Elk Grove Village's District 59. She taught 5th grade for a year, then moved on to become director of the district's Learning Center and Demonstration teacher for the gifted.

Mrs. Meissner's next job was project director for the Elk Grove Service and Demonstration Center. Following that job, she accepted her present position as director of North Suburban Area Service Center in 1971.

THAT SAME YEAR, Mrs. Meissner earned a master's degree in English from Northwestern and in 1973, a general supervisory certificate from National College of Education in Evanston.

Outside home and job, Marilyn is "fascinated" with politics, favors the Equal Rights Amendment and admires Rep. Eugenia Chapman for her stand on women's rights. And though she has little time, she loves to sew and to ski, her favorite recreation.

"If you really enjoy what you are doing, you are willing to put in time and effort. I love every part of my life!" declares the attractive educator, who someday would like to be a school principal.

EXAMPLE OF THE WOMAN who successfully continued her education while rearing a family, Mrs. Marilyn Meissner now directs the North Suburban Area Service Center, an agency which helps school districts in six counties set up special programs for gifted children. Mrs. Meissner has five children, three grown and the other two teen-agers.

Speaking of . . .

A college education

by KAY MARSH

What's up?

Just about everything these days — including the cost of a college education. And if you have a son or daughter graduating from high school about now, you may well be wondering if college is worth the effort and expense.

Whether education is increasingly higher in cost or inflation affects the campus, too. Room, board and tuition at a prestige private school can run you more than $1,000 a year. On the other hand, community college courses are available at a fraction of the cost or even, in some instances, free.

But if college costs more, there are also more openings. The end of military draft calls removes one incentive for young men to stay in school. Moreover, enrollments in general are down, and they will probably go lower as the number of teenagers in the population peaks. (The birth rate began declining after 1955.) The reduced pressure for college enrollments in general has produced much more of a buyer's market for a college education. Recent experiments in external degree programs and granting college credit for experience also tend to cut the amount of time a student spends in college (as well as the costs).

EVEN MORE important, however, is the attitude of young people now or recently in college. Do they consider higher education worth the effort?

The research office of the American Council on Education interviewed 185,848 entering college freshmen in 1967. It had follow-up interviews with 64,510 of them four years later.

Results show that most — a hefty 69.8 per cent, in fact — said that they would agree with the statement, "Much of what is taught at college is irrelevant to what is going on in the outside world."

Despite this disenchantment, 48.7 per cent planned to go on for an advanced degree. Not all of them had as yet received any kind of degree four years after entering college. However, many planned to continue working toward a degree either full or part-time, and only 9 per cent said they had no plans to obtain a college degree some time in the future.

FINANCIALLY SPEAKING, prospects look brighter for this year's college graduating class.

A recent report from the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education said that job prospects are "better than at any time in the last four years." The commission found that engineering is the field experiencing the "sharpest increase" in the number of job offers. However, the job market for teachers worsened again this year, as it has every year since about 1969.

Similar findings were reported in a College Placement Council survey of the hiring plans of 672 employers across the nation, which also predicted brighter job prospects for this year's college graduates. Employers surveyed expected to hire 62,290 new graduates, a 16 per cent increase from last year's level. Again, the biggest gains were expected in engineering.

By degree level, employers were looking to hire 15 per cent more bachelor's candidates, 22 per cent more master's candidates and 20 per cent more Ph.D.'s.

In summary, then, there are more openings in colleges now and higher costs in store, but also more job openings for graduates. The choice, as always, is up to your graduate as to whether or not success for him or her will be a matter of degrees.

POSTSCRIPT. An unusual approach to the higher costs of higher education is that taken by Antioch College in Ohio. Antioch guarantees freshmen entering in 1973-74 that their tuition won't change while they are in school. Figuring that its tuition should rise 6 per cent a year, Antioch assumes a total cost of about $18,000 over its five-year program. It averages that out for a tuition of $3,600

Student fashions on runway

What could a camel wool evening gown have in common with a sweat shirt? They'll both be part of a creative fashion show Friday by students of Harper College's fashion design program.

In the show which climaxes the 1972-73 year for the 46 freshmen and 25 sophomores, students will model fashions they have designed and constructed all themselves. The 125 original garments to reach the runway were chosen by a jury of fashion world professionals as best of all pieces created during the school year.

Open to the public free of admission, "Fashion Show 1973" will begin at 8 p.m. in the college center.

Show pieces will include bikinis, day dresses, hats, wedding gowns, and a bicycling costume as well as pants in culottes, harem and many other versions.

SEVERAL competitions are open each year to students in the two-year career program.

Several scholarships have already been awarded to freshmen by the Mount Prospect Business and Professional Women's Club. Other awards being given out Friday evening will be presented by Fabric World, Maryanne Fabrics, the Barrington Women's Club and the Oscar Aronson fabric firm.

A special memorial award will be presented to the best seamstress. The award is given annually in memory of Rose Granger, grandmother of sophomore student Laurie Gorguls of Mount Prospect.

In addition to the main show at Harper, four shows will be given in the center mall at Woodfield Shopping Center next Wednesday and Thursday. Show times are 2 and 7:30 p.m. each day.

CATHY NEKOLA, a sophomore from Park Ridge and president of the fashion club at Harper College, won the top award in the Crompton Richmond contest. Her ensemble was chosen first from among those designed for material donated by the fabric firm.

Defective hearing No. 1 handicap

An estimated 19 million persons in the United States, including about 3.5 million school-age children, have substantial hearing defects, at least half of which could be helped by a hearing aid, according to James P. Ince, executive secretary of the Hearing Aid Industry Conference.

"More than 90 per cent of all disabling hearing losses can be significantly improved by medicine, surgery or amplification, but the sad part about it is that only about 2.5 million persons today wear hearing aids," Ince said.

He said defective hearing is America's No. 1 handicapping impairment. It affects more people than arthritis, poor vision, heart disease or any other impairment. A nationwide effort is now under way to reach people with hearing loss and who, for reasons of procrastination, unawareness, despair, vanity, expense, inconvenience or simply not knowing what to do, have not sought proper attention to reduce or correct their disability.

HEARING LOSSES can be caused by any number of factors, ranging from an accumulation of wax, blockages in the auditory passages or infection, to such causes as birth defects, illnesses with high fever, exposure to harsh loud sounds, or drugs such as quinine and some antibiotics.

Natural deterioration due to the aging process is the main cause of hearing loss. Some of these causes result in conductive losses and can be treated medically or surgically. The others cause nerve losses and usually can be helped by hearing aids, Ince said.

A Honeymoon in Hawaii for the Daniel S. Nogas

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel S. Noga spent two weeks in Hawaii following their wedding April 28 in St. James Catholic Church, Arlington Heights. Now, they are residing in Des Plaines in a trailer park at 400 W. Touhy.

The new Mrs. Noga is the former Christine M. Bednarz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Bednarz, Arlington Heights, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley A. Noga, Chicago. A '59 graduate of Gordon Tech, Dan is with Acme-Wiley Corp., Elk Grove Village. Christine is a '63 graduate of Arlington High School.

The wedding took place at 5:30 and was both candlelight and double ring. Christine chose a white organza and peau d'ange lace gown fashioned with scoop neckline and full lace sleeves. An A-line skirt fell from the Empire waist and sheer organza edged in lace formed her chapel train. A lace-covered pillbox held her chapel veil, and she carried white roses.

MATRON OF HONOR was Marsha Busse, Elk Grove Village, who wore a full-skirted lime green and white flowered voile gown with mandarin collar, ottoman cuffs and sash accented in white ottoman. She carried a white lace fan with spider mums tinted in lime.

The groom's sister, Theresa Brzozowski, Mount Prospect, the bride's sister, Carol J. Bednarz, Arlington Heights, and the bride's sister-in-law, Anita M. Bednarz, Des Plaines, were bridesmaids. Their gowns, fashioned identically to the matron of honor's gown, were in robins egg blue and their fans were trimmed in robins egg blue flowers.

Junior bridesmaid was 9-year-old Alane N. Norkus of Burbank, Ill., cousin of the bride, and junior usher was the groom's nephew, 8-year-old Jeffrey Brzozowski, Mount Prospect.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel S. Noga

Best man was Bernard Brzozowski, Mount Prospect, brother-in-law of the groom, and ushers were Thomas Noble and Glenn Busse, Elk Grove Village, and the bride's brother, Walter J. Bednarz Jr., Des Plaines.

A reception for 175 guests was held in the Arlington Heights VFW Post.

Hungering for a different bread taste at dinner time? Then you might be induced to try Meril Yu's banana bread. It's a recipe that has come down from her great-grandmother. I've got a hunch great-grandma might be a bit startled by Meril's innovative idea for shaping them.

She did her baking in 12-ounce beer and soda cans, filled half-full, then placed on a cookie sheet in a preheated oven at 350 degrees. She creams one half cup of margarine with one scant cup of sugar, adds two eggs and mixes thoroughly. Then she adds three or four mashed (really ripe) bananas and mixes again.

She adds one teaspoon of soda, one teaspoon of salt and two cups of presifted flour. Lastly, one teaspoon of vanilla and one cup of chopped nuts. Meril greases the bottom of the cans and bakes the bread until it is firm and a crack has formed on top. Done, the bottom of the can is removed by a can opener and the loaf pushed out.

Dear Dorothy: We have a light fixture made of clear plastic and it looks like crystal. To my dismay, however, it's turning yellow. What can I do to make it clear again?—Mrs. P.D.N.

Sad to report, there's nothing you can do. Most plastics yellow after a length of time and there is simply no way to make them clear again. There's hope for the future, though. I understand that acrylic plastic articles won't yellow.

As this column's "faithful" know, we experiment constantly. One of the recent projects has been in the cleaning of the stainless steel panel in the back of the stove. The dirt has been coming off fine, but no matter what was used, the steel face would look streaky. Tried one new thing this past week — window-washing spray. I was astounded by the difference. The panel looks perfect.

Free champagne for couples wed 50 years in June

Couples celebrating golden wedding anniversaries in June should dig out their marriage certificate. Even a certified copy will do.

The 66 Foremost Liquor Stores in Illinois are awarding six-bottle gift cartons of champagne to Illinois couples observing their 50th anniversaries in June and who live within 100 miles of any Foremost outlet.

To receive the Foremost golden wedding champagne, celebrants will need their original marriage certificate, or a certified copy, and a completed application form which can be obtained at any Foremost store. Arrangements will be made to have photographs taken of golden wedding couples accepting their champagne.

So that the lucky "newlyweds" may share their gifts with family and friends, Foremost will make available a gold punch bowl and glass cups at no charge to each golden wedding couple who reserves the glassware at least one week in advance.

This marks the fourth consecutive year that Foremost has played Cupid by sponsoring its golden wedding program.

Hooray! Finally & at last, a new trend in haircutting has arrived that makes sense.

Perhaps "arrived" isn't exactly the word because some of us have been using this new technique for some time. It has become so popular that it is sweeping the country (and Europe) like the wind.

The cut is casual but exact. There are variations of this technique but they all center about a haircut that permits the hair to fall into place naturally & a set that enhances this natural look.

The whole idea, of course, is easy maintenance. But the cut must be done properly; it must be geometrically exact.

This gives the hair a kind of casual exactness, as if the lady couldn't care less about her "crowning glory" at the same time that she shows she's perfectly coiffed.

New styling technique
The hair, as always, is shampooed before cutting & then towel-dried. After the hair is cut, it is thoroughly blow-dried with a hand-held blower. Clips, rollers, setting lotions & the long sessions under the dryer are out. In all cases, a conditioner should be used to give body, bounce and sheen to the hair.

Lamp Cutting
Another new method of haircutting is lamp cutting. The hair is shampooed, conditioned & towel dried. The patron is then placed under an infra-red lamp & while the hair is drying, the hairdresser cuts the hair.

The benefit of this type of cut is that the hair is cut to the direction it will fall naturally & requires no further setting.

WHEELING-BUFFALO GROVE NURSES CLUB

Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Nurses Club meets tonight at 7:30 in Jack London Junior High School Library. The program, "So What Else Is New," will be on nursing curriculum, and anyone interested in entering the profession is invited.

Speaker will be Mrs. Jean Lytle, associate director of nursing service at Holy Family Hospital, who previously was an instructor at Harper College. Mrs. Lytle is a graduate of Columbia School of Nursing in Milwaukee, has a bachelor's degree from Marquette University and a master's from Northern Illinois University.

GAMMA PHI BETA

A "Purely for Fun" meeting is in store for Gamma Phi Beta alumnae tonight. Mrs. Oakley Dowling, 72 Walpole Rd., Elk Grove Village, will be hostess for an installation of officers and an evening of bridge.

Plans will also be discussed for a couples' golf outing and a couples' bridge party.

Co-hostess for the 8 p.m. party is Mrs. Ronald Hacker of Bensenville and Mrs. W. Krueger of Dundee.

During the past year the alumnae have had a busy schedule. There were used book sales, a yoga demonstration, bridge benefit for Kirk Center for the handicapped, an operaglogue, Founders' Day banquet, white elephant sale, work night for materials going to the Gamma Phi Beta children's camp, a demonstration of quilting and a talk by the principal at Kirk Center.

Gamma Phis in the area are welcome to join the group. Mrs. Al Morey, 439-1617 is president.

ARLINGTON NURSES CLUB

Dr. Marshall D. Golden, specialist in cardiac surgery at St. Luke's-Presbyterian Hospital, Chicago, will be the guest speaker for Thursday evening's meeting of Arlington Heights Nurses Club. His topic is "The Coronary By-pass Procedure and Intensive Care of the Post-operative Patient."

The meeting begins at 8 in Northwest Community Hospital Auditorium. Members of the Mount Prospect and Rolling Meadows Nurses Clubs have been invited to attend this program. Any other nurses in Arlington who are interested in the club may call Mrs. Bernard Tresnowski, 255-8974, for details.

Hostesses for May are Mrs. Karl Olson, chairman; Mrs. Clifford Bowes, Mrs. J. A. Keith Comly, Mrs. Arnold Crayn, Mrs. Charles Moehling, Mrs. Lloyd Moody and Mrs. John Thomas.

AMVETS AUXILIARY

New officers of the AMVETS Auxiliary Post 255 have been elected and will be installed at a formal ceremony June 2 in the American Legion Hall in Prairie View. Post 255 is situated in Buffalo Grove.

Mrs. Robert Slove is the new president; Mrs. Thomas Fitzgerald, senior vice president; Mrs. Norbert Schmaus, junior vice president; Mrs. Peter Glanekakis, treasurer, and Mrs. Gary Rosen-trater, secretary.

May GOP coffees are informative

Six get acquainted coffees planned to inform women of the purposes, objectives and goals of the Wheeling Township Republican Woman's Club are being held this month in the homes of members.

Mrs. Teddy Stotts, 657 Merle Lane, Wheeling, is hosting a coffee at 10 this morning and Mrs. Jack Gowan, 824 S. Prindle, Arlington Heights, is hosting one at 8 this evening.

Thursday Mrs. Thomas Hanion, 1505 E. Hawthorne, will host a 1:15 p.m. coffee and Friday evening at 8 Mrs. "Skip" Hedlund, 125 Berkshire Drive, Wheeling, will open her home for a coffee.

Next week Mrs. Rodney Confer, 2738 N. Kennicott, Arlington Heights will host a 1 p.m. coffee and Wednesday Mrs. Earl Schmidt, 724 S. Chestnut, Arlington Heights, will also host a 1 p.m. coffee.

All interested women are invited.

VFW Auxiliary named in award

Elk Grove Village Post 9284, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and its Ladies Auxiliary received a Veterans Administration Voluntary Service Award last Thursday.

The certificate states that the award was made "in recognition of voluntary service to veterans, for providing funds and for active participation in therapeutic recreational programs for all patients."

The post and auxiliary has spent over $1100 this past year for the programs, outings and purchase of various items for Hines Veterans Hospital. Most of the money for the philanthropy came from 1972 Poppy Day sales.

For the past nine years the Elk Grove men and women have provided these hospital and volunteer service programs for veterans.

Girl's State winner named

Each year a girl is selected from one of the high schools in Palatine to attend Girl's State through the American Legion Auxiliary.

She is given expense money for the program which is held at MacMurray College in Jacksonville, Ill. A tour of the capitol at nearby Springfield is included in the program.

This year, as a result of balloting by the juniors and faculty at Palatine High School, the delegate chosen for Girl's State is Micki Alexander, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Alexander, 1108 E. Plate Dr., Palatine.

Micki is a member of the National Honor Society and a cheerleader. She was a member of Student Council for a year and class president for a year.

Alternate chosen was Kathleen Barry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold P. Barry, Palatine.

Tarragon club dance

Casual dress will be the uniform of the evening Friday, June 1, when the Tarragon Club holds its June dance at Nielsen's Restaurant, Elmwood Park. The Wayfarers will furnish the music beginning at 9 p.m.

Once marrieds wishing further information about the dance may call Sharon Wesoloski of Elk Grove at 439-8101.

Help dad cope with the kids

Remember father in June. Not only for Father's Day, but for a Harper College workshop on "Parents and Children . . . What Happens When They Get Together."

The workshop is a second installment of another held last week for only mothers and children — and what happens when they get together. Sixty women participated. Its success suggested the need for one that would also involve fathers.

The workshop will be on Thursday, June 7, from 7:30 to 10 p.m. in room A242 on the Harper campus. The fee is $5 per person or $7.50 per couple. Babysitting will not be provided.

Dr. Richard Harris, a psychologist in private practice in Schaumburg, will be guest leader. He has seven years experience as a school psychologist in Niles and Glen Ellyn and recently conducted a seminar dealing with parent-child relationships for District 211.

IN APRIL HE conducted a series of seminars for parents whose children are experiencing behavioral and academic difficulties.

Focus of the workshop will be the practical, everyday, frustrating, yet normal experiences that parents and children share. It will aim at helping parents gain a better understanding of the origins of certain types of child behavior, such as "laziness," and "underachievement."

Registrations for the workshop may be made by calling the Continuing Education office, 359-4200, extension 233.

Here's how to announce an engagement in Herald

Paddock Suburban Living department is often called by those seeking information on submitting announcements for publication. We print the following for the reader's information and help.

The announcement of an engagement is always made by the parents of the engaged girl, who may either fill out an engagement form at our office or submit their own information along with a wallet sized picture of the bride-to-be.

If a wallet sized photograph is not available, a larger one can be used.

Bring or mail picture and copy to the Herald office in Arlington Heights or mail to Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill., 60006.

Parents not using one of our forms may either write or type the information. If the announcement is submitted in hand-writing we ask that all names be printed to avoid errors. We also request that a phone number accompany the signature at the bottom of the announcement.

A glossy picture is preferable although a dull finish is acceptable. Color photos are used at the discretion of the editors depending on contrast and depth of color.

There is no charge for engagement pictures and announcements. Usually they will be printed within a week after reaching our office.

All announcements must be in our office at least a month before the wedding date.

Pastoral program enrolls woman

For the first time there will be a woman member in the clinical pastoral educational program at Lutheran General Hospital. Six ordained clergymen and a Roman Catholic sister make up the 15th class, which will begin its year of training on June 18.

The woman is Sister Catherine Gibbons, of Milwaukee, member of the Order of the Blessed Virgin Mary. Others in the program are two Roman Catholic priests, the Rev. Frank J. Bonniko and the Rev. Salvatore Pignato; three Lutheran ministers, the Rev. Carl R. Mallin, the Rev. Henry A. Sickinger and the Rev. Zane Torguud; and a Baptist minister, the Rev. Thomas Reiff.

The residents will spend the year at the hospital working under supervision as chaplains, attending classes and participating in various educational activities. To date more than 100 clergy have participated in the year program.

Hospital offers pre-natal class

Parents-to-be may now register for Alexian Brothers Medical Center's six-week pre-natal course beginning Monday, June 4. Provided as a service to the community, the classes are offered to expectant parents whether or not they are planning to have their babies at Alexian Brothers.

Based on the Red Cross program of pre-natal instruction, the course is divided into six segments covering conception through the first several months of life. Information concerns pre-natal care for the mother, food for the pregnant and nursing mother, clothing needs of the newborn and techniques for bathing the baby. A film of the birth process is also shown.

Conducted by a member of the maternity department nursing staff, the classes will meet at the medical center at 7:00 p.m. on six consecutive Monday evenings. Interested couples may register by calling 437-5300, ext. 594.

Land of the Kiwis

...New Zealand offers new frontier for Americans

QUEENSTOWN, New Zealand — There's no smog, no traffic jams, no unemployment and practically no problems. Smalltown New Zealand is pretty much like the United States was 50 years ago, and maybe that's why so many thousands of Americans are immigrating here annually.

Parker Mudge is one of them. A product of Lynn, Mass., a veteran test pilot and commercial pilot, he came to New Zealand in 1963 and he's happy here. He says he has no homesickness at all and plans to live the rest of his life here.

Stories by

Last year, 11,000 Americans were admitted to New Zealand. Chances are about a half of them will eventually quit and return home, but the other half will stay. For them, it is a chance to live a near-pioneer style life, something that can no longer be done in the United States.

"Many Americans can't make it here," Mudge says. "It's a different life. The major problem for most of them is that they don't realize, when they come, that this is a foreign country, and it is."

"DESPITE THE similarity in language, there are major differences in food and customs. There's no central heating in most homes — my wife had chilblains our first winter here."

Mudge flies now for Mount Cook Airlines, a small domestic New Zealand carrier. His wife is the secretary to an accountant. Their daughter, five years old when they arrived, is now thinking about college. Mudge has offered her her choice of where she wants to go — New Zealand or the United States — and she thinks she'll stay here.

To accommodate the increase in immigrants, as well as tourists, Air New Zealand has added direct DC-10 service, via Hawaii or Tahiti, from Los Angeles to Auckland. And the inbound planes are generally jammed.

But the New Zealand government's immigration policy is changing. While it is still ostensibly free and open, in practice every case is judged individually. They will gladly admit any would-be immigrant whose trade is needed but will bar people in already overcrowded trades. MUDGE SAYS he came to New Zealand not because of any dissatisfaction with life in the United States, "but because I wanted a life of pioneering."

He's still a U.S. citizen and isn't about to give that up. He came out with a stake of $2,000 and a vow to stay two years at least. He says he had to dip deeply into that stake at first, "but by the end of the first year I'd paid myself back."

Carolyn Oliver is another American — she's from Lewiston, Idaho — who is now a Queenstown resident. She's the barmaid at a local hotel. She's happy here, too, although she says she'd "give anything to have a real hot dog."

"I was surprised, at first," she says, "at how much resentment there was here against the U.S. But I found it is not only against Americans, but Australians, too — it's against tourists, really. Most tourists are so loud and boisterous."

"One lady said to me, 'You know, you're not at all what I expected an American to be.'"

MUDGE SAYS he's detected no anti-American feeling, however. He says that Americans are welcomed here — providing they aren't out for a job a Kiwi (New Zealander) could handle.

He has one message for any American who comes to New Zealand, either as immigrant or tourist:

"Tell the Americans who come here not to tip. They're ruining it for New Zealanders."

... Under the surface, Maori unrest is simmering

THE MAORIS ARE best known for moving increasingly into urbanized their traditional dances, but they are life.

ROTORUA, New Zealand — This city of nearly 40,000 on New Zealand's North Island is the center of the Maoris, the New Zealand natives. And it is, thus, the center of something brand new — Maori militancy.

Heretofore, New Zealand could brag, with justice, that it had less problems with natives than any other former colonial nation. On the surface, that still seems true. There is no overt prejudice.

The Maoris (the word rhymes with "flowery") seem to have been assimilated perfectly into industrialized New Zealand life. You see them on the streets, working in shops and hotels. There are Maori doctors and lawyers, two Maoris were members of the present cabinet, Maoris are stewards and stewardests on almost every Air New Zealand flight.

But probe a little and you'll find a growing dissatisfaction, particularly among the younger Maoris. They admit this dates almost precisely from when the American blacks began their "black power" struggle and it has crossed the Pacific Ocean.

THE MAORIS seem, however, to be looking for issues. There is no discrimination, apparently, and they admit it. Inter-marriage is common and accepted by all. Maoris can go anywhere they want, compete on equal terms for jobs, belong to clubs, eat at any restaurant.

The issues, such as they are, are over language and name-calling. The Maori language had all but disappeared — it was an endangered language. The militants now are agitating for compulsory teaching of the Maori language in elementary schools.

"Our big problem is language," says Mere Waretini, a beautiful Maori girl who serves as a guide through the Maori village here. "We want it taught in schools, but some pakehas (whites) oppose us."

She admits there is no discrimination in New Zealand. She has four sisters — and all married pakehas.

LOUISE PAKA, who doesn't use her real Maori given name, which is Rangitamae (The Sleeping Sky), is a college graduate and a secretary. She says she has never experienced any discrimination but she is at the forefront of the young militant movement.

"The Maoris are not an ambitious people," she says. "We live for today. Because of that, the pakehas call us lazy and shiftless."

There is a New Zealand equivalent of the derogatory American term "nigger."

Prejudiced New Zealanders call the Maoris "hori." Actually, that's the Maori name for George.

Miss Paka says the big issue, as far as she is concerned, is the name-calling — use of "hori," "lazy," or "shiftless" to describe Maoris.

The problem does go deeper, however, and Maori leaders recognize that it is really economic. Jobs are getting scarce; unemployment, though comparatively low, is at its highest point in years. The Maoris contend that if a pakeha and a Maori are out for the same job, odds are the pakeha will get it.

THIS PROBLEM is being compounded by the influx of natives from islands in the South Pacific — Cook, Niue and Tokelau — which are New Zealand territory. They are New Zealand citizens and can enter freely. They are entering by the hundreds, competing for jobs and thereby increasing tensions. The New Zealanders call them "coconuts," and there is what amounts to a ghetto in Auckland where they congregate.

For many decades, the Maoris have seemed to be the ideally assimilated native group. But that is changing — and New Zealand blames American race tensions for spoiling their paradise.

... Land of 'double' promises an unrushed atmosphere

AUCKLAND, New Zealand — If you're thinking of going to New Zealand, there are two words you better learn in a hurry.

One is "haere-maui." The other is "double."

The first is the old Maori word for "welcome," and nobody says it, but it's printed everywhere. The other is the old English word for an extra large shot of whiskey and you'd be well advised to order a double on all occasions, because the ordinary single shot is measured out by a teaspoon. Or so it seems.

This is a country where people move slowly but steadily. Even the cities seem unhurried.

Other than that, New Zealand is a hospitable country. It has a lot to offer and American tourists are discovering that in increasing numbers. At the moment, nearly half of New Zealand's tourist visitors — somewhere around 189,000 last year — come from Australia. They pop over mostly because it's convenient and inexpensive.

Of the other half, more than 50 per cent now come from North America, and that percentage is increasing with a rush. What U.S. and Canadian visitors apparently like is that New Zealand is still relatively unspoiled — but there is no language barrier.

THIS IS a country where people move slowly but steadily. Even the cities seem unhurried. And there are still millions of acres of beautiful countryside where not a human soul lives. Pioneering exists today in New Zealand.

Even old settlers are pioneers. Outside of Queenstown, on the South Island, you can tour a working sheep ranch — Cecil Peak Station — that has 34,000 acres and 8,000 sheep. The guide is a pleasant, joke-cracking old man, and he turns out to be Frederick J. (Popeye) Lucas, who owns the place. He serves tea and cakes and shows you how a sheep ranch runs.

Sheep are big in New Zealand. Drive anywhere and you see them grazing on the hillsides. Go to Rotorua, on the North Island, and you can visit the Agrodome, where they have performing sheep. They don't actually perform, but they do march on stage and stand there while a man gives a demonstration in sheep-shearing. When they brag about performing sheep, they're just pulling the wool over your eyes.

BUT, AS IT IS with oranges in California, it's hard to find good roast lamb on New Zealand menus. Most lamb and mutton is frozen and shipped to Great Britain.

The Kiwis, as they call themselves, eat well, however. Food prices are low, compared to today's U.S. prices. They complain about low salaries, and that's probably true, but theirs is a semisocialist state and they get many services free from the government.

They are, like most people, proud of their homeland. The big joke here is that

The Kiwis eat well. Food prices are low, compared to today's U.S. prices.

Australia is "the out-land." And there is tremendous, light-hearted competition between the two islands, North and South, which make up New Zealand.

"You know how South Island got its name," a South Islander says. "It's an acronym, and the letters stand for Superb Outstanding Unique Tourist Haven."

THERE'S SOME truth to the boast, too. South Island is incredibly beautiful. On the southwest coast, there are a series of fiords which rival Norway's, notably a 12-mile gash called Milford Sound, lined with mountains and waterfalls.

Then there's 12,349-foot tall Mount

"New Zealand is five to seven years behind the United States. By 1980 we'll catch up."

Cook, a majestic peak, and you can take a small sightseeing plane and land on a nearby glacier.

Mostly, though, what appeals to North Americans about New Zealand is the uncluttered, unrushed atmosphere. There are no freeways — they don't need them yet. But they worry that eventually they'll catch up to the rest of the world.

"New Zealand," says an American now living here, "is five to seven years behind the United States. By 1980, we'll catch up and then we'll have your problems — drugs, crime and traffic."

At the moment, though, things are beautiful. There isn't even any smog. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

The pastoral bliss of the New Zealand countryside is one of the country's main lures for potential immigrants.

Bride's Guide

A weekly series for the bride-to-be.

Color TV: a wanted item on wedding present lists

Looking for a special wedding present for that favorite young couple on your gift list?

Then, by all means, go electronic . . . with the gift of a color TV.

The color set is high on the list of "most wanted" items for the new home. It is also a product with a cost that has dropped drastically over the past 20 years or so while its value has soared. New developments such as brighter screens, remote control, solid state components, integrated circuits, transistorization, simplified tuning and others have contributed in making the modern color set even more attractive.

To help make your gift selection of a color TV easier, here are some guidelines:

First — do your shopping in a store that displays brand name merchandise with a reputation for quality and value.

Next — determine where the set will be located. In a spacious home, average size house or small apartment? Is space for the TV plentiful or limited? Is the set primarily for large, average, or small group viewing? Will it be a stay-put? Will the set see service in more than one room in the house?

With answers to these questions firmly in mind, then match your requirements to what is available in the dealer store.

Sets range from portables and table models to a wide array of furniture-styled lo-bays, credenzas, full-door consoles, plus 3-way combinations.

Among important improvements to look for as set features are:

AFC (automatic fine-tuning) is a desirable control for viewer use. It locks in the TV channel and keeps it from drifting.

ATG (automatic tint guard) regulates flesh tones to overcome variations in TV station transmissions.

Remote control. This lets you switch from one favorite program to others around the dial without moving from your chair.

With TV the most looked-at item in the home, cabinet design is also important. Portables and table models are generally smartly modern. In consoles and combinations, all the most popular furniture styles are represented.

With the basic requirements of the new home in mind, compare screen sizes, quality of picture and sound, features, and cabinet styles. Then, with value and quality as guides, make your final single selection from the color TV receivers you have seen demonstrated.

TV, stereo, tape units accommodate lifestyles

Even though today's newlyweds are truly individual in lifestyle and dress, practically all of them share a love for sights and sounds that are electronic.

That's why color television . . . the stereo record changer . . . and the tape player or player/recorder . . . are high on the list of desired wedding gifts that will help the modern bride and groom furnish their first home together.

In choosing a gift for newlyweds — whether it is for individual, office or any other group giving — space limitations for the young couple's apartment or house should certainly be considered.

For example, in color television, the choices range from an array of compact portables and smartly designed table models to larger instruments such as the lo-bays, full-to-the-floor consoles, and all-in-one console combinations.

One of the features to look for in this year's color TV's is: the super bright color picture tube (the new super Chromacolor tube from Zenith, for instance, comes in a trio of different screen sizes — 16", 19", and 25-inch diagonal). Other features are automatic one-button color control; easy channel selection; an increased use of solid state circuitry, plus plug-in modules and components.

The convenience of remote control is important to many viewers. For example: a one-button hand unit in the Space Command 100 system turns the set on and off and changes VHF channels. Its cousin, the three-button 500 system, adds a volume adjustment — to two different levels, and also mutes sound. The 600-X, a many-function control, turns the TV on and off, changes VHF and UHF channels, adjusts volume to three levels, and completely mutes sound while the picture stays.

This year, furniture styling has moved into table models, with Mediterranean added to modern designs. Among consoles, innovative styling such as the campaign chest and also white TV's on a curving pedestal base are appearing . . . and proving popular. For mixing or matching purposes, the three "constants" — Modern, Mediterranean and Early American furniture styles — are still favorites on the home scene.

If you're planning a stereo purchase as a gift, be sure also to match the unit to the space available for it. This will help you decide between a modular or console system.

Modulars have three basic pieces — the main unit (an amplifier, record changer, radio, tape, or a combination of all three functions) and two remote speaker units. They are flexible in decorating, fitting into large rooms as well as small apartments. Some users utilize them outdoors on the patio wherever the climate is kind.

Console stereo makes a contribution as a major furniture piece in the home.

There's a wide-ranging choice available in cabinet styles, performance features and add-on-inter-if-you-like options.

Basically, what you are looking for in stereo is an instrument that will reproduce the full range of sounds pleasingly — through quiet passages and full orchestral effects. Audio engineers call this dynamic range. Your ear will clearly recognize it as you gift shop the music and television store.

Whether that young couple you are gifting will be living in a one-room apartment or an estate-type house, you'll be able to find an electronic instrument that is sized for the particular setting you have in mind and specifically designed to add at once to the function and decor of the complete room arrangement.

Diamond facts

The standard measure for diamonds is the carat weight. A carat is divided into 100 points. Most engagement diamonds are about 50 points or 1/2 carat. When giving the carat weight of an engagement ring, the jeweler should give the exact weight of the center stone and the total weight of all the flanking diamonds, if there are any.

Signs of furniture quality: wood veneer, super finish

Antiques are getting scarce, but the modern bride can give her new home an heirloom look . . . and live with it, too.

Fine hardwood veneered furniture is just that — an "instant" heirloom, beautiful but strong and practical for everyday living.

In fact, the beautiful cabinetworks used for today's furniture have a rich heritage that dates back to the Egyptians 3,500 years ago. Thanks to modern manufacturing methods, however, contemporary hardwood veneered furniture is available at prices which ease into budgets as easily as fine cabinetworks convert a room into an enriching environment.

Furniture that has veneered construction is a sign of quality — an indication that the furniture is made to last, according to the Fine Hardwoods Association. The Association points out that most of the antique furniture displayed by the world's leading museums is veneered. Although the prized originals date back centuries, they look as beautiful as ever. Many of the fine hardwood veneers that have been used for furniture through the ages remain popular today and can be seen in both modern and traditional styles. The time-tested veneers include walnut, oak, cherry and mahogany, as well as exotic woods like rosewood and teak.

Today's fine furniture is made of engineered plywood panels consisting of several layers of hardwood. The hardwood sandwich is permanently laminated and each layer is placed with its natural grain at right angles to the adjacent layers. The resulting veneered construction is stronger than any piece of solid wood . . . and even stronger, weight-for-weight, than steel.

Luckily for the new homemaker, fine wood furniture has joined the work-saving age of convenience. Care and maintenance procedures have been practically eliminated since the innovation of a revolutionary new finishing process reports the Association. Called super finishes, the new protection makes fine wood surfaces spillproof, stain-repellent and scuff-resistant.

Super finished furniture practically takes care of itself. It doesn't even need to be waxed — just dusted or wiped with a damp cloth.

Super finishes are hard transparent coatings that protect wood surfaces from accidental spills, nicks and scratches that often occur in daily living. Furniture with the new super finish protection can't be stained by perfume, nail polish, nail polish remover, household bleach, boiling coffee, alcohol or cleaning solutions. Most liquids can be wiped away with a damp cloth without leaving a trace. Fingernail polish and airplane glue can be removed with nail polish remover, a solvent that will instantly ruin conventional finishes.

The Association advises brides to look for furniture with both veneered construction and super finishes — pointing out that quality manufacturers tag or label their furniture to flag veneers and super finishes.

The Association offers these other tips in looking for quality in wood furniture: Chairs, tables and chests should stand solidly on the floor and not rock. Drawers should slide easily. Doors should swing freely and not drag. Tables should be braced at points of stress with corner blocks or braces and reinforced with stretchers between the legs.

Today's bride can have veneered furniture that once was so expensive that it was reserved for the rulers and the rich. And thanks to superfinishes she can maintain its beauty without posting a guard in the living room.

IF THEY'VE been married before, it is hard to think of gifts for newlyweds. Every-day replacements like glasses are always welcome, as well

Insurance and money management important topics for engaged couples

NEW YORK (UPI) — Before the wedding day, the happy couple must get feet on the ground in two unromantic areas — insurance and money management.

Failure to plan in the money and security arenas can get the marriage off on the wrong foot, even causing the first serious marital rift.

Here are a few points the couple should follow.

Discuss types of insurance you should have. Life, medical, furniture, car. Names will need to be changed on all policies now held by the woman. Even auto insurance needs attention.

A change in marital status can affect the premium. A married man is a better risk than a single man his age. Renter's insurance is a necessity if you want to protect furniture and clothes from loss by water, fire or theft.

Some insurance companies offer an Engaged Couples Endorsement to existing renter's policies. The coverage can be bought up to 90 days before the wedding. It covers wedding gifts and possessions stored anywhere within the state in which the policy is written. The coverage extends to 90 days after the wedding.

See the insurance agent about medical insurance. If both of you work, check the policies connected with employment. One of you will want to switch to the family plan. Select the one that offers the best coverage. It's foolish for both to hold family plans.

Make some kind of plan about money management. Will you have a joint checking account? Will each have a separate account? Or will there be just one account and only one authorized to write checks? Unless each of you vows to fill in check stubs, the joint account can lead to fiscal disaster.

Rent a safe deposit box at the bank.

You'll keep the wedding license there, both of your birth certificates, Army discharge papers, and other vital papers.

It also is a good idea to keep in the box such things as the account numbers of credit cards. In the event of loss of same, you can get a recapitulation quickly by checking the safe deposit box.

On credit cards there will need to be discussions. Will each keep all the cards now held? Will some accounts be closed?

There are dozens of questions, each as different as the persons involved.

Only by discussing your long range financial plans and the part credit will play in management of finances will you be able to arrive at answers likely to serve your best interests.

On credit, the big thing, of course, is to avoid getting into a trap — having more payments due each month than you can manage comfortably on your income.

Modern wedding rites becoming individualized

NEW YORK (UPI) — Thousands of brides among the more than 1.7 million marrying for the first time during 1973 will take advantage of changing lifestyles by wearing less traditional attire and by writing their own wedding ceremonies. They also will be marching down the aisle to more popular tunes such as the theme from "Love Story" or "Doctor Zhivago," says the American Music Conference, spokesman for the music industry.

Whether the ceremony is traditional or modern, or whether it takes place in church or on a mountainside, today's bride couple is likely to demand and get its own ideas in the wedding rites.

Among those leaning to tradition mixed with the new individual touches at weddings are young couples selecting baroque music played by recorder, flute, and celeste, a keyboard instrument with a clear bell-like tone.

Other weddings feature guitars, violins, brass ensembles — even drums — for both the ceremony and after-nuptial merriment.

While some of these instruments appear exotic to the American, many of them are traditional in non-Western cultures. Drums play a major part in marriages in Nigeria where they are played at the wedding and at the feasts that accompany it.

The musicians consist of several women who play large inverted calabash bowls — some beaten with the hands and some with sticks. They sing a song which advises men to investigate the character and potential of their prospective mate before the marriage so that they get a good wife. The song also offers suggestions on how to handle a bad one.

In Turkic Russia, no wedding can take place without the Zurna, a double reed wind instrument. Played in pairs, one Zurna is used for the melody and the other for sustained notes.

Women also provide the wedding music in Afghanistan. Normally two women who are blood relatives travel from town to town, performing during private festivities and accompany their songs on large tambourines.

Gift-giving suggestions for the previously wed

Everybody's happy when a divorced friend remarries. But when it comes to purchasing a wedding present for second-time-arounders, there's the rub. Women previously married usually have fairly complete households of both the necessities and the wedding-present luxuries.

A divorced man is likely to have maintained a bachelor apartment for some time, and so brings various items and especially assorted gadgets to the new home.

Personal presents, such as clothing, don't have that togetherness feeling necessary to a wedding gift.

If you're stumped, here are some suggestions which may solve your problem:

If the bride's previous marriage was a long one it is likely her everyday household equipment needs replacing. Consider a set of good crockery for everyday use, perhaps in a bold, mod pattern. Or a matched set of non-stick cookware in a bright color.

Attractive water tumblers and juice glasses are welcome replacements for chipped or mismatched remnants. Remember that the lady might have a closetful of flat and holloware silver and all sorts of hor d'oeuvres trays and yet be getting along with an oldish toaster.

Some credit card companies have plans where you can send the couple vouchers for a night on the town or a dinner out, all on you whether you are alone or not.

Newlyweds do a lot of entertaining. They probably have a supply of the usual liquors, but chances are they will be delighted to receive some of the more sophisticated spirits to impress their guests with. Send a mixed case; a before-dinner aperitif such as the garnet-red Campari which is so popular in Europe. Mixed with club soda and ice Campari makes a marvelous, astringent appetite teaser.

Accompany the aperitif with a few bottles of Polish "vodka" called Wyborowa, which is shipped icy-cold from small glasses and tastes like a dry Martini. Ordinary vodka is flavorless, but Polish vodka needs no mixers and your bride couple will have both fun and a taste treat discovering it.

Add in some sweet liqueurs for after dinner, or some fine cognac, or a bottle of dessert champagne. The delightful French dessert wine Chateau d'Yquem is an elegant choice.

No one ever has enough of fine art. Reproductions of ancient statuettes and pottery found by expeditions to archaeological sites make tasteful gifts and good conversation pieces. They fit any sort of decor, and can be inexpensively purchased at museums or large bookstores.

If you're hopelessly romantic, a stereo recording of the ballad popular a few years ago, "The Second Time Around" should earn you some fond thoughts from the happy couple.

Would provide access to new school

Residents ask alternative to Aspen Court sidewalk

by JOE FRANZ

Two homeowners on Aspen Court in Buffalo Grove have asked the village to find an alternative to its plan to put a sidewalk between their homes which will connect Twisted Oak Lane with Aspen Court.

The sidewalk will be installed to create easier access for students who will be walking to Twin Groves School, expected to open next January.

The homeowners, Harry Stoner, of 7 Aspen Ct., and Ralph Cundiff, of 8 Aspen Ct., told the village board Monday night they were unaware until two weeks ago that Levitt and Son Inc., the developer of the homes, had granted the village an easement between their property. Both men said Levitt did not tell them of the easement when they closed the deal for their homes in November.

Two other homeowners, who live on Twisted Oak Lane but were not at the meeting, will also have the sidewalk running between their homes.

STONER SAID he paid a $700 premium for his home because of the added privacy he would have living on a cul-de-sac. If the sidewalk is constructed through his property it will come within 13 feet of his living room window, he said.

Stoner said if he had known about the sidewalk he would not have purchased the home. "I feel the sidewalk will create a unique and extraordinary burden on my property," he said.

Although the sidewalk will be entirely on Stoner's property, Cundiff, who also paid a premium, said it will come within 14 feet of an addition which is currently being put on his home. Cundiff said if he had known about the sidewalk he would have put the addition on the other side of his home, away from the sidewalk.

Ken Campbell, an engineer for Levitt, said at the meeting that he did not know whether the homeowners were informed of the easement before they bought the property. He said, however, if they were not informed of it, they should have been told by the salesmen.

LEVITT REPRESENTATIVES were unavailable for comment yesterday as to what the salesmen had explained to the buyers of the property.

The sidewalk, which will be paid for by Levitt is scheduled to be constructed in about two to three weeks. Construction could be delayed while the village examines alternatives to the sidewalk as it is now planned.

One alternative raised at Monday's meeting is to put the sidewalk on top of the nearby Aspen ditch after it is covered. Two weeks ago the village board approved an agreement with Levitt to fill in the ditch. By a four to three margin, the board voted to give Levitt a 10 per cent increase in the number of homes in one of its developments, if Levitt agreed to fill in the ditch.

This solution would be acceptable, however, the project to fill in the ditch stops short of Twisted Oak Lane. About 180 feet of open ditch will remain, making it impossible to construct a sidewalk.

THE VILLAGE decided Monday to investigate the possibility of filling in the additional 180 feet of open ditch. Village Engr. Arnold Seaberg said it will probably cost the village from $15,000 to $20,000.

A second alternative, to construct the sidewalk along Arlington Heights Road was ruled out by the board.

CURTAIN TIME IS 8 p.m. for "Once Upon a Mattress," a musical to be performed by Wheeling High School students tomorrow through Saturday. Sitting in front are Jim Hecker and Jan Egan and behind them, Robert Kazels and Pamela Menas. Tickets are $1.50 per person.

Village zoning ordinance stands in way

Revision of Ranchmart plans expected

Plans to almost double the size of the Ranchmart Shopping Center at Buffalo Grove and Dundee roads in Buffalo Grove will probably have to be revised because of a village zoning ordinance, Village Atty. Richard Raysa said yesterday.

Sanitary district will hold monthly meets

The Prospect Heights Old Town Sanitary District (OTSD) Board of Trustees will meet only once a month starting in June.

The board will meet on the third Tuesday of every month at 7:30 p.m. in the district offices, 6A. E. Camp McDonald Rd. Previously the board met twice a month.

Park district won't meet on May 28

The Prospect Heights Park District meeting originally scheduled for May 28 has been canceled because of Memorial Day.

Instead, the park board will meet June 4 and June 11 at 7:30 p.m. at the Prospect Heights Public Library, 9 N. Elm St.

The developers, Albert Frank and Associates had planned to expand the north end of the existing center to within 25 feet of Buffalo Grove Road. Raysa said, however, because Buffalo Grove Road is an arterial road, the developer will probably only be able to go within 150 feet of it.

Raysa said the developer can go to the zoning board of appeals and ask for a variation in zoning which will allow construction within 100 feet of Buffalo Grove Road. The developer probably could not get a variation which would allow building any closer to the road, Raysa said.

Kenneth Rodeck, an engineer for Albert Frank and Associates said if the village will not allow construction to within 25 feet of Buffalo Grove Road, the developer will have to reduce the number of stores in the new section of the shopping center.

THE DEVELOPER'S original plan called for construction of a two-story office building, a restaurant and a variety of shops and stores. The office building and a few stores are planned for the north end of the existing center, and will not be affected by the zoning ordinance.

The restaurant will be constructed on the southern edge of the property next to the existing gas station. Rodeck said the new businesses will probably include a jewelry shop, a gift shop, a hardware store, appliance store and clothing stores for men, women and children.

The developer appeared before the plan commission with its request about three weeks ago. At that time, the commission decided to consult Raysa concerning the zoning ordinance. No date has been set for the next meeting.

Elk Grove High Alabama trip

Help — but little hope — for jazz band

The students and parents challenging an Illinois High School Association (IHSA) rule that prohibits the Elk Grove Jazz Band from going to Alabama got some help, but little encouragement, Monday from the High School Dist. 214 Board.

The board agreed that Elk Grove principal Robert Haskell should ask the IHSA to give the protestors an explanation of the reason for the rule. However, several board members said they personally support the IHSA rule.

The board listened to explanations of the issue from Elk Grove student William Busse and some of the dozen parents of band members accompanying him.

Busse said he has contacted the American Civil Liberties Union and private attorneys about challenging the IHSA rule in court and explained the group wants an explanation of the rule from IHSA officials before they make any final decision on a lawsuit.

THE BOARD ALSO heard explanations from Elk Grove High School staff members that they had not heard from Busse or his group about details of the challenge. In addition, band director Douglas Peterson said he had never intended to take the band to Alabama regardless of the IHSA rule.

Busse told the board that he had been approached by members of the jazz band who were unhappy because the IHSA rule prevented the band from going to a national festival June 6 to 9 in Mobile, Ala., because the students would miss three days of school. The band won the invitation to the festival at a contest in Crown Point, Ind.

In addition, Busse said he and fellow student Jeff Sherman had originally understood that band director Peterson wanted to go to the festival but could not because of the rule. Once they began investigating the rule and the possibility of suing the IHSA to have it changed, he said, Peterson changed his position and said he did not want to go to the festival under any circumstances.

PETERSON TOLD the board he had never intended to take the band to Mobile and said Busse had "misquoted" him. "I said, 'Yes, I would like to go but there are reasons we can't go and one of those is the IHSA ruling,'" Peterson said.

"I try to make decisions for the band that will be in the best interests of the entire band program and of the students of the entire school program," he said.

Busse said his main goal at this point is to get an explanation of the IHSA rule, which says students cannot go to non-IHSA sponsored festivals if they must miss school. Under the rule, Busse said, the jazz band could miss school to go to Mobile if it went alone, but it cannot go because other bands are participating.

A LETTER SENT for the students to the IHSA by Haskell has received no reply, Busse said.

Board members Arthur Aronson and Jack Matthews said they believed the IHSA should have the courtesy to answer the students' request for an explanation. Matthews said, "In this case I, in my mind, would support the IHSA position."

The IHSA, an organization of Illinois high schools that regulates interscholastic competition, is governed by the principals of each school. Any changes in any rules would have to be approved by the principals of each school in the state.

About Ghosts

by Ed Landwehr

With rare exception, TV picture ghosts are caused by the antenna or the set's location. Sometimes if you move your set a short distance, a correction can be made. However, more times it's the antenna's fault and this is particularly true with color TV because color requires a "broader band." Better antenna equipment is important for superior color reception.

Landwehr's Home Appliances, 1000 W. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights, has serviced antennas in this area for black and white and for color and has noted what is necessary for the best results. Your phone call 255-0700 will not start a costly experiment for the type you need. We will know. Chances are there will be efficient antennas near your home that we have installed. Try us. We'll assure your satisfaction.

Terrisal Park homeowners stop flood ordinance

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

Terrisal Park homeowners, in a standing-room-only appearance before the Des Plaines City Council, stalled ordinances requiring improvements that could end subdivision flooding.

City officials will meet the homeowners at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in city hall to re-examine proposed requirements for installation of "modified overhead sewers" at owner expense.

The homeowners, represented by attorneys Tyco Smith and James Reilley, sent a five-page petition to the council Monday night asking that "no action be taken on the proposed ordinances until the petition requests are completed . . . until amendments are added and another meeting is held with the homeowners."

"The great number of people behind me . . . oppose the three ordinances in their present form," Reilley told the council.

THE PROPOSED ordinances would require plumbing improvements in the 188 townhouses within three months. Failure to install the improvements would lead to payment for the work by the city and monthly billing of homeowners, including 6 per cent interest, to repay the city.

The improvements were recommended by City Engineer Robert Bowen after a three-month study of flooding including spillage of raw sewage onto lawns and driveways. City officials called the flood problem "an extreme health hazard" last year.

Bowen recommended more than $400,000 in improvements including $258,000 for storm sewer extension into the subdivision, elimination of yard drains, installation of storm sump pumps and disconnection of drain tiles from sanitary sewers.

Estimated homeowner cost per unit was $700, to $1,000, Bowen's March 29 report states.

Ald. Arthur Erbach (5th) head of the council's building, control and inspection committee, withdrew the ordinances from final vote consideration Monday night. Homeowners met with Erbach last Wednesday and expressed "a number of objections," he said.

"WE INTEND TO cooperate with the city to end the problem of raw sewage in parking lots where children play," said Reilley who moved to Des Plaines three weeks ago.

Smith told the council that research Monday indicated "nine Constitutional problems in the ordinances." The attorneys said they were hired last Sunday and would prepare written objections to the proposals before Thursday's meeting.

The homeowners left the council meeting en masse after Erbach withdrew the ordinances and reassembled on city hall steps.

"This is the worst piece of legal legislation I've ever seen," Smith told the homeowners. "I don't know why — these people seem very professional in their approach."

DANCING A ROCK-AND-ROLL number are two West School students, Scott Heiden and Barbara Currer. The school is 50 years old this year, and over half the student body, as well as the entire faculty, are involved in an elaborate stage production that presents the popular songs and dances of bygone eras, starting with 1923, the year the school was built. Narrators highlight the important milestones in the schools past between the songs and dances.

Brushing up on their footwork . . .

by REGINA OEHLER

The elementary school librarian checked out a book, then looked around to see if anyone else needed help. All clear.

Quickly, she stepped out into the hall. Humming a tune to herself, she started a soft shoe. Occasionally, she looked back to see if any other students were lined up with books in hand.

Down the hall, one of the classrooms was full of singing students. In another classroom, the students were practicing dance steps.

Oops! Someone wants to check out a book. The librarian stepped back into the resource room. Then she headed for the hall, for another practice session.

PRACTICING for West School's 50th anniversary stage show can be very demanding.

Exactly 50 years ago, the plans for West School were drawn up on the bottom of an orange crate, said Prin. Mason Aldrich. He casually mentioned that the school's birthday should be celebrated and soon found himself in the middle of "Those Were the Days."

So did 240 of the school's 400 students, the entire faculty and a good part of the surrounding community.

THE SHOW IS divided into ten-year segments, starting with 1923. Students perform dances and songs of the era. Even the teachers have gotten into one of the acts by putting on a Mickey Mouse show.

Between the songs and dances, narrators highlight some of the important milestones in West School's history. Pictures made by fifth graders of the school and the neighborhood decorate the walls of the auditorium.

SHOW TIMES ARE 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. today. West school is located at 1012 Thatcher, Des Plaines. The students will play before a full house at all three performances as tickets are already sold out.

Hundreds and hundreds and hundreds of hours went into the production, said Tom Krenke, a West School teacher.

"Most of this has been done on free time," he added. "There was little interruption in the academic program."

"It's a lot better than we anticipated," said Mary Jane Hoag, another teacher. "It really floored me that grade school kids could put out such a finished product," added teacher Janice Cook, who has seen the rehearsals.

THERE WERE PROBLEMS, but most have been solved. One of the first difficulties was talking the students into holding onto each other during waltzes, and not dancing two-feet apart.

The love scene, during the song "Under the Apple Tree" was another big problem. The boys and girls didn't want to hold hands.

During a Beatles' medley, several girls do a modified "can can" while holding onto a cardboard copy of a yellow submarine. They kept stepping on each other's toes.

The most embarrassing moment during rehearsals happened during "Rock Around the Clock." While one of the girls was sliding through part of her rock and roll number, she lost her skirt.

Even with the problems, it must have been enjoyable. "People are thinking about what we will do next time instead of 'never again!'" said Mrs. Cook.

A BARREL covered with green paper to make it look like a bush will be placed in the hallway outside the auditorium. The students are hoping that enough money will be dropped in the barrel so they can buy a few trees as a birthday present to the school.

These trees will replace the elms destroyed by last year's Dutch Elm blight. They may even be 50 years from now, when West School celebrates another birthday.

One thing has come out of the production that has immediate, tangible benefits, said teachers. Students have discovered that teachers are human; that they aren't put away in drawers between class times. The production has also brought students, faculty and the community closer together.

Superblock parking appraisal secret

Des Plaines park district commissioners laid groundwork for a Superblock parking land swap more than three months ago.

Park district officials who have remained quiet about suggestions that offices at 748 Pearson St. are needed for Superblock parking, ordered an appraisal of the property in February.

The city council Monday authorized Mayor Herbert Behrel to contract an appraisal of the park district site and neighboring lots owned by the Knights of Columbus and Leroy Zaleski.

The council vote was recommended by Behrel and City Atty. Robert DiLeonardi.

PARK DISTRICT officials refused to reveal results of the appraisal by James J. Curtis and Associates, 223 W. Jackson, Chicago.

"I don't know what substantial increase means," Robert Kunkel, park district director, said. "If I told you how much it increased and you knew what we paid for it, you'd know what the price is."

The park district paid about $100,000 for the combined garage-office nearly 10 years ago.

Zoning for the proposed Superblock was discussed last night, after Herald press deadline, by the city zoning board of appeals.

THE CITY PLAN commission recommended approval of zoning, which includes a requirement that Des Plaines construct Superblock parking, last week. The plan commission report recommended a switch in redevelopment parking — moving the multi-level lot from Ellinwood Street to Pearson-Prairie. The switch would require park district land.

DiLeonardi told the council that the park district cannot sell the property without a referendum. But, the district can approve a land swap.

Redevelopment officials have suggested location of park district offices in the proposed city hall building.

Referendum to complete Maine North likely within 2 years

by REGINA OEHLE

High School Dist. 207 Board members hinted yesterday that a referendum will be held within two years to finance completion of Maine North High School.

Board Pres. Robert Claus told the Herald a referendum will probably be needed unless there is enough money to cover construction of sports facilities and specialized classrooms at the school.

Harold Markworth, business manager, said there will have to be a referendum because "we don't have that kind of money." He estimated the cost would run between $4 and $7 million.

More than a 100 Maine North parents crowded into the Board room Monday night to complain about the lack of facilities at their school.

A SPOKESMAN for the group, Al Nidetz, 9337 Warren Oval, Niles, told the school board that North does not have facilities comparable to the other three schools in the district.

He pointed to Maine East, which he said has two swimming pools and the lack of even one swimming pool at Maine North. He said there was no auditorium or any outdoor sports facilities at the school. Students are bused to other schools in the district for sports activities.

The home economics, art and music classes are held in science rooms or regular classrooms, Nidetz added. There are no classes in photography or wood-working and the business program is limited because facilities are lacking.

Nidetz read excerpts from the original educational specifications for the school, which call for four football practice fields, two baseball diamonds, eight tennis courts and a golf driving range.

"We are not asking for all the luxuries this book spells out," Nidetz said. "But we do not consider it unrealistic or unreasonable to expect the same physical education and sports facilities that are available at our three sister schools."

A $15 million referendum was passed in 1967 and half was used for construction of Maine North. The other half went towards construction of classrooms, a teacher's lounge and second swimming pool at Maine East and a sports complex and indoor track at Maine South.

Board member Roy Makela said the finance committee was working on a plan where bonds for the construction of Maine North could be sold without raising the present level of taxes.

"I truly believe that within the next year or two, I will see that completion," said Makela, a member of the finance committee of the board and resident of the Maine North district.

CLAUS SAID the parents had "indicated yours is a top priority item. We will consider your views in making our deliberations."

In other action, the board voted to hold meetings twice a month, instead of once a month as in the past. Starting July 1, meetings will be held the second and fourth Monday of each month. The June meeting will be held on the fourth Monday instead of the third.

The board also decided to name the new spectator gym at Maine West after Herman Rider, who was Principal at Maine West from 1960 until his death April 27.

Three-year board member Michael Bartos, who is resigning effective in June, was recognized by the board. The members presented him with a bronze plaque.

120 teachers walk out of pact meeting

More than 120 Maine Township High School teachers walked out of Monday night's board meeting after the board refused to let them speak.

"If you want to talk, that's the end of our negotiations," yelled board member Leonard Grazian when Dewane Barnes, president of the teachers' union, tried to speak.

The topic was salary negotiations. Under a professional negotiating agreement signed last year, neither teachers nor board members can discuss the progress of the talks publicly.

Board Pres. Robert Claus said the teachers may already have broken the agreement by statements made last week.

AT A RALLY held May 14 to support their negotiators, teachers handed out a prepared statement which said that after four months of negotiations, "our team could report no significant progress." They also criticized the board as being "indifferent."

Dist. 207's salary schedule is lower than other school districts in the area, said the statement. It also said that salary hikes have not kept up with cost of living increases.

"I wonder how long I can continue to serve as a board member and continue to turn the other cheek to planned demonstrations and untruths," said Grazian, a member of the negotiating team.

"Mr. Barnes may have totally jeopardized all teacher negotiating rights in this district," said Claus. Dewane Barnes, a teacher at Maine East, is president of the Maine Teacher's Association, and a member of the negotiating committee.

BARNES TRIED to be put on the agenda for Monday's meeting, but was told he had made his request too late. Barnes said he attended the meeting and asked Claus if he could speak.

Claus, according to Barnes, said the matter would be handled later, when the topic came up at the meeting. The agenda showed that Grazian would be giving the board a progress talk on the negotiations.

"He did not say 'no,'" said Barnes. Claus said he planned to explain to the teachers why they could not speak at the meeting. The reasons he gave after the walkout were that the teachers were not on the agenda and that there were channels the teachers should use instead of taking their case directly to the board.

"The teachers were sitting there for two hours, hoping that we could make the statement," said Barnes. He also added that in the past, teachers had been allowed to speak without having been placed on the agenda.

THE STATEMENT says essentially the same things that were said at last week's rally.

Grazian gave a little more information about the progress of the negotiating session when he talked to the board. He said the team are making progress and that "they eat peanuts," at negotiation meetings.

"I'd like to say more, but I can't," he finished.

City council fights over booze, speeding autos

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

Des Plaines battled over booze and speeded autos Monday night.

The city council, spurred by a recent crackdown on liquor sales at churches, authorized preparation of an ordinance allowing "occasional" church liquor sales.

The ordinance is expected to receive council approval June 4.

Mayor Herbert Behrel, who doubles as Des Plaines liquor commissioner, ordered a hit to bingo night beer sales at St. Stephens, 1267 Everett, last week. State statute and city ordinance prohibit liquor sales near churches and schools.

"THE INTENT IS not to restrict sales but to prevent commercial sales," Ald. Arthur Erbach (5th) told the council. Behrel's letter to St. Stephens has "far-reaching effects on a number of church organizations."

Erbach suggested an ordinance allowing "religious organizations to be eligible for an occasional liquor license — but not a weekly thing."

"I have no objection or qualms," Behrel said. "The time has arrived when we should define occasional licenses."

"I can't envision anything more controversial than trying to dry up our churches," Ald. Alan Abrams (6th) said.

When Ald. Charles Bolek (3rd) asked for a study of the proposal, Ald. Thomas Koplos (1st) objected to any delay in consideration. "The St. John's Greek Orthodox picnic is coming up soon (June 22 to 24)," he said.

"We're not after any denomination," the mayor said. "But it's my opinion that once-a-week at a bingo game is going too far."

FROM BEER, the council traveled into debate over speed limits on city residential streets.

Ald. Richard Ward's (8th) street and traffic committee "unanimously recommended that the speed limit on streets should be 20 mph. Current limit is 30 mph."

Ward suggested a study of state laws before drafting a city ordinance and Koplos proposed approval of a resolution calling for state-wide speed limit drop.

"How enforceable is it?" Abrams said. "Will it really slow people down?"

"I'M SURPRISED to hear 20 mph," Police Chief Arthur Hintz said. "Some cars couldn't drive in high gear at that speed."

"You're saying that most people would drive in low gear throughout Des Plaines," Abrams said.

"Maybe if we ask for 20 we'll get 25," Koplos said.

"Everybody goes 5 mph over the limit," Ald. Robert Hinde (4th) said. "Perhaps by saying 20, we'll be keeping people at 25."

"I've heard it mentioned to me many times that there are too many stop signs in Des Plaines. If we slow the traffic to 20 — we might be able to remove 50 per cent of the stop signs," Erbach said.

AN AMENDMENT to change the resolution from 20 to 25 mph failed in a 7 to 9 vote. The 20 mph resolution, which will be sent to state legislature members, passed in a voice vote.

In other action Monday night, the council:

- Approved controversial rezoning of 981 Oakton Ave. from residential to commercial. Pizza Hut Inc., possible purchaser of the site, agreed to delay construction until the city lifts its moratorium on restaurants.

- Deferred a contribution of $3,487 to the Northwest Opportunity Center. The council's health and welfare committee recommended approval of the funds which would offset loss of federal grants.

- Approved the 1973 city salary ordinance that includes 5.5 per cent wage hikes for most employees.

THE COUNCIL ALSO approved appointments to seven city commissions.

Named to the plan commission was Paul Marquette, 1039 Jeanette. Chairman Robert O'Grady's term expired April 30. Nominees for another plan commission vacated by Ald. Gerald Meyer (7th), who was elected to the council in April, include David Dannel, 551 Lincoln, David Van Vleck, 2081 Pine St., and Art Erickson, 396 Harthorne Ln.

The council accepted the resignation of Robert Birchfield, 2045 Spruce, from the human relations commission. He was elected to the Dist. 62 School Board in April. Jerry Perkins, 1179 Martin St., was appointed to the commission.

Reappointed were Don Essig, 84 Wisconsin Dr., civil service commission; A. C. "Doc" Wilson 1098 Forest Ave., board of police and fire commissioners; Thomas Signalgo, 633 S. Sixth Ave., to the traffic commission and the entire, six-member electrical commission.

Library book unit meeting this summer

The adult book discussion group, sponsored by the Des Plaines Public Library, will continue to meet this summer on the third Wednesday of each month. Kathy Gaul, library staff member, will lead the discussion.

The next meeting is at 7:30 p.m., June 20. The paperback book to be discussed is "The Lonely Trip Back" by Florrie Fisher, a personal account of a woman on drugs and how she is cured.

If you wish to participate in the discussion, obtain a paperback copy of the book, read it, and come to the meeting in the Board Room of the Des Plaines Public Library. Be ready with comments and questions and suggestions for paperback books to be discussed at future meetings.

Youth, 18, charged with drug possession

An 18-year-old Des Plaines youth was arrested early Monday and charged with possession of marijuana and disorderly conduct by Elk Grove Village police.

The youth was found about 2 a.m. peering into windows of homes in the Elmwood and Hickory lanes area of the village, police said. There were reports of similar activities in the area earlier this month.

The youth was released on $1,000 bond.

Special education meeting set

Dolly Hallstrom, chairwoman of the legislative action committee in the Illinois State Legislature, will be the speaker at a meeting sponsored by the Maine Township Special Education Program. She will discuss legislation affecting special education programs.

The meeting will be held Monday, June 4, in the Little Theater of Gemini Junior High School, 8955 Greenwood Ave., Niles, at 7:30 p.m. Parents, staff members and interested citizens are encouraged to attend.

East Maine School Dist. 63 will host the meeting.

Sacred music concert June 3

The senior choir of Good Shepherd Lutheran Church will present a concert of sacred music Sunday, June 3 at 7 p.m. The concert will consist of Cantata No. 51 by Johann Sebastian Bach, for solo soprano and trumpet, "Jauchzet Gott in Allen Landen," and a Chandos Anthem by George Frederick Handel. The anthem is the fourth of twelve which were written by Handel and is entitled "O Sing Unto the Lord."

Soloists for the concert are Jann Jaffe, soprano; Robert Hurstad, tenor; and James Sedlack, trumpet. The senior choir and orchestra will be under the direction of the organist — choir director of Good Shepherd, Don Simmons. The church is located at the corner of Howard and Lee streets, Des Plaines.

The concert is free and the public is cordially invited.

AWOL Marine runs police a merry chase

An AWOL Marine private was arrested early yesterday in Des Plaines after a high-speed chase involving 12 squad cars from four police departments.

According to Des Plaines police, Pfc. Michael Biederer, 21, of 8618 Callie Ave., Morton Grove, finally was cornered and captured after police from Park Ridge, Des Plaines, Rosemont and Cook County forced his car onto a Des Plaines fire station driveway at Oakton and Ash streets.

The chase began shortly after 1 a.m., according to Park Ridge Police Lt. Donald Scheunemann. Biederer was seen by Park Ridge police going west on Oakton Street at speeds in excess of 70 miles per hour.

When the car reached Des Plaines, Patrolmen Walter Lang and John Stephens continued the chase west on Oakton Street. Biederer, driving a white late-model sedan, was reported to have topped 80 miles per hour in a 25 miles-per-hour zone at one point.

Forty minutes after the chase began, he was finally run off the road at Oakton and Ash after police said he ignored several stop signs and a traffic light.

Biederer tried to drive off after being cornered but was thwarted when police rammed his car to block his escape.

Biederer was turned over to the Park Ridge police who charged him with several traffic violations and attempting to elude police.

The two Des Plaines squad cars suffered more than $100 damage. The damage to three Park Ridge cars was in excess of $2,000, police said.

Police later learned Biederer was reported absent from a United States Marine Corps base in Beaufort, S.C.

He is currently being held on $500 bond in Cook County Jail and has been scheduled to appear May 29 in the Park Ridge branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

worked out Thursday. What we've got to do is organize. We want to talk to you people and find out what you can live with. Thursday night will be a battle where we'll try to eliminate their ordinance," he said.

THE HOMEOWNERS could seek a court injunction, blocking enforcement of the ordinances. "This is all clearly unconstitutional," Smith said.

The homeowners' petition asked why the city failed to require the townhouse builder to follow construction plans that included overhead sewers. "If a violation of filed specifications did take place, the original builder is responsible for at least part of the present problem."

The petition requested no city council action until the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corp., owner of 66 townhouses since bankruptcy of Marshall Savings and Loan, contribute $400 per unit toward improvement cost.

"Where will the city's money come from?" the petition stated.

The homeowners proposed city cost collection over 36 months, not the 18 months in the ordinances, at 1 per cent interest, not 6 per cent. The petition asks for a possible fine reduction from $500 a day to $100 per month and for a five month completion date.

Parleys today, tomorrow to explain program

Meetings set on school remodeling

Elk Grove Township School Dist. 59 will have public meetings today and tomorrow to explain a proposed $1.25 million remodeling plan for two junior high schools.

The school district is seeking to pass a bond referendum June 9 to finance the cost of remodeling Grove Junior High School and Dempster Junior High School.

If the referendum passes, the tax rate will increase three cents per $100 assessed valuation for all district taxpayers, according to school district figures. The current bond-and-interest rate is 56 cents per $100. In next year's budget, the rate is expected to drop to 47 cents per $100 valuation.

The increase, if the referendum passes, would bring the rate to 50 cents per $100, which is below the current rate.

Today's meeting will be at 8 p.m. at Grove Junior High School, 777 Elk Grove Blvd., Elk Grove Village.

TOMORROW'S MEETING will be at 8 p.m. at Dempster Junior High School, 420 Dempster St., Mount Prospect.

Principals of the schools will conduct tours through the buildings at 8 p.m. to point out the proposed changes.

After the tours, Allen Sparks, school board president; James Ervill, district superintendent; and Scott Kelley, architect for the remodeling work, will talk about why the district wants to do the remodeling.

Other members of the school board are also expected to attend the meetings.

If the June 9 referendum is passed, the remodeling would replace heating and ventilating systems at both schools, improve learning centers, relocate and remodel classrooms and build small additions to both schools.

Initial plans for the remodeling were presented in October and included converting the schools to "open classroom" buildings, adding small auditoriums and air conditioning.

In an open class room, all students and teachers of a certain grade are in one large room.

After consulting with the faculty of both schools, the open classroom proposal was dropped. Traditional classrooms will be retained.

THE SCHOOL BOARD also eliminated auditoriums and air conditioning for both schools.

The initial plans had an estimated cost of $2.3 million.

Grove and Dempster are the oldest junior high schools in the district. Both were opened in 1960.

The major portion of the remodeling expense is for replacement of heating and ventilating systems. The heating systems at both schools do not provide even heating throughout the building.

Heating repair and maintenance costs have also increased recently.

The architect has said the ventilation systems at both schools, while meeting the state legal requirements, are not adequate. He said the present system requires open windows to get fresh air into the buildings. On cold and inclement days, the windows remain closed and no fresh air enters the building, according to the architect.

Husband foils abduction try at pharmacy

Des Plaines police are searching for two men who reportedly tried to abduct a pharmacy store clerk at gunpoint Monday night.

The clerk, Linda Rasnak of the Muench Drug Store, 688 Lee St., told police the two men entered the store about 7:45 p.m. and began looking on shelves and behind counters. About 45 minutes later they threatened her with a gun saying they wanted her to come with them.

Her husband, Michael Rasnak, a pharmacist, became suspicious of the men and summoned police.

The pair, who according to police demanded no money or drugs, fled the store when they noticed Rasnak on the telephone.

The Rasnaks told police the men ran to a car in front of nearby Slegler's department store and drove east on Prairie Street.

The gunman was described as about 22, 180 pounds with black hair, about five feet six inches tall, wearing levis and a windbreaker jacket. His accomplice was about 22, six feet two inches tall, 180 pounds with blond hair. Police said he also wore blue jeans and a brown shirt.

Rasnak also told police the two men had been in the store earlier that day.

St. Stephen parents to meet

The St. Stephen Concerned Parents Organization is conducting a meeting in the community room at Oehlert Funeral Home, Lee and Perry streets tonight at 7 p.m.

The guest speaker will be Father D. Day, an Augustinian priest who writes for "Integrity." Father Day will speak on "Teaching of Doctrine in the Catholic Church."

The St. Stephen Concerned Parents Organization teaches Catholic Doctrine to children in home classrooms. Their enrollment for the first year has been more than 200 children.

Books that are used in teaching will be shown and any questions will be answered tonight.

For more information call Marcy Struck 299-3116 or Marion Drellchiarz 824-7731.

Two on 'Young Educators' list

Two Des Plaines residents are among the six finalists selected by the Elk Grove Village Jaycees for the "Outstanding Young Educator" award.

Two winners, one elementary and one high school teacher, will be picked from the six on June 1.

Winners will have $100 donated to their school, in their name, by the Jaycees. A plaque also will be awarded to the school and the winner will receive a certificate.

Terese Goodson, 24, of Des Plaines, educable mentally handicapped teacher at Hupley School, is a finalist for the elementary teacher award.

Dorothy Lewis, 31, of Des Plaines, junior class teacher, at Elk Grove High School was selected in the high school category.

The six finalists were selected from 37 nominees by a screening committee of Jaycee members, educators, clergy and civic officials.

The Outstanding Young Educator award will be presented at the Jaycees' officers installation banquet in June.

Graduation congratulations due

The Erwin Miller home in Des Plaines will echo to congratulations for three of its members soon. And who knows how many gifts and presents will be exchanged?

Miller, of 9348 Home Cir., will graduate 18 years after he began his studies at Roosevelt University. He will receive a B.A. in history. Miller met his wife while she was a student at Roosevelt.

At the same time he graduates, his oldest daughter, Michelle, 14 will graduate from Gemini Junior High School and his young son, Elliot, 5, will receive his certificate of completion from nursery school.

Antique show, flea market set

Maine North High School Parent-Teacher Council will hold an antique show and flea market on June 3 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., at the school, 9511 Harrison, Des Plaines. Proceeds will go to Maine North's scholarship fund. Antique dealers from Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin and Indiana will present their wares at the fair.

The P.T.C. sponsored event will also include a student art exhibit and two concerts by the Maine North Symphonic Wind Ensemble at 2 p.m. and 4 p.m.

Admission to the antique show will be 50 cents with a discount ticket; regular admission will be $1.

Patriotic Night planned

On Sunday, May 27th at 7 p.m. there will be a special "Patriotic Night" at the Des Plaines Bible Church, 946 Thacker Street, Des Plaines.

The public is cordially invited to this tribute. The choir and orchestra will bring special music, and Pastor Massey will speak on law and order. A Civil War display will include authentic costumes, firearms, cannonballs, shells and artifacts.

2 charged in $300 theft at Des Plaines Lumber

Police arrested a man and a woman Monday in connection with the theft of more than $300 worth of lumber from the Des Plaines Lumber Co., First Avenue and Thacker Street.

The pair, Antonia Arndt, 27, of 450 Ridgeview Ave., Chicago and Donald Pfeiffer, 24, of 2138 Fox Ln., Des Plaines, were charged with the theft following their arrest.

The woman, according to police, was arrested when policeman Mike Banner stopped her for a traffic violation while she was allegedly carrying lumber in a trailer attached to her car on River Road.

Banner took the woman into custody when she was unable to produce a receipt for the lumber.

Miss Arndt told police she paid Pfeiffer, a four-year Des Plaines Lumber Co. employee, $100 cash for the lumber.

Pfeiffer was arrested when a company spokesman told police all customers are given receipts with purchases.

Police also said they found $100 cash in Pfeiffer's left sock when they searched him.

Miss Arndt was released on $1,500 bond while Pfeiffer was freed on a $5,000 bond.

The two are scheduled to appear in Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court June 21.

Study unit plan again, schools told

A consultant has urged Elk Grove Township Elementary Dist. 59 "reconsider soon" the formation of a unit school district.

A report presented to the school board Monday by David Schmidt of the Illinois School Consulting Service encourages "reconsideration soon when issues that clouded a true objective look by some of the study committee members can either be placed in proper perspective or be satisfactorily resolved."

The board agreed to take action on possible further study of a unit district at its next meeting, June 4.

On April 5, after about six months of study, a Citizens' Reorganization Study Committee for the district recommended against further study of a unit district "at this time."

The vote to discontinue the study was 15-10, with two abstentions.

REPORTS FROM the committee and the dissenting minority, which recommends further study, have been submitted to the board.

The committee reported there were no definite educational advantages apparent in switching from a dual district to a unit responsible for only grades kindergarten through eight. All high school grades are under High School Dist. 214.

Several proposals for unit districting were considered by the committee. Although all possible units were rejected, the most advantageous appeared to be a unit within the present boundaries of Dist. 59. Such a district would include the 20 elementary and junior high schools in Dist. 59 and would take Forest View and Elk Grove high schools from Dist. 214.

Schmidt said Monday, "It is just a matter of time before all (school) districts in Illinois become units, whether or not there is a financial gain."

THE CONSULTANT report gave three reasons for the committee's vote against a unit district:

—Loyalty and satisfaction with Dist. 214 situation "of greater degree than that expressed for School Dist. 59."

—Complication of multi-community problems and loyalties.

—Uncertainty about the ultimate effects of certain lawsuits and legislation.

Vandals hit schools

Vandals caused close to $1,000 damage at two local schools early Monday, according to Des Plaines police.

Most of the damage occurred at Chipcown Junior High School where three classroom windows were smashed causing $675 damage.

Another $300 in damages were reported at Cumberland Elementary School, 700 Golf Rd., after police said vandals broke two windows there.

Police said it is not known what time the incidents occurred.

The consultant's opinion contends a Dist. 59 unit would provide better educational opportunities and more money for education.

At Monday's meeting, the board also discussed the findings of the committee. Board Pres. Allen Sparks limited discussion to the committee report. The minority report was not directly discussed.

William Garvey, chairman of the facilities and transportation subcommittee, spoke for the committee. He said the district would have to repeat the study at a later date to determine if definite advantages to a unit district had developed.

Burglaries reported

Burglars forced their way into the home of David Klenholz, 526 Debra Ln., and stole a television valued at $400 and $25 in cash, early Monday, Des Plaines police said.

Another break-in occurred early Monday to the garage of George Egan, 514 Debra Ln., police said. Nothing was reported stolen, however, said police.

Jewelry stolen

Burglars stole $4,000 in jewelry after forcing their way into the home of Peter Hochmuth, 492 Crestwood Dr., late Friday, according to Des Plaines police.

Police said the burglars, who entered through a rear door stole several watches, gold rings and bracelets along with two portable radios and a television set.

Police are investigating leads into the break-in.

Meetings slated today, tomorrow on school work

Elk Grove Township School Dist. 59 will have public meetings today and tomorrow to explain a proposed $1.25 million remodeling plan for two junior high schools.

The school district is seeking to pass a bond referendum June 9 to finance the cost of remodeling Grove Junior High School and Dempster Junior High School.

If the referendum passes, the tax rate will increase three cents per $100 assessed valuation for all district taxpayers, according to school district figures. The current bond-and-interest rate is 56 cents per $100. In next year's budget, the rate is expected to drop to 47 cents per $100 valuation.

The increase, if the referendum passes, would bring the rate to 50 cents per $100, which is below the current rate.

Today's meeting will be at 8 p.m. at Grove Junior High School, 777 Elk Grove Blvd., Elk Grove Village.

TOMORROW'S MEETING will be at 8 p.m. at Dempster Junior High School, 420 Dempster St., Mount Prospect.

Principals of the schools will conduct tours through the buildings at 8 p.m. to point out the proposed changes.

After the tours, Allen Sparks, school board president; James Ervill, district superintendent; and Scott Kelley, architect for the remodeling work, will talk about why the district wants to do the remodeling.

Other members of the school board are also expected to attend the meetings.

If the June 9 referendum is passed, the remodeling would replace heating and ventilating systems at both schools, improve learning centers, relocate and remodel classrooms and build small additions to both schools.

Initial plans for the remodeling were presented in October and included converting the schools to "open classroom" buildings, adding small auditoriums and air conditioning.

In an open class room, all students and teachers of a certain grade are in one large room.

After consulting with the faculty of both schools, the open classroom proposal was dropped. Traditional classrooms will be retained.

THE SCHOOL BOARD also eliminated auditoriums and air conditioning for both schools.

The initial plans had an estimated cost of $2.3 million.

Grove and Dempster are the oldest junior high schools in the district. Both were opened in 1960.

The major portion of the remodeling expense is for replacement of heating and ventilating systems. The heating systems at both schools do not provide even heating throughout the building.

Heating repair and maintenance costs have also increased recently.

The architect has said the ventilation systems at both schools, while meeting the state legal requirements, are not adequate. He said the present system requires open windows to get fresh air into the buildings. On cold and inclement days, the windows remain closed and no fresh air enters the building, according to the architect.

Woman 'serious' after car crash

A Roselle woman was reported in serious condition yesterday in the intensive care unit of Alexian Brothers Medical Center after a two-car collision Monday at Rte. 72 and Arlington Heights Road.

Claudia Cukla, 27, suffered head injuries when her car collided with another auto driven by Karen McIntyre, 19, of 292 Springfield Terr., Des Plaines. Elk Grove Village police said Miss McIntyre was making a left turn from Arlington Heights Road onto Rte. 72 and Mrs. Cukla was northbound on Arlington Heights Road at the time of the accident.

Miss McIntyre was charged with failing to yield the right of way. She was treated for bruises on the head, left elbow and knee and released.

JAZZ AND ICE CREAM will be featured at an ice cream social from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. tomorrow at Lively Junior High School, 999 Leicester Rd. Director. John Hedberg has been rehearsing the band, which will entertain at the social. The Music Parents Association is sponsoring the social. Tickets are 50 cents.

5% raises for high school bosses

A 5 per cent across-the-board salary increase has been approved for all administrators and principals in Mount Prospect Dist. 57.

Since Supt. Richard Percy is resigning in June, the increase will apply only to the principals and Asst. Supt. J. C. Busenhart and Asst. Supt. Dwight Hall.

The increase means that Busenhart will receive $24,675 next year. This is a raise of $1,175 over last year. Hall will receive $23,310, which is $1,100 more than last year.

Salaries for principals will vary since all are at different levels. Each one however, will receive five per cent more than last year. The one exception to this is Jan Rodriguez, principal at Lions Park School. Mrs. Rodriguez will receive the five per cent increase plus $500. The administration recommended the extra $500 to try to equalize Mrs. Rodriguez' salary with the other principals. Mrs. Rodriguez was one of the most recently hired principals.

According to Busenhart, the increase will cost the district $7,400 more than last year for administrative salaries.

SINCE THE Dist. 57 board and the Mount Prospect Education Association (MPEA) have not completed negotiations, there is no estimate on what teachers' salaries will cost the district next year.

Both the board and the MPEA suspended negotiations in April after the MPEA asked for a new salary schedule. Under the MPEA proposal, a beginning teacher with a bachelor's degree would receive about a 9.2 per cent increase over last year. All other salaries would be raised relative to the raise in base pay, according to Dan Vondran, MPEA negotiations chairman.

The board, however, has offered teachers a proposal which would give each teacher returning to the district in the fall about a 2.3 per cent increase plus $100. However, all salaries would be based on amounts in the current salary schedule, computed according to experience and education.

According to Dave Johnson, one of the members of the MPEA negotiating team, the MPEA is waiting now for the IEA (Illinois Education Association, of which the MPEA is a member) to finish auditing the district's finances. "It's simply a matter of evaluating the books and getting the IEA's opinion as opposed to the board's opinion," Johnson said.

Johnson said that he thought the MPEA would be asking for another meeting with the board soon.

To determine needs of workers, availability of social services

Survey of backstretch conditions planned

The Illinois Racing Board has begun a survey of conditions and employees on the backstretch of Arlington Park Race Track.

The study is aimed at determining the needs of backstretch workers as well as the availability of local and county social services, according to Lucy Reum, chairman of the racing board's backstretch committee.

"We went with Arlington first because they opened the thoroughbred season and have the largest group of people on the backstretch," Mrs. Reum said.

Interviewers will talk to half of the nearly 800 men and women who care for the 1,000 thoroughbred horses stabled at Arlington Park during the racing season.

Preliminary results of the survey should be available in about two weeks, Mrs. Reum said. Information on community services will take longer to compile, about 5 to 6 weeks, she said.

"WE HAVE A TOTAL group of people on the backstretch who are very important to the financial health of the state, but who aren't receiving the services they need and are entitled to," she said.

"Racing associations have been sharply criticized for neglecting the backstretch. So has the state for not fulfilling its obligations to race track employees and the racing public. And so have the horse owners for not living up to their obligations to their employees."

The survey was commissioned by the racing board in order to get "some hard demographic facts," she said. "We kept getting conflicting stories about the number of people on the backstretch, where they came from and what they need."

"Once we know what they tell us they need, we can arrange needs in terms of priority, short, middle and long range," she said.

Among the social services, Mrs. Reum cites education and health as among the most pressing. Basic education classes for backstretch employees are in their second year at Arlington Park. Teachers use a mobile classroom furnished by the racing board.

IN THE AREA OF health services, the Cook County Public Health Department has agreed to look at a program of testing and immunization to cut down on communicable disease, she said.

"We already know that there are basic human needs to be met on the backstretch. The community there is a microcosm of social problems of a highly mobile and impersonal society," she said.

Surveyors will also contact village officials to find out what local welfare agencies can do for backstretch employees.

"I found that many of the social service groups don't know about the backstretch. And then, many of them work on a referral basis," Mrs. Reum said.

Frank Charlton, director of health services for the Village of Arlington Heights, said yesterday that he had been interviewed by a doctor hired by the racing board about public health for backstretch employees.

"WE HAVE NOT experienced a crisis problem and have not had to intervene," Charlton told the interviewer.

He said that he was asked about the water supply at the track, which comes from a deep water well on the grounds.

A sampling of the water was tested and found to be very similar to village water, he said.

Youths charged with vandalism

Four Elk Grove Village youths were arrested last weekend in connection with more than 40 incidents of breaking automobile and house windows in the village.

John Driscoll, 17, of 57 Braemar Rd.,

Wallace Glab, 17, of 217 Edgeware Rd., and two juveniles were charged with more than 40 counts of criminal damage to property. The juveniles were released to the custody of their parents, and Driscoll and Glab were released on $1,000 bond each.

The teenagers are scheduled to appear June 27 in Elk Grove Village circuit court on the charges.

Receives silver key

Robert Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Johnson, 526 E. Robertson St., Palatine, received a silver key award for three years of service with the Purdue University's marching band.

Patrolman Jerry Walsh reportedly saw three of the youths running across the parking lot near the Community Center on Kennedy Boulevard late Friday night and pursued them. He caught Driscoll, who was allegedly carrying a slingshot and metal ball bearings at the time.

Driscoll's two companions were arrested later, along with Glab.

At Rotary convention

Lloyd and Lou Ann Blair of Palatine recently attended a Rotary International convention in Lausanne, Switzerland. Blair is a member of the Rotary Club of Palatine.

Joins honor society

Jaqueline J. Benson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Benson, 413 S. Cedar St., Palatine, was recently initiated into Alpha Chi national honorary scholarship society at Blackburn College in Carlinville.

Miss Benson, a 1970 graduate of William Fremd High School, was selected for the society by a faculty council on the basis of grade point averages and scholarly character.

Youth work group finds 17.5% jobs

The Elk Grove Township Youth Employment Agency has a 17.5 per cent success rate in its first month of trying to find jobs for youths.

According to township figures, 113 young persons have applied for work and 21 have been placed in jobs.

Nita Stamm, secretary for the township committee on youth, said the employment agency needs more summer job offers from businesses and industries. A total of 85 companies have offered work, but most of these are year-long job offers and the majority of young persons can only work in the summer.

Employers with a summer job can contact the township at 437-0300. The employment agency will then attempt to find a young person to fill the job. Job offers must be from a business or industry.

The township acts only as a referral agency and does not hire any young persons. Any township youth, age 16-21, can register at the town office, 2400 S. Arlington Heights Rd., Arlington Heights, for employment.

There is no charge by the township for the job-finding service.

Pledges honorary

Stephanie Faracy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Faracy, 84 Grange Rd., Elk Grove Village, has pledged Egas, an activities honorary for senior women at Illinois Wesleyan University.

Miss Faracy is a drama major. She graduated from Elk Grove High School in 1970.

AWOL Marine runs police a merry chase

An AWOL Marine private was arrested early yesterday in Des Plaines after a high-speed chase involving 12 squad cars from four police departments.

According to Des Plaines police, Pfc. Michael Biederer, 21, of 8616 Callic Ave., Morton Grove, finally was cornered and captured after police from Park Ridge, Des Plaines, Rosemont and Cook County forced his car onto a Des Plaines fire station driveway at Oakton and Ash streets.

The chase began shortly after 1 a.m., according to Park Ridge Police Lt. Donald Scheunemann. Biederer was seen by Park Ridge police going west on Oakton Street at speeds in excess of 70 miles per hour.

When the car reached Des Plaines, Patrolmen Walter Lang and John Stephens continued the chase west on Oakton Street. Biederer, driving a white late-model sedan, was reported to have topped 80 miles per hour in a 25 miles-per-hour zone at one point.

Forty minutes after the chase began, he was finally run off the road at Oakton and Ash after police said he ignored several stop signs and a traffic light.

Biederer tried to drive off after being cornered but was thwarted when police rammed his car to block his escape.

Biederer was turned over to the Park Ridge police who charged him with several traffic violations and attempting to elude police.

The two Des Plaines squad cars suffered more than $100 damage. The damage to three Park Ridge cars was in excess of $2,000, police said.

Police later learned Biederer was reported absent from a United States Marine Corps base in Beaufort, S.C.

He is currently being held on $500 bond in Cook County Jail and has been scheduled to appear May 29 in the Park Ridge branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Spots language, hearing problems

SLIDES aids handicapped children

by KATHERINE BOYCE

When Debbie was 4 she had the vocabulary of a 2½-year-old.

She had an infection in both ears since she was an infant. The doctor treating her said her language problem was probably not related to the infection and she would learn more words as she grew older.

But preliminary tests by SLIDES, a state funded program to test preschool children for hearing and vision handicaps, showed that Debbie did have a hearing problem. She was referred to a hearing specialist by SLIDES and is now wearing hearing aids in both ears. Debbie is doing well in school now, said Joan Wootton, hearing consultant for the program and her "vocabulary is growing by leaps and bounds."

Debbie is an unusual case, said Helen Appeldoorn, director of the program. Most children tested don't have such serious handicaps, she said, but even a minor hearing or vision problem can put a child at a disadvantage in the classroom.

A child with a mild handicap, one who doesn't hear well but is not deaf, or doesn't see well but is not blind, often goes unnoticed by parents and teachers. The child is usually not aware of the problem because he is not used to hearing or seeing any other way.

THESE HANDICAPS often affect a child's education, usually his language ability. He may have an underdeveloped vocabulary because words sound distorted or are inaudible or he may not be able to see printed words and letters clearly. Too often this child appears to be just a slow learner. When the problem is recognized it can often be treated or the child can be placed in a special class to compensate for his handicap.

The job of SLIDES is to identify the mild handicap before the child enters school. The program was created by the state in 1968 after passage of a federal law granting state money to test children between age 2½ and 5 for mild handicaps. The program office, located in Washington School in Park Ridge, serves children in 49 school districts in Cook and Lake County.

Testing is performed free in local schools or in the slidesmobile, van equipped with testing instruments that is parked at each of the school districts every year. The slidesmobile is testing children in Schaumburg at Dirksen School this week at Keller Junior High School, May 29 to June 1 at Keller Junior High School, May 29 to June 1 at Nathan Hale School, June 1 through 8 and at the Des Plaines City Hall June 28 and 29. Parents should register their preschool children at the local school district.

Identifying learning problems among preschoolers is especially important, said Miss Wootton, because most communication skills, like language ability, are learned in the first three years of life. After a child reaches age 6 he has passed the period when learning skills is easiest, she said. After he enters school it is difficult for the handicapped child to catch up with his peers.

THE SLIDESMOBILE contains equipment used to test the hearing and vision abilities of preschool children in the north and northwest suburbs. A small percentage of the children tested have a handicap, are referred to a

The preliminary tests administered by SLIDES are called screening, said Miss Appeldoorn. They do not diagnose a handicap, they only show that a handicap may exist. The children are then referred to a specialist for further examination and treatment.

ABOUT ONE-THIRD of the preschoolers in the area come in for testing each year, a total of about 10,000 children. Of these children 2.5 per cent have a hearing handicap and 3.5 per cent have a vision handicap. About 96 per cent who are referred to a specialist have needed treatment.

The slidesmobile is equipped with a soundproof room where children are tested for hearing problems. The child wears earphones and listens to a variety of tones. When he hears a sound he raises his hand.

A child's vision is tested as he looks into an instrument and sees a slide of animal pictures, said Helen Gibbons, vision consultant. He must tell the examiner which figure a capital E points toward.

When a parent registers his child, he is given a game to take home and play to prepare the child for the tests. Some children are still frightened by the testing instruments and can't be examined. They are asked to come back for testing in a few months. All children should be tested each year because some handicaps may disappear and recur later.

SLIDES FOLLOWS the progress of children whose handicaps have been identified. The office works closely with doctors treating the children and with school personnel if the child enters a special learning program when he enrolls in school.

Two other services provided by SLIDES are testing the acoustics of classrooms and testing the accuracy of equipment used in schools for children who have hearing problems.

Equipment is tested to determine whether it meets with the manufacturers' claims. The program contributes the test results to a statewide study designed to help schools purchase the best equipment.

Testing acoustics in classrooms is a service provided by SLIDES since last year. The examiner uses a sound meter to determine how much reverberation of sound occurs in the rooms. Too much reverberation can cause a problem for a hard-of-hearing child who is listening to a lesson. Ten rooms in the SLIDES area were tested last year and the program hopes to increase that number this year.

During the month of July, SLIDES consultants will evaluate the results of the tests given during the year. Next year's testing program will begin in August.

GOP, VIP village board clashes are likely to continue

by MARCIA KRAMER

A News Analysis

The bitterness of the hard-fought campaign for seats on the Palatine Village Board is still echoing, five weeks after the election.

The charges, countercharges and name-calling that characterized the campaign continue to overshadow debates among opposition party village trustees, and show no sign of subsiding.

In fact, the two minority trustees, especially, Clayton W. Brown, are in no particular hurry to "kiss and make up." "I just want to point out the fact that we were telling the truth and presenting the facts throughout the entire campaign," Brown says.

IN AN EFFORT to do this, he and the other Village Independent Party trustee, Fred H. Zajonc, continually challenge their four counterparts on the practicality and legitimacy of their actions.

The Republicans, for their part, are in the comfortable position of holding a clear majority on the village board, and are playing the role of pious nonpartisans being unduly attacked by politicians who won't acknowledge that the election is over with.

This week's encounters focused on fiscal policy.

The Republicans decided to divert $22,000 that had been earmarked toward purchasing a fire truck to hire two additional firemen.

Brown attacked the move as "meddling with the budget" and "running up the expenses of the village" by buying the vehicle on time.

Bryan Coughlin

HIS REMARKS prompted GOP Trustee Bryan P. Coughlin Jr. to retort: "Do we have to go through the election campaign every Monday night?"

When Brown persisted, finally shrug-

ging, "I don't understand it," Coughlin said in an undertone: "I'm sure you don't understand anything that's going on, Clay."

Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones, who defeated Brown in the recent election, got into the act too. "If you disagree," he said, "vote against it; but don't discuss it every Monday."

Later, Brown complained during a discussion on letting bids for the W. Colfax Street improvements that Jones' alternatives for financing the project would add $250,000 in interest to the cost.

"WE'RE NOT discussing the financing," Jones cut him off.

"This is just for the board's information," Brown responded.

"I'm sure they're aware there are interest payments if you take more than 30 days to pay for something," Jones shot back.

The hostile tone of the village board meetings was set April 23, just minutes after the Republican trustees were sworn in to replace the VIP incumbents they had defeated in the previous weeks' election.

As the GOPs began initiating motions to carry out their various campaign pledges, the VIPs countered with the arguments they had made during the campaign.

THE REPUBLICANS in some instances listened; in other cases, moved to cut off the discussion. (Trustee Richard W. Fonte at one point told Zajonc firmly: "The people have spoken their piece on this. If they believe what you believe, they would have voted for you.")

Either way, the end result has been the same: The objections are overridden, 4 to 2.

And unless either side gives in, it appears that 4-2 pattern will be repeated on a regular basis.

'Solve our flooding problem first'

'Truth-in-selling' proposal for homebuyers attacked

A "truth-in-selling" provision requiring real estate brokers to inform prospective Palatine house buyers of potential flooding problems was proposed this week by village Trustee Richard W. Fonte.

The suggestion, described by Fonte as protecting buyers, was immediately attacked by present owners of homes that are subject to flooding.

"Why don't you solve our problem first, before you go to the real estate people and get them involved?" said Alyce Thompson, 743 E. Stark Dr. "Our houses are worthless and you know it."

Fonte said his suggestion was prompted by a personal experience in seeking a home. "I could always call the village president and ask whether the house floods," he said. "It's important that we protect the average citizen."

TRUSTEE Fred H. Zajonc pointed out that a geological survey map depicting the flood plain is available for inspection in village hall. Fonte responded: "I know, but the average citizen doesn't."

His suggestion was referred to the planning, building and zoning committees for review. Fonte at first proposed a "truth in selling" ordinance be drawn up, but later agreed with other trustees to study the problem before devising legislation.

As described by Fonte, the ordinance would require real estate brokers to specify on their multiple listing service which homes are in a recorded flood plain.

In addition, the broker would have to indicate whether the homes are subject to flooding, which Fonte defined as having received one inch of water the previous two years.

A member of the audience, Leroy Pomplun, 441 S. Hart St., said 900 Palatine houses were "under water" following the severe storm last Aug. 25. Alluding to the difficulty present homeowners would encounter trying to sell houses labeled as flood prone, he posed the question: "Would the village buy our homes?"

A FEW DAYS OF sun in between the recent torrents of rain have coaxed residents out of their houses and onto the tennis courts. For the more experienced, the warm days meant practicing up on the old game.

New census increases 10.4 per cent

The population of Palatine is now 28,807, according to recently released U.S. Census Bureau figures.

The new total represents a 10.4 per cent boost over the 1970 figure, when the population was 26,104.

The increase is significant to the village in that additional motor fuel tax and state income tax rebates will be available. Distribution of the two sources of revenue is based partly on population.

Village Mgr. Berton G. Braun estimated yesterday that the village will receive an additional $45,951 to $48,654 a year because of the increased population.

The sums are based on $17 to $18 per capita.

The special census taken earlier this year was ordered by the previous village board at the recommendation of Braun, who projected that the population has gone up enough that increased benefits would more than cover the $10,000 cost of the census.

A preliminary figure released at the completion of the census in March showed the population at 28,357.

A census bureau spokesman said yesterday it is not unusual for the unofficial figure to go up after the census is officially tabulated.

The special census dramatizes the growth of Palatine since 1960, when the population was 11,504. The present population is 151 per cent higher than 13 years ago.

Seaman Richard K. Reuter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Reuter, 930 E. Cooper Dr., Palatine, recently completed nine weeks of recruit training at the Naval Training Center, Great Lakes.

He is now studying basic electricity and electronics in San Diego. Reuter is a 1972 graduate of Palatine High School.

Vehicle sticker price cut by $1

Car owners bemoaning the spiraling cost of gasoline can take comfort in action taken this week by the Palatine Village Board — the cost of village vehicle stickers has been lowered by $1.

Annual stickers, beginning next year, will be available for $9, or $8 if purchased before Jan. 15. Both figures are $1 lower than the present fee.

Half-year stickers can be obtained for $4.50, as of July 1, rather than the current rate of $5.

In addition, the board agreed to issue vehicle stickers at no charge to persons over 65 years of age.

The rate reductions were approved by the village board Monday night with little discussion. They had been included in the Republican campaign platform during the recent local election, as a means of providing some relief to car owners and elderly citizens.

The vehicle sticker rates for motorcycles will remain at $5 annually, or $4 if purchased before Jan. 15, and $2.50 for a half year.

The rate schedule for trucks registered in Palatine also is unchanged.

Some 11,443 automobiles are currently registered in Palatine.

Tennis club to add three new courts

The addition of three tennis courts to the Arlington Indoor Tennis Club, 1350 E. Northwest Hwy., Palatine, will be discussed tonight by the village board's planning, building and zoning committee.

Owners of the tennis club, are seeking a variation to permit them to provide fewer parking spaces than are allowed.

The meeting is scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. in village hall.

For Birchwood Park pool-gym

Park board OKs facility contract

Palatine Park commissioners accepted the final contract last night to construct the Birchwood Park swimming pool-gymnasium facility.

The Birchwood Park project, at Illinois and Bennett avenues, was the most costly item approved in last October's $1.4 million park improvements referendum.

Three separate contracts for plumbing, an electrician, and heating had already been signed by park officials, but a mix-up with bids from two general contractors held up the final signing. The general contractor chosen was Warhol Construction Co., for $623,000.

The Birchwood Park project was held up during the spring when bids for the construction came in 25 per cent higher than the park district's $355,000 total budget.

ARCHITECT Joe L. Bennett, who prepared the plans and cost estimates, failed to inform park officials of additional costs they were incurring as they added features to the basic plan, according to Park Director Fred P. Hall. Bennett has worked with contractors in recent weeks to bring the project closer to the original budget. The current contracts are 8 per cent higher than the original budget.

Groundbreaking ceremonies will be held Saturday at 10:30 a.m. at the new pool site.

Construction on other parts of the referendum are already under way. Workers began building a hard-surfaced play area in Community Park yesterday.

Sycamore Park, east of Clark Street and just north of the Commonwealth Edison right-of-way, will be the starting point for construction of the Palatine Trail.

Work on the bicycle and hiking trail is expected to begin late next week. A $20,000 maintenance building addition will also be started sometime this summer. The addition will triple the park district's storage facilities in Community Park.

3 on honor roll

Three Palatine residents have been named to the dean's honor list at Augustana College, Rock Island.

Two of the students, Martha J. Schersten, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard E. Schersten, 283 S. Maple St., and DeAnn Stone, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. DeWayne Stone, 748 Stuart Ln., received straight A's. Also honored was Keith A. Cumblad, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Cumblad, 63 W. Illinois Ave.

Named to dean's list

Gary J. Skolen, son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Skolen, 1670 Dunbar Rd., Inverness, recently was named to the dean's list at Colgate University, Hamilton, N.Y. He is a 1972 graduate of William Fremd High School.

County panel gives OK to apartments

Cook County zoning officials have recommended that 96 acres in northeast Palatine Township be rezoned to allow the development of Hidden Creek, a complex of apartments, offices and shopping facilities.

The land borders the proposed route of the Ill. Rte. 53 expressway, and is bounded by Dundee Road on the south and Baldwin Road on the west. The triangular-shaped property is currently zoned for single-family homes.

Final approval for the rezoning was delayed this week by Cook County commissioners until the June meeting. But the recommendations of the zoning members, who conduct a local public hearing on each proposed development, are usually followed by the county commissioners.

The residential portion of Hidden Creek, scheduled for the northern 78 acres of the development, will be constructed with three types of apartment buildings.

THREE-STORY apartment buildings would be built on the 23-acre northernmost area. The central area, surrounding a Buffalo Creek tributary, will have townhouses and duplexes. And the

"courts" section will have three buildings, one seven stories tall and the other two nine stories each.

Plans for a commercial area along Dundee Road are not finalized.

The area surrounding the Hidden Creek development has already been rezoned for various condominium and apartment projects.

Officials with the Village of Arlington Heights formally protested the rezoning in a letter to county zoning officials, on the grounds that the development would increase flooding in Arlington Heights. The village's boundaries extend to Rte. 53 on the west.

Survey to determine backstretch conditions

The Illinois Racing Board has begun a survey of conditions and employees on the backstretch of Arlington Park Race Track.

The study is aimed at determining the needs of backstretch workers as well as the availability of local and county social services, according to Lucy Reum, chairman of the racing board's backstretch committee.

"We went with Arlington first because they opened the thoroughbred season and have the largest group of people on the backstretch," Mrs. Reum said.

Interviewers will talk to half of the nearly 800 men and women who care for the 1,000 thoroughbred horses stabled at Arlington Park during the racing season.

Preliminary results of the survey should be available in about two weeks, Mrs. Reum said. Information on community services will take longer to compile, about 5 to 6 weeks, she said.

"WE HAVE A TOTAL group of people on the backstretch who are very important to the financial health of the state, but who aren't receiving the services they need and are entitled to," she said.

"Racing associations have been sharply criticized for neglecting the backstretch. So has the state for not fulfilling its obligations to race track employees and the racing public. And so have the horse owners for not living up to their obligations to their employees."

The survey was commissioned by the racing board in order to get "some hard demographic facts," she said. "We kept getting conflicting stories about the number of people on the backstretch, where they came from and what they need."

"Once we know what they tell us they need, we can arrange needs in terms of priority, short, middle and long range," she said.

Among the social services, Mrs. Reum cites education and health as among the most pressing. Basic education classes for backstretch employees are in their second year at Arlington Park. Teachers use a mobile classroom furnished by the racing board.

IN THE AREA OF health services, the Cook County Public Health Department has agreed to look at a program of testing and immunization to cut down on communicable disease, she said.

"We already know that there are basic human needs to be met on the backstretch. The community there is a microcosm of social problems of a highly mobile and impersonal society," she said.

Surveyors will also contact village officials to find out what local welfare agencies can do for backstretch employees.

"I found that many of the social service groups don't know about the backstretch. And then, many of them work on a referral basis," Mrs. Reum said.

Frank Charlton, director of health services for the Village of Arlington Heights, said yesterday that he had been interviewed by a doctor hired by the racing board about public health for backstretch employees.

"WE HAVE NOT experienced a crisis problem and have not had to intervene," Charlton told the interviewer.

He said that he was asked about the water supply at the track, which comes from a deep water well on the grounds.

A sampling of the water was tested and found to be very similar to village water, he said.

78 student workers will host employers

Seventy-eight Palatine High School students on work study programs will entertain their employers at dinner tonight at Uncle Andy's Cow Palace.

The 6:30 dinner for 175 persons is the eighth annual employers banquet planned and paid for by the students. For the most part candy sales were the source of income for the 14 office occupations (OO), 32 home economics related occupations (HERO) and the 32 industrial cooperative education (ICE) students.

Featured speaker will be Professor George Walter of Lawrence University. Walter is head of the education department and director of "Upward Bound," a program for disadvantaged youth.

Each student will present his employer with a plaque.

Among the students being given special recognition are seniors John Blyth, Mike Sorci, Larry Jasonowicz, Ralph Ackerman and Kip Christensen and junior Pat Lindgren who were on the honor roll during the year.

Larry also was the senior with the highest class rank and the best attendance record at school and work. He shares with John Blyth recognition for highest grades achieved consistently in related class and work experience.

Junior students recognized for attendance at school and work are John Krukenberg, Pat Lindgren, Mike Cartwright and Don Nelligen. Those getting highest grades at work and in class were Pat Lindgren, Bill Louis, Bill Thomson and Doug Tomek. Bill Thomson was the junior student with the highest class rank.

Awards for longest seniority with the same employer go to Wally Maklezwos, Paul Racza and David Todd. All of these students are in ICE.

IN HERO Pat Greco has the highest junior rank and Cindy VanDyke the highest senior rank. Recognition for perfect attendance at work goes to Pete Resek and Bill Hall. Bill also had perfect attendance at school. Rita Harrison and Pat Pettit were recognized for the most supervised hours worked.

Human Relations Commission revived

The defunct Palatine Human Relations Commission is being reactivated to deal with problems of the elderly, the young and the Spanish-speaking community.

Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones, in naming Glen-Ann Jicha, 141 Patricia Ln., as chairman, said: "I think the human relations commission can do a lot."

Previously, the commission dealt exclusively with problems involving open housing, according to Jones. The new charge, which will be explained more specifically next week, will be expanded, he said, to include such areas as "problems of the aged, drug problems, youth problems and other problems which touch our human lives."

Mrs. Jicha's term will expire May 1, 1976. She is a former Republican committeewoman in Palatine Township.

Mosquito abatement official anticipates record numbers

Mosquitos, including some potential disease-carrying breeds, could invade the area this summer in greater numbers than last year's record total.

That prediction came last night from Wilbur Mitchell, director of the Northwest Mosquito Abatement District, in an address before the Rolling Meadows City Council.

"The babies are there, and if the weather is right and the water is there, we're going to have mosquitos coming out of our ears," Mitchell told the council.

He said some of the mosquitos could be carriers of malaria, encephalitis and dog heart worm. Mitchell said samples of mosquito larvae taken from waters where the insect breeds indicate a potential mosquito population which will exceed last year's total. Mitchell added that last year was the worst he had experienced in 24 years with the district.

The increased total is due to the record amount of rainfall last year. Mosquitos breed near water.

MITCHELL SAID last year's weather hindered the district's abatement work, but said increased manpower and equipment this year could help abatement efforts.

He said 85 per cent of the district's work will be aimed at eliminating mosquitos before they reach their adult stage. This is done by spraying waters in which the insect breeds. Aerial spraying in the evening will be done to help eliminate mosquitos which escape the water spraying, he said.

The district, which covers a 245-square-mile area in the Northwest suburbs, could complete its work in Rolling Meadows in five days or less this year if weather permits, Mitchell said. Work last year was limited in the city to seven sprayings, he told the council.

In the response to questions from Mayor Roland Meyer and City Sanitarian Donald Schindler, Mitchell said the district would be willing to work with city Public Works crews on supplemental spraying of the city and in the training of city crews in abatement techniques.

Mitchell warned that efforts should be made to avoid having areas of stagnant water which will stand for more than five days. Such standing water should be sprayed with a thin coating of oil to kill mosquito larvae that could be nesting, he said.

He added mosquitos known to be carriers of dog heart worm, a fatal canine disease, have to date been evident in the Barrington area, but the danger of this spreading in the area would be heightened in July. He advised that preventive treatment for dogs can be started now to protect animals from possible infection.

3 Fountains balconies repaired, use barred

Temporary wooden support beams have been installed on most balconies at the Three Fountains apartment complex in Rolling Meadows, but city officials have not yet lifted a ban prohibiting their use.

Building and Zoning Officer Sverre Haug said yesterday residents of the complex should not use the balconies until clearance is given by the city. He said he has not yet authorized use because he has not been given adequate engineering drawings showing how the balconies are to be permanently repaired.

The ban was put into effect May 1 after a second and third floor balcony on building No. 10 in the complex's first phase fell from the building wall. No one was hurt in the incident, but city building officials inspected the remaining balcony structures and ruled them to be unsafe for use.

Haug said timbers supporting the balconies were rotted from weather and were not considered safe support for the structures.

TEMPORARY WOODEN supports have been installed by the Anvan Realty Co., managers of the complex's first phase, but Haug said the supports are only designed to prevent any other balconies from falling.

He said permanent steel supports will have to be installed before he will lift the ban.

Daniel O'Leary, attorney for Three Fountains, said yesterday he does not know when the permanent supports might be installed since original engineering drawings submitted to the city were not considered adequate. O'Leary said the company had proposed to install four columns to independently support each balcony, but the city wanted a more uniform design plan for the repairs.

He added the redrawing of plans will push the expected cost of the repair work even higher than the more than the $20,000 estimate. Some 96 balconies at the complex, including the two which fell from the complex, are involved in the repair work.

City officials have said the collapse of the third and second floor balconies were not caused by faulty construction. The balconies were originally built suspended from the building by timbers embedded into the brick walls.

The collapses occurred because of weakened and rotted timbers, building officials said.

Blood bank won't get city support

It appears city officials in Rolling Meadows have decided against supporting a blood banking program in the city.

Mayor Roland Meyer said this week he has let the matter drop for lack of interest on the part of city employees. He said department heads have discussed the possibility of a blood banking plan that would insure participants a supply of blood in the event of a medical need, but added there was little interest expressed in the program.

City officials had planned to use employee interest in a blood plan as a determining factor in deciding whether a city-wide blood program could be supported. Meyer said the decision to scrap the blood program idea for city employees did not necessarily overrule the possibility of an independent citywide plan. But he indicated the poor response from city employees toward the proposal means the city will not pursue the matter further.

The plan had originally been discussed by the board of health in October when a representative from the Red Cross spoke on that organization's blood banking program.

THE PROGRAM provides for an unlimited supply of blood to participants provided four units of blood per 100 members is donated yearly. Cost of blood to hospital patients averages about $10 per unit.

Blood banking programs have operated in Arlington Heights and Palatine, and interest in such programs heightened several months ago when hospitals warned of a blood shortage in the Chicago area.

City officials had prepared a questionnaire to be completed by city employees as a means to determine interest in a program. Of some 100 questionnaires distributed, only 28 were returned and of these 28 indicated a positive response toward the program.

Board of Health Pres. Kenneth Johnson had expressed a cool reaction to the need for a blood program, saying new techniques of freezing blood to preserve it almost indefinitely would greatly reduce the chances of shortages in the future.

Blood stored without freezing can be kept only 28 days.

Survey to determine backstretch conditions

The Illinois Racing Board has begun a survey of conditions and employees on the backstretch of Arlington Park Race Track.

The study is aimed at determining the needs of backstretch workers as well as the availability of local and county social services, according to Lucy Reum, chairman of the racing board's backstretch committee.

"We went with Arlington first because they opened the thoroughbred season and have the largest group of people on the backstretch," Mrs. Reum said.

Interviewers will talk to half of the nearly 800 men and women who care for the 1,000 thoroughbred horses stabled at Arlington Park during the racing season.

Preliminary results of the survey should be available in about two weeks, Mrs. Reum said. Information on community services will take longer to compile, about 5 to 6 weeks, she said.

"WE HAVE A TOTAL group of people on the backstretch who are very important to the financial health of the state, but who aren't receiving the services they need and are entitled to," she said.

"Racing associations have been sharply criticized for neglecting the backstretch. So has the state for not fulfilling its obligations to race track employees and the racing public. And so have the horse owners for not living up to their obligations to their employees."

The survey was commissioned by the racing board in order to get "some hard demographic facts," she said. "We kept getting conflicting stories about the number of people on the backstretch, where they came from and what they need."

"Once we know what they tell us they need, we can arrange needs in terms of priority, short, middle and long range," she said.

Among the social services, Mrs. Reum cites education and health as among the most pressing. Basic education classes for backstretch employees are in their second year at Arlington Park. Teachers use a mobile classroom furnished by the racing board.

IN THE AREA OF health services, the Cook County Public Health Department has agreed to look at a program of testing and immunization to cut down on communicable disease, she said.

"We already know that there are basic human needs to be met on the backstretch. The community there is a microcosm of social problems of a highly mobile and impersonal society," she said.

Surveyors will also contact village officials to find out what local welfare agencies can do for backstretch employees.

5% pay increase for school heads

Raises for High School Dist. 214 administrators will average 5 per cent for next year, unless the Dist. 214 board decides next month that's too high.

The board Monday authorized Supt. Edward Gilbert to draw up proposed merit salary increases for the district's 101 administrators using $110,000 more than was spent last year for salaries. The figure provides an average five per cent raise for administrators.

In addition, however, board members indicated they may decide to lower the amount available for raises if they don't like the way the individual raises come out. The five per cent increase is one per cent less than the amount originally recommended by Gilbert.

Gilbert told the board he will recommend individual salary increases at the June 4 meeting.

GILBERT SAID HE originally recommended a 6 per cent average raise based on the rising cost of living and on the general salary practices for teachers.

Board member Jack Costello, who recommended that the average be cut from six per cent to 5 per cent, said he was concerned because some administrators' raises in the past have been "shockingly high."

Costello added that some years Gilbert has "almost had to force some raises" to use up all the money allowed by the board.

"I just don't see 6 per cent as being in the cards," Costello said. "I can't help what other districts do around us but I think many of our administrators are quite well paid."

Last year the board provided for average three per cent raises for administrators, with some getting nothing and others getting increases of as much as 7 per cent. Costello said, "There were substantial raises available at 3 per cent and I think there will be substantial raises available at 5 per cent."

IN ADDITION, board members also disagreed about whether the $110,000 should be used to actually raise the newly adopted administrative salary scale or whether to keep minimums and maximums for salaries the same and just give raises within that framework.

Board members also deferred a final decision on whether to raise minimums and maximums for each job until June 4.

Murder case to grand jury

The case of a Wheeling Township man charged with murdering his wife has been turned over to the grand jury.

The grand jury will decide June 6 if John Smith, 403 Oriole Ln., will go to trial on charges brought against him by Cook County Sheriff's police. Police have charged Smith, 45, with stabbing his wife to death on May 16.

Smith, who police say apparently stabbed himself after stabbing his wife, appeared at his preliminary hearing yesterday in a wheelchair, according to police. Court Officer Irwin Kraut said Smith said nothing and "apparently has suffered a loss of memory as to the events."

Smith has been transferred from Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights to Bridewell Hospital, the county prison hospital in Chicago.

Police believe Smith stabbed his wife Irene, 53, in the stomach with a kitchen knife after a quarrel in their home in unincorporated Mount Prospect. Mrs. Smith was the mother of 10.

For many backstretch workers

Classroom: unfamiliar place

For many workers on the backstretch of Arlington Park Race Track, the classroom is an unfamiliar, even a frightening place.

But for the second straight year, a few of the men and women who groom and train the expensive thoroughbreds that race at Arlington Park are going to school. Some perhaps for the very first time.

Harper College, together with high school districts 211 and 214, are offering several basic education classes — including English as a second language, Spanish and creative art — for track employees.

The classes are held at night in a mobile classroom purchased and furnished by the Illinois Racing Board.

The racing board this year also is presenting a class in the breeding, care and training of horses. For the over 50 backstretch employees enrolled in this course, it is a chance to get an instructional look at a business they are immersed in daily.

"We felt it was successful last year, partially because it was the first time anything like this was ever done at a race track," said Noreen Lopez, an administrator with Harper's adult basic education program.

"I think we had a total of 20 students."

This year, there are 25 to 30 students attending classes two and three nights a week.

Part of the reason for the enrollment increase is that this year, unlike last, the classes are free. In 1972, to enroll, workers had to pay $6 a course, $10 for two classes.

Another incentive is the mobile classroom which is parked right in the backstretch — accessible and visible to the employees.

"Some of the students in the language class this year also were enrolled last year. I think the word of mouth is helping to promote the classes," Miss Lopez said.

The mobile classroom was purchased by the racing board and will be used at other tracks, said Lucy Reum, chairman of the board's backstretch committee.

"We don't want them (backstretch employees) to get the idea in any sense that they are second class citizens," she said.

Miss Lopez said plans are being made to bring in a tape recorder language lab for persons enrolled in the language classes.

The basics of drawing, sketching and painting will be taught in the creative arts class, which may lead to an exhibit of students' work.

Adult education classes on the back-stretch are an innovation for Illinois race tracks. Though less heralded than the implementation of "Trifecta" or "Quinnella" betting at Arlington Park, the program appears destined to have a pay off uniquely its own.

Palatine Township seeks attorney

Palatine Township officials are seeking a new township attorney to fill the position left vacant by Atty. Roger Bjorvik's resignation last month.

Although Supervisor Howard I. Olsen recommended several area lawyers for the post during this week's board meeting, the board chose to seek more applications from interested area attorneys.

June 2 is the deadline for attorneys to submit a letter of interest and a resume, addressed to Olsen, at the town hall, 37 N. Plum Grove Rd. The board expects to reach a final decision by the middle of June, after interviewing the attorneys who submit resumes.

Bjorvik resigned shortly after the April township election, when four new auditors were elected to the five-man board. Olsen is the only continuing voting member of the township's governing body.

When he submitted his resignation to Olsen, Bjorvik said he felt that this was the natural time to make the break, after working with the former board members for six years.

At the village level, Bjorvik had broken away from the Republican organization to run the Village Independent Party's unsuccessful reelection bid. He also serves as the Palatine village prosecutor.

Six 'See Chicago' trips slated by park district

"See Chicago" trips for persons anxious to get away from the suburbs for a day but unwilling to fight the traffic into the city are being planned by the Rolling Meadows Park District.

Six trips are planned for families and individuals interested in viewing some of Chicago's famous sights.

The first trip is scheduled for June 29 from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Participants will visit the Historical Society, Chinatown, Stephen Douglas Monument, Navy Pier and, if time permits, Lincoln Park Conservatory, Hull House, the Picasso, Gold Coast, Old Town and the Fire Academy.

White Sox Park will be the destination of the second outing on July 7 at 11 a.m. Participants will take in a White Sox game and be back in Rolling Meadows 1½ hours after the game ends.

A week later, on July 14, a trip is planned to Field Museum of Natural History and Shedd Aquarium from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The Museum of Science and Industry will be visited on July 28, the Lincoln Park Zoo on Aug. 4 and a boat trip on Lake Michigan will be featured Aug. 10.

Buses for all the trips will leave from the Rolling Meadows sports complex, 3900 Owl Dr. The fee for each trip is $2.50 for the first member of a family and $2 for each additional family member. The cost to register for all six trips is $12 for the first family member and $10 for each additional member.

FAA to pay two-thirds of $53,000 probe

Schaumburg trustees OK airport feasibility study

Culminating nearly three years of preliminary planning, Schaumburg trustees last night unanimously agreed to undertake a $53,000 airport feasibility study.

Their action was in concurrence with a recommendation of the village airport study unit committee.

The investigation, to be funded in two-thirds by the Federal Aviation Administration under a planning grant program, may take 5 months to two years to complete. The village has currently budgeted $20,000 to pay for its portion of the study.

The examination will be performed by Howard, Needles, Tammen and Bergendoff, a Chicago-based engineering consulting firm.

It will be done in two phases. The initial portion will determine need and feasibility of a municipally-owned airport. If its results are positive, an environmental impact study will follow.

THE CONSULTANT'S contract is open-ended and may be terminated at any time with the village remaining responsible only for costs incurred to date. Mayor Robert O. Atcher pointed out that the study is in no way limited to the present privately-owned Schaumburg Airport. It will examine a number of sites in or annexable to the village.

The contract form and FAA grant application had previously been reviewed by village attorney Jack Siegel. In the attorney's opinion, both documents were in proper form for execution.

The airport study has been discussed as the first stage in planning a regional transportation center in the village of Schaumburg.

In related action, trustees approved the appointment of Robert Gaines and Jim Timons to the airport study committee.

Tests reveal children's aptitudes drop in area

by JERRY THOMAS

Schaumburg Township children have dropped in national yearly comparisons of scores on the Iowa Basic Skills Tests, but are still above average.

Although Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 officials declined to reveal this year's scores until Thursday night, informed sources have said the levels for students in grades five through seven have dropped from previous years, and district administrators are concerned.

The results of the Iowa test, which compares children throughout the nation, will be discussed at an 8 p.m. Thursday meeting of the school board's education committee. The committee will meet in the instructional center in the northwest corner of the basement of Jane Addams Junior High School, 1621 W. Norwell Ln., Schaumburg.

A sampling of the district's students in grades three through seven, and not all the 14,000 children enrolled, were tested, said the sources. Third and fourth grades maintained their previous levels.

THE DISTRICT also has administered a Program Evaluation Design (PED) test, and the results of that will be available soon, officials said. The PED test was designed by the district over a three year period to evaluate its program of individually guided education (IGE). Recently adopted throughout the district, IGE was designed to allow each student to work to his fullest on ability groups, rather than just within one grade level.

Carl Seltzer, Dist. 54 curriculum director, said the PED test is a true diagnostic tool, and will tell the district in what areas of each subject a student shows weaknesses.

Also at Thursday night's meeting, committee chairman Mrs. Bonnie Hannon will discuss recruitment of junior and senior high school students who live in Dist. 54 for committee membership.

She is accepting applications to the 20-member committee from the students, who she feels may have valuable contributions when the committee deals with curriculum, programming and testing.

Although parents serve on all board committees, this is the first time young people have been invited to participate and vote on a Dist. 54 board of education committee.

Results of a survey of parent opinions on a new report card procedure recently adopted also will be discussed.

Long-range plans on agenda

Long-range planning and development will be discussed tonight by Hoffman Estates officials and a representative of the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission.

Jack Pahl, former Elk Grove Village president and current vice president of NIPPC, will speak at a joint meeting of the village plans commission, zoning board and village board.

Hoffman Estates Mayor Virginia Hayter said the meeting is designed to discuss common planning problems the village and NIPPC might be facing.

"We hope to get an idea of NIPPC's priorities so that we can cooperate," Mrs. Hayter said.

She also said the village hopes to gain some insight from Pahl based on his ex-

As contribution to Project Help

Cubs to clean creek's edge

Members of Cub Scout Pack 195 have volunteered to work the creek edge of Campanelli Park, Schaumburg, as their contribution to Project Help.

Another 15 boys, members of Schaumburg Boy Scout Troop 335, and three adult leaders also have offered their energies in the spring clean-up program.

Other volunteers to date for the June 2 environmental project include William Clatch, 383 Pleasant St., Hoffman Estates, and his 8-year-old daughter Debbie; Girl Scout Troop 482 and Boy Scout Troop 197, both of Hoffman Estates; Colleen Olson of 1808 Sussex, Hoffman Estates, and the Hoffman Estates Jaycee Wives.

Sponsored by environmental control committees in both villages, Project Help is an extension of clean-up programs conducted in the two villages during the past several years.

IN HOFFMAN ESTATES, roadways and lots will be cleaned. Specific sites have not been announced, but village public works trucks will accompany volunteers working along highways.

Nine areas in Schaumburg will be worked. They include Campanelli Park, areas surrounding Aldrin School on Boxwood Drive, Plum Grove and the Salt Creek and Atcher Park, Springguth Road.

In Sheffield Park on Seaton Street, south of a tennis court area, open spaces south of Colwyn Drive and east of the Hoover School construction site as well as Elm and Braintree Drive will be policed.

Schaumburg Park District will supply a truck for debris at Oak Hollow nature area south of Schaumburg Road.

Schaumburg volunteers are asked to assemble at 9 a.m. June 2 at the Great Hall; Hoffman Estates workers will meet at the north end of Golf-Rose Shopping Center parking lot at the same time.

Workers are asked to wear sturdy clothing and bring gloves. Slacks or long pants rather than shorts are recommended.

Plastic bags will be provided for litter collected during the project. Schaumburg areas, with the exception of Oak Hollow, will be serviced by Arc Disposal Co.

WHILE RESIDENTS of all ages are encouraged to join Project Help, children under 10 must be accompanied by a parent or group leader.

The work program will end at noon, when all volunteers are asked to report back to crew leaders. At that time each volunteer will receive a rose bush as an award for participating in Project Help.

Persons wishing to volunteer are asked to call The Herald, 394-2300, ext. 253.

Names of all individuals and organizations participating in Project Help will be printed in The Herald.

Man, 24, guilty of resisting officer

A 24-year-old Schaumburg man was found guilty last week in the Mount Prospect branch of Cook County Circuit Court of resisting a peace officer.

Leo Cushing, 1123 Country Club Ln., was fined $80 plus $10 court costs. Additional charges of criminal damage to property and assault were dropped.

The complainant on the latter two charges was Cushing's stepfather, Wayne Poppish. He withdrew his complaints prior to the Friday hearing.

All three charges stemmed from a Feb. 26 incident at Poppish's home, 22 S. Audrey Ln. Cushing allegedly had thrown several pieces of furniture and threatened Poppish with a kitchen knife.

Shangri La costs more than $23...

New homeowners in Barrington Square have found Shangri La costs more than $23 per month.

The $23 is what the homeowners pay for maintenance of the townhouse condominium development in Hoffman Estates, and it isn't enough — at least not to handle the responsibilities that go with private ownership streets.

All streets within the development except Governors Lane, the main access road, are owned by the Barrington Square Homeowners Association. Shirley Gibbons, association vice president, this week asked the Village of Hoffman Estates to look into acceptance of the other streets as public roadways, to be maintained at village expense.

MRS. GIBBONS is one of the earliest residents of Barrington Square. She and her family moved into their townhouse unit 2½ years ago, and the development only opened six months previously.

Under the terms of condominium ownership, she and the other Barrington Square purchasers agreed to assess themselves $19 per month in addition to their mortgages to pay for street maintenance and snow plowing, and upkeep of all other commonly owned areas. They thought they were buying Shangri La for $19 per month, but even this is not enough, she said.

The homeowners association this year will pay $20,000, just for winter snow removal. It has obtained an estimate of $80,000 to repair only one of the existing streets. There now are about 475 resident families, with the number increasing as more units are sold. But the number of streets also is increasing, with the completion of each phase in the project.

Within five to six years, said Mrs. Gibbons, the association expects it will have to resurface all the streets now existing in the development. They have been told that is the maximum time they can anticipate without having to make major repairs.

The new homepurchasers did not expect this type of expense, said Mrs. Gibbons.

"No one has lived with it (the condominium concept) long enough to understand the idea of private streets. It's a phenomenal undertaking," she said.

TO ADEQUATELY finance the street maintenance that will be necessary, the association estimates it will be necessary for each resident family to chip in $75 per month, a figure Mrs. Gibbons described as an "enormous fee."

Mrs. Gibbons noted the association members pay village and motor fuel taxes for street repair, just as do owners of single-family homes on private lots, "and get nothing in return."

This is why they have asked the village to take over the responsibility of snow plowing and street repair. They have no idea whether it would be legal for the village to do so, or what ramifications there might be from such a move. But they would like the possibility examined.

Mayor Virginia Hayter said yesterday the village is willing to study the problem. Village Mgr. George Longmeyer pointed out the possible precedent-setting aspects of the question. Perhaps the village could be forced, if it complies with this request, to accept ownership and thereby responsibility for all streets now privately owned. Other condominium projects and apartment developments have private streets too.

AND NOT ALL the Barrington Square streets meet village codes, said Longmeyer. Some are not wide enough, and are little more than parking areas.

Another factor will be cost. The village now is preparing its budget for the fiscal year that started May 1. One section proposed for the budget would spend $128,000 in federal revenue sharing funds, plus $17,000 in village funds, to repair less than 10,000 feet of roadway. Since the homeowners association does not know just how much street they are asking the village to accept, the potential cost of taking them is not yet known.

'Life Singers' to perform

"The Life Singers," a group of Christian teenagers representing 16 area churches, will perform at 6:30 p.m. Sunday at the United Church of the Cross, United Presbyterian, West Higgins Road, Hoffman Estates.

The performance is open to the public and there is no admission charge. The musical deals with authentic issues, and Bible based truths, said a church spokesman.

Veterinary headquarters

The National headquarters of the American Veterinary Medical Association (AVMA) will be established in Schaumburg in the Woodfield Park development, according to developer J. Emil Anderson and Son, Inc., Des Plaines.

The AVMA purchased a 100,000 square foot area on Meacham Road, across from Woodfield Mall. Groundbreaking for the new 22,000 square foot building is scheduled for this summer, with occupancy slated for early 1974. The AVMA, founded in 1883, has more than 23,000 members.

St. Peter commencement

Commencement exercises will be held June 13 at St. Peter Lutheran School, Schaumburg.

The ceremony will be held in the school gymnasium. Diplomas will be awarded to 46 eighth graders. The American Legion will present awards to four members of the class.

Marvin Baumann, chairman of the Board of Christian Day School, will issue diplomas, and a guest speaker will address the assembly.

Graduating are Bruce Anderson, Steven Anderson, Belinda Balk, Elizabeth Barber, Patricia Benning, Michael Bristow, Jeannette Broz, Stephen Bryant, Donald Busche, Steven Crane, Dwayne Flene.

Also Cynthia Foerster, Lorna Froid, Ellen Goltzman, Mark Gray, Daryl Harford, Michael Hilsabeck, Deborah Insel, Donna Kemnitz, Gary Kerschke, Lorraine Kuntz, Mark Lau, Teresa Lundgren, Liane Lynch, Ruth Maas, Herbert Mueller, Scott Musil, Patricia Nehmow, Karen Newman, Brenda Novack, Stephen Olson, Yvonne Ostrom, Timothy Pa-cey.

Also John Piontek, Dana Priest, Burke Robinson, Glen Rogstad, Elizabeth Schendel, Beth Schoenegge, Virginia Spitzer, Michael Thomas, Gregory Thurston, Daral Vining, Cynthia Wachholz, Cheryl Watson, and Larry Zagorski.

Jaycees seek new members

A membership drive has been announced by the Hoffman Estates Jaycees.

The organization, open to all men between the ages of 21 and 35, has invited all prospective members to a meeting at 7:30 p.m. June 6 at the Hoffman Estates Village Hall, 1200 N. Gannon Dr., Hoffman Estates.

The group has been involved in many community service activities and programs.

An outline of programs for the coming year will be presented at the meeting.

"The program will show how Jaycees function within the community of Hoffman Estates and what our plans are," said Bob Brenner, the group's membership drive chairman.

More information about the meeting can be obtained by calling Brenner at 882-9259.

Community baseball week declared

The start of the Little League baseball season has drawn extra recognition in Hoffman Estates this year.

Mayor Virginia Hayter approved a proclamation Monday designating this week as Hoffman Estates Community Baseball Association Week.

Baseball Association Pres. George Rush accepted the Proclamation and thanked the board for its support of the athletic program.

Rush said opening day festivities will begin Saturday at 9:15 a.m. A parade of 70 to 80 cars will travel from the Hoffman Estates Village Hall, 1200 N. Gannon Dr., to Chino Park at Evanston Avenue and Illinois Boulevard.

Cook County Sheriff Richard Elrod and Mayor Hayter will throw out the first balls of the new season.

Both softball and baseball games will be played at Chino Park and Sloan Park, at Bode Road and Western Avenue.

Rush said that more than 1,000 boys and girls are registered for this year's program.

This is the first summer of operation for the association. The group was formed earlier this year by members of the Hoffman Estates Athletic Association and the Independent Baseball Association, with the assistance of the Hoffman Estates Park District.

Last weekend several teams from the program played a number of exhibition games at Thilens Stadium in Chicago.

Saturday's games will officially start league competition for the summer season.

Hoffman Estates Jaycees cited for projects

The Hoffman Estates Jaycees recently won two second-place certificates for service projects they sponsored during the year, the state organization announced at its annual convention.

Awards for "RAMP" and for Mid City South Dakota Flood Relief Project were received.

"RAMP," aimed at the passage of an ordinance requiring all new public buildings to provide easy access for handicapped persons. The success of the project is evidenced by the Hoffman Estates Municipal Building with its ramps and extra wide doors.

PETE SMITH, a member of the Hoffman Estates Jaycees for over five years, was instrumental in the "RAMP" project. He also promoted the project at the state level and it was chosen as a statewide Jaycee project.

Bob Brenner, Jaycee member for three years, chaired the Rapid City South Dakota Flood Relief Project. The program marked the first time emergency relief passed from one Jaycee chapter to another in a separate state.

The funds and other emergency items went directly to the Jaycees in Rapid City for distribution to local residents in need.

In the statewide Jaycee competition, there were over 350 entries by local chapters. Rarely has any one chapter won two awards for two different projects in the same year.

Float applications for the July 4 parade are being accepted by the Independence Day Committee of Schaumburg Township. Detailed information concerning construction must accompany all float applications.

The parade this year, with the theme, "It's a Kid's World," will begin at 10 a.m., assembling at Illinois Boulevard and Schaumburg Road. Floats may be entered in the theme category or the patriotic or commercial divisions.

Float ideas and parade line-up will also be aided by prompt return of the application. The parade will also incorporate a children's pet parade and a bicycle brigade.

The John Sheahan Marching Award will be presented to the best marching unit. Sheahan was one of the founders of the stay-at-home, old-fashioned Fourth.

The Independence Day Committee began in 1961 at a meeting of the Christian Family movement to encourage residents to stay off the highway and to regenerate patriotism. All organizations are invited to send representatives to the monthly meetings.

The next meeting will be held May 25 at 8 p.m. in the Hoffman Estates Municipal Building, 1200 N. Gannon Dr.

Parade Marshal Armand Beghin said convertibles are hard to obtain this year. Anyone who is willing to drive a convertible in the parade to carry dignitaries to the reviewing stand may contact Beghin at 882-5425.

Special session for pool owners planned in area

Swimming pool owners in the Schaumburg Township area will have a special opportunity to get tips on the care and feeding of their pools at a special meeting arranged in Hoffman Estates.

John Schultz, a Cook County sanitary engineer, will speak at 7:30 p.m. June 13 in Vogelei Park Barn, 650 W. Higgins Road, Hoffman Estates.

Schultz inspects public swimming pools in this section of the county, and will offer citizens the benefit of his experience.

Among factors he will note is the opportunity for pools to become breeding grounds for mosquitos. Pool owners can save themselves the aggravation of an especially large mosquito population in their pool area by properly filtering and chlorinating the water. Without the filtration and chlorination, the water becomes stagnant and can harbor mosquito larva.

Water overflow from the pool, where users have splashed the water onto the ground, can make marshy ground another mosquito habitat. Schultz will help pool owners deal with that situation, too.

His talk will be followed by a question and answer period.

Although the program is jointly sponsored by the Village of Hoffman Estates and the Hoffman Estates Park District, it is open to pool owners anywhere in the area. Village Building Inspector Dan Murphy, who helped arrange the program, said "we'd be glad to have all interested parties."

Business group urges new sign height in village

Members of Greater Schaumburg Association of Commerce and Industry have agreed to recommend that the village permit business signs a maximum of 30 feet high rather than adopt a policy of "low profile" markers.

This opinion was expressed to the village plan commission in a letter drafted last week by Don Rouser, executive director of the group.

"The board of directors of the association has carefully considered pending changes in the village sign ordinance and it is our decision to request plan commission consideration of a maximum of 30 feet," Rouser said.

Rouser said association members view 12 feet signs recommended by the plan commission "safety hazards in the event of an accident involving a rolling vehicle."

Hoffman Estates' recent decision to allow business signs up to 30 feet was a consideration in the decision, he added.

HOWEVER, HE said a recent survey of 19 suburban communities has revealed all allow signs in excess of 15 feet. "And most range in the thirties," he added.

In other association business, Rouser reported "strong feelings toward getting together" resulting from polling members concerning possible merger with Hoffman Estates Chamber of Commerce.

Though the Schaumburg investigation is not yet complete, ballots received thus far indicate that three members prefer to retain separate groups, six have opted for more cooperation between business groups in the two communities, and seven favor merger.

Murder case to grand jury

The case of a Wheeling Township man charged with murdering his wife has been turned over to the grand jury.

The grand jury will decide June 6 if John Smith, 405 Oriole Ln., will go to trial on charges brought against him by Cook County Sheriff's police. Police have charged Smith, 45, with stabbing his wife to death on May 16.

Smith, who police say apparently stabbed himself after stabbing his wife, appeared at his preliminary hearing yesterday in a wheelchair, according to police. Court Officer Irwin Kraut said Smith said nothing and "apparently has suffered a loss of memory as to the events."

Smith has been transferred from Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights to Bridewell Hospital, the county prison hospital in Chicago.

Spots language, hearing problems

by KATHERINE BOYCE

When Debbie was 4 she had the vocabulary of a 2½-year-old.

She had an infection in both ears since she was an infant. The doctor treating her said her language problem was probably not related to the infection and she would learn more words as she grew older.

But preliminary tests by SLIDES, a state funded program to test preschool children for hearing and vision handicaps, showed that Debbie did have a hearing problem. She was referred to a hearing specialist by SLIDES and is now wearing hearing aids in both ears. Debbie is doing well in school now, said Joan Wootton, hearing consultant for the program and her "vocabulary is growing by leaps and bounds."

Debbie is an unusual case, said Helen Appeldoorn, director of the program. Most children tested don't have such serious handicaps, she said, but even a minor hearing or vision problem can put a child at a disadvantage in the classroom.

A child with a mild handicap, one who doesn't hear well but is not deaf, or doesn't see well but is not blind, often goes unnoticed by parents and teachers. The child is usually not aware of the problem because he is not used to hearing or seeing any other way.

THESE HANDICAPS often affect a child's education, usually his language ability. He may have an underdeveloped vocabulary because words sound distorted or are inaudible or he may not be able to see printed words and letters clearly. Too often this child appears to be just a slow learner. When the problem is recognized it can often be treated or the child can be placed in a special class to compensate for his handicap.

The job of SLIDES is to identify the mild handicap before the child enters school. The program was created by the state in 1968 after passage of a federal law granting state money to test children between age 2½ and 5 for mild handicaps. The program office, located in Washington School in Park Ridge, serves children in 49 school districts in Cook and Lake County.

Testing is performed free in local schools or in the slidesmobile, van equipped with testing instruments that is parked at each of the school districts every year. The slidesmobile is testing children in Schaumburg at Dirksen School this week at Keller Junior High School, May 29 to June 1 at Keller Junior High School, May 29 to June 1 at Nathan Hale School, June 1 through 8 and at the Des Plaines City Hall June 28 and 29. Parents should register their preschool children at the local school district.

Identifying learning problems among preschoolers is especially important, said Miss Wootton, because most commu-

THE SLIDEMOBILE contains equipment used to test the hearing and vision abilities of preschool children in the north and northwest suburbs. A small percentage of the children tested have a handicap, are referred to a specialist for treatment and may be placed in special learning programs when they enter school. The slidesmobile will test children at several schools in the area during May and June.

nication skills, like language ability, are learned in the first three years of life. After a child reaches age 6 he has passed the period when learning skills is easiest, she said. After he enters school it is difficult for the handicapped child to catch up with his peers.

The preliminary tests administered by SLIDES are called screening, said Miss Appeldoorn. They do not diagnose a handicap, they only show that a handicap may exist. The children are then referred to a specialist for further examination and treatment.

ABOUT ONE-THIRD of the preschoolers in the area come in for testing each year, a total of about 10,000 children. Of these children 2.5 per cent have a hearing handicap and 3.5 per cent have a vision handicap. About 96 per cent who are referred to a specialist have needed treatment.

The slidesmobile is equipped with a soundproof room where children are tested for hearing problems. The child wears earphones and listens to a variety of tones. When he hears a sound he raises his hand.

A child's vision is tested as he looks into an instrument and sees a slide of animal pictures, said Helen Gibbons, vision consultant. He must tell the examiner which figure a capital E points toward.

When a parent registers his child, he is given a game to take home and play to prepare the child for the tests. Some children are still frightened by the testing instruments and can't be examined. They are asked to come back for testing in a few months. All children should be tested each year because some handicaps may disappear and recur later.

SLIDES FOLLOWS the progress of children whose handicaps have been identified. The office works closely with doctors treating the children and with school personnel if the child enters a special learning program when he enrolls in school.

Two other services provided by SLIDES are testing the acoustics of classrooms and testing the accuracy of equipment used in schools for children who have hearing problems.

Equipment is tested to determine whether it meets with the manufacturers' claims. The program contributes the test results to a statewide study designed to help schools purchase the best equipment.

Testing acoustics in classrooms is a service provided by SLIDES since last

Conant production outstanding

Brigadoonians light, lively

by MARILYN HEISER

In another hundred years, the Scottish village of Brigadoon and all its inhabitants will be only one day older. Through a miracle, the villagers wake up only one day each 100 years, carry on their life just as before, and return to sleep.

Last weekend, the Brigadoonians were very much awake and singing in Conant High School's production of the Alan Jay Lerner and Frederick Loewe musical, Donald L. Breshears directed the student production.

Brigadoon is a magical village which fades in and out of the Highland mists. The high school students with Scottish brogues, Highland sword dances, kilts and scarves in a multitude of plaids, admirably recreated the spirit and the import of "Brigadoon."

Two Americans, vintage 1973, wander into Brigadoon on a hunting trip. Tommy and Jeff are mystified by the old-fashioned ways of the villagers, until they learn of the miracle which captured Brigadoon as it was 200 years ago.

IN THE COURSE of the play, Tommy falls in love with Scottish lass Fiona, while Jeff keeps up his humorous banter of cynicism, always mindful of the real world. In parallel action, Charlie and Jean, two villagers, celebrate their wedding day, after at least a 100-year engagement.

As Brigadoon's day of wakefulness passes, Tommy reluctantly decides to love the village for his old familiar life in New York. Unhappy, lonely, and missing the meaning of Brigadoon and Fiona, he returns to Scotland, dragging Jeff along.

Once again miracle opens the door to the sleeping Brigadoon and the musical ends on a happy note.

The story is primarily a vehicle for the well-known songs of Lerner and Loewe. Several humorous songs add much needed comic relief to the sentiment and sweetness of the main love story.

Shari Ferguson, as Meg, the free-loving Scottish lass looking for a husband, was especially winning with the enthusiasm and vigor she conveyed in her comic songs, "The Love of My Life," and "My Mother's Wedding Day."

ALL THE LEADS added to the play:

Jerry Armstrong as Tommy, Linda Williams as Fiona, Chuck Mustfeldt as Jeff, Tom Citrano as Charlie and Robin Sebastian as Jean.

However, Citrano deserves special mention for his overall acting ability and good voice. Not only was he very much at home on stage, he was convincing in his part, whether singing or speaking.

Armstrong, with his exceptionally fine voice, made a winsome team with Miss Williams. Mustfeldt, the applause indicated, was an audience favorite, and on stage he won respect for his droll performance.

A note of praise goes to Ed Bell, as village sage, Mr. Lundle, who managed to walk, talk, and look extremely old, a trick for a high school student.

STAGE DIRECTOR Patricia Elmen, student director Judy Johnson and choreographer Jane Metcalfe did outstanding jobs, maneuvering the chorus scenes. Instead of the usual job standing around singing, the chorus members sat naturally much of the time, and entered and exited gracefully.

Off stage, a second chorus added their voices without crowding the stage. Part of the creative stage treatment was also due to the flexibility of the three-quarter or in the round stage.

The orchestra, under the direction of Stephen Warbler, added to the evening's enjoyment, although at times they seemed not quite forceful enough.

As Tommy debates leaving Brigadoon, Mr. Lundle wisely says, "It is the hardest thing in the world to give up everything — but usually it is the only way to get everything."

That phrase may have more truth for the hard-working students after they put on such an enjoyable evening of Scottish lore, merriment, and song.

Hoffman Plaza gains final approval for second phase Village officials Monday gave final approval for plans for the second phase of the Hoffman Plaza Shopping Center.

The approval will allow developers to begin final redevelopment of the center, which is located at Higgins and Roselle roads.

The plans, which were deferred last week, call for construction of a new post-office and a Goodyear Tire store, plus remodeling of the present shopping complex.

The first phase of development, which is nearly completed, includes a new and enlarged Jewel Food Store and a number of other shops and stores.

The village delayed action last week so it could determine if the proposed tire store fell within the businesses authorized by B-2 zoning.

Trustee William Cowin requested that the board approve the entire plan, including the site for the tire store.

The board approved the motion without any discussion. Only Trustee Dyrle Rathman voted against approval, and he did not explain the reason for his opposition.

In other action, Mayor Virginia Hayter reported she met last week with Henry Buhrmann, administrator of the Schaumburg branch of Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center.

She said Buhrmann promised to keep Hoffman Estates officials informed of the medical center's plans to develop the Schaumburg facility.

To meet expansion needs

Bank officials weigh plan to construct new building

A new Mount Prospect State Bank building is being studied by bank officials as one solution to the bank's expansion needs.

While bank officials have not committed themselves to a definite expansion plan, a new building is one of their options, Howard Alton, bank president, said yesterday. Last week, village officials agreed to have the planning commission work with the bank on its expansion by late summer or fall this year.

"There is nothing planned with regard to a new building," Alton said. "Everything is in the talking stage. So there is no use speculating."

However, it appears that talking has been fairly specific. One village source said a site being considered for a new bank is just north of the bank's current drive-in facilities in the block between Emerson and Maple streets.

AT LEAST two homes would have to be removed if a new bank were to be located there. Mayor Robert D. Telchert said that part of the discussions last week at lunch with Alton concerned the possibility of moving the homes to another location in the village.

"The people we've talked to have nothing definite planned," Telchert said. "We just had some free talking on possibilities."

He said the planning commission will work with the bank because "the bank definitely does want to expand in some form and so does the village." Some of those plans, he added, require variances from the village codes as to setbacks and height.

"An overall plan for downtown is a several year project and meanwhile, people aren't just going to sit," Telchert said. He sees a move by the bank as the first step toward a renovation of the downtown area. The planning commission is to begin study of ways of renovation this summer.

ALTON SAID the bank was in no way ready to go to the village seeking permits to build or even to move homes. He said the bank was still "making deals."

Alternatives available to them other than a new building, he said would include adding on to the current building at Emerson Street and Busse Avenue. Such expansion could not add height to the building, however.

When the bank does expand, it will be the seventh expansion in the 63-year history of the financial institution. The original 1911 bank was in a building at the northeast corner of Main Street and Busse Avenue. In 1928, the bank moved to new quarters at the northwest corner of the same intersection. An addition to that building was constructed in 1954.

The current bank building was built in 1958, with the second floor added in 1964. The computer facility off of Maine Street was added in 1967 and the motor bank was opened in 1971. (When the motor bank was built, several old homes were destroyed to make room.) The bank was founded by William Busse Sr., and has been run by the Busses, and now the Altons, since then.

Proposals for River Road apartments to be studied

Two proposals to build a total of 332 apartments and condominiums along River Road in Mount Prospect will be discussed at tonight's village board building committee hearing.

Celsol-McGuire Industries Inc. is asking the village's approval to build 192 apartments or condominiums on a 10-acre site on River Road, north of Euclid Avenue. George Doetsch wants his 5.2 acres at the northwest corner of River and Foundry roads rezoned for 140 apartments.

Both rezoning petitions have received strenuous objections from residents of the area and both have been turned down by the plan commission. However, the village board voted July 18, 1972 to initially approve the Doetsch rezoning. The change never became law because a rezoning ordinance was never voted on by the village board.

Village Trustee Patrick J. Link, building committee chairman, said he was rehearing both cases in committee because a change in village board committees was made May 1. The case had been heard previously by the judiciary committee.

"I am not satisfied the board should be hearing the case (Doetsch) with a recommendation from an old committee," Link said. Link, who lives in the area of the two proposed developments, has spoken out against a similar development proposed for River Road, north of Camp McDonald Road.

LINK'S MEETING begins at 8 p.m. in the Municipal Building, 112 E. Northwest Hwy. He said he expects several residents to appear in objection to the two projects.

For the Doetsch property, the village board gave preliminary approval for 140 living units in a four-story building, with a light commercial use area on the southeast corner of the property. Robert DiLeonardi, Doetsch's attorney, at first presented a petition for either a five-story, 172-unit apartment building or 140 apartments in a five-story building, with the bottom floor being commercial only.

Edwin McGuire, of Celsol-McGuire Industries, said at a Dec. 15, 1972 hearing that the decision on whether his 192 units would be sold as condominiums or rented as apartments had not been made. The bedroom mix he gave was 128 two-bedroom and 64 one-bedroom units.

Although both projects were first discussed early in 1972, many factors have contributed to the long delay in settling the requests. A moratorium on new building permits, begun last fall, didn't expire until May 1. The moratorium was to allow time for the preparation of the village's flood control program.

The flood program has yet to be adopted by the village board and this could cause a further delay in the final village board votes on the apartment projects.

The plan commission, which then studied zoning requests such as these, vetoed both plans because of recommendations made in a proposal to amend the comprehensive village plan. Hearings on those recommendations have yet to be conducted.

Many residents, village trustees and plan commission members think that once the go-ahead is given to either of these developments, a precedent will be set that will eventually lead to apartment developments all along River Road in Mount Prospect, much of which is now single-family residential or vacant.

SHARON GRIEGER displays three of the eight pieces of sculpture that now can be borrowed from the Mount Prospect Public Library, 14 E. Busse Ave. The sculptures, which arrived in December, can be borrowed for up to four weeks at the cost of $1 each. The three reproductions here are "Rhython in Form of a Ram's Head," an Etruscan piece from about 300 B.C.; "Fertility Doll," a Ghana tribal piece; and "The Bee," by Gaston Lachaise, an American who died in 1935. Mrs. Grieger is the new reference librarian.

5% raises for school heads

A 5 per cent across-the-board salary increase has been approved for all administrators and principals in Mount Prospect Dist. 57.

Since Supt. Richard Percy is resigning in June, the increase will apply only to the principals and Asst. Supt. J. C. Busenhart and Asst. Supt. Dwight Hall.

The increase means that Busenhart will receive $24,875 next year. This is a raise of $1,175 over last year. Hall will receive $23,310, which is $1,100 more than last year.

Salaries for principals will vary since all are at different levels. Each one however, will receive five per cent more than last year. The one exception to this is Jan Rodriguez, principal at Lions Park School. Mrs. Rodriguez will receive the five per cent increase plus $500. The administration recommended the extra $500 to try to equalize Mrs. Rodriguez' salary with the other principals. Mrs. Rodriguez was one of the most recently hired principals.

According to Busenhart, the increase will cost the district $7,400 more than last year for administrative salaries.

SINCE THE Dist. 57 board and the Mount Prospect Education Association (MPEA) have not completed negotiations (continued on page 3)

Prayer Breakfast to be held today

The annual Mount Prospect Jaycees Mayor's Prayer Breakfast will begin at 8:30 a.m. today at the Old Orchard Country Club.

The Rev. David J. Quill of St. Mark Lutheran Church will be the speaker. Tickets, which may be purchased at the door, are $3.50 each.

Jim Keister of the Jaycees said the purpose of the breakfast is "to bring together local businessmen and religious leaders with village citizens for the purpose of establishing brotherly togetherness and communication."

The breakfast is patterned after the President's Prayer Breakfast, an annual event at the White House.

PHIA going to Supreme Court?

The Prospect Heights Improvement Association (PHIA) is considering taking its battle for incorporation of Prospect Heights to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Jack Gilligan, PHIA president, said yesterday the PHIA has not ruled out appealing to the U.S. Supreme Court, even though the Illinois Supreme Court twice refused to hear the case. The Illinois Supreme Court's second refusal came last week.

"It's bad news for us and hurts us," Gilligan said. "But it doesn't end all hope in the courts."

Since the PHIA filed an incorporation petition two years ago, Wheeling and Arlington Heights have objected to the proposed city of about 13,000 residents. The Cook County Circuit Court and the Illinois Court of Appeals have upheld their objections.

Gilligan said PHIA officials will meet this week or next to discuss further court strategy. He said Don Kreger, attorney for the PHIA, recommends against filing an appeal with the U.S. Supreme Court. Kreger could not be reached for comment yesterday.

"But there is a lot of support for going to the U.S. Supreme Court among PHIA members. We have to discuss it. We don't know the cost involved," Gilligan said. "If we do have other alternatives, then there is no point going the route that will cost money and may not be effective."

GILLIGAN AND other PHIA officials are still hoping to get consent for the incorporation from Arlington Heights, Wheeling and Mount Prospect. The PHIA is discussing boundaries with Arlington Heights and Wheeling. Mount Prospect officials have indicated they will probably agree to the incorporation.

While talks with Wheeling have not begun, PHIA officials have met several times with Arlington Heights officials. Arlington Heights trustees Monday night agreed they wanted Dale Avenue to be the boundary between the village and the proposed city. This would mean that residents on Waterman Avenue, west of Dale Avenue, would be in Arlington Heights.

"We can't agree to Dale Avenue," Gilligan said. He said the PHIA is committed to including Waterman in the city's boundaries because Waterman residents want to be part of Prospect Heights.

The PHIA is also hoping that legislation pending in the Illinois General Assembly will be passed, thus removing the consent requirement for incorporation as a city of 7,500 residents or more. The House of Representatives bill, sponsored by State Rep. Robert Juckett, R-Park Ridge, has passed the House and is on its way to the Senate.

A SIMILAR bill sponsored by State Sen. Bradley Glass, R-Northfield, is pending in the Senate. Jack Siegel, attorney for the village of Arlington Heights, said Monday that Glass intends to try to amend the bill to give neighboring municipalities a chance to object to the proposed boundaries of an area requesting incorporation.

Glass could not be reached yesterday to confirm Siegel's statement.

Gilligan said he agrees that neighboring villages should have a chance to object to boundaries but said the PHIA does not want the bills amended. He said he is afraid if Glass tries to amend his bill, it will die before a vote is taken.

Raises for high school heads

Raises for High School Dist. 214 administrators will average 5 per cent for next year, unless the Dist. 214 board decides next month that's too high.

The board Monday authorized Supt. Edward Gilbert to draw up proposed merit salary increases for the district's 101 administrators using $110,000 more than was spent last year for salaries. The figure provides an average five per cent raise for administrators.

In addition, however, board members indicated they may decide to lower the amount available for raises if they don't like the way the individual raises come out. The five per cent increase is one per cent less than the amount originally recommended by Gilbert.

Gilbert told the board he will recommend individual salary increases at the June 4 meeting.

GILBERT SAID HE originally recommended a 6 per cent average raise based on the rising cost of living and on the general salary practices for teachers.

Board member Jack Costello, who recommended that the average be cut from six per cent to 5 per cent, said he was concerned because some administrators' raises in the past have been "shockingly high."

Costello added that some years Gilbert has "almost had to force some raises" to use up all the money allowed by the board.

"I just don't see 6 per cent as being in the cards," Costello said. "I can't help what other districts do around us but I think many of our administrators are quite well paid."

Last year the board provided for average three per cent raises for administrators, with some getting nothing and others getting increases of as much as 7 per cent. Costello said, "There were substantial raises available at 3 per cent and I think there will be substantial raises available at 5 per cent."

IN ADDITION, board members also disagreed about whether the $110,000 should be used to actually raise the newly adopted administrative salary scale or whether to keep minimums and maximums for salaries the same and just give raises within that framework.

Board members also deferred a final decision on whether to raise minimums and maximums for each job until June 4.

ing the district's finances. "It's simply a matter of evaluating the books and getting the IEA's opinion as opposed to the board's opinion," Johnson said.

Johnson said that he thought the MPEA would be asking for another meeting with the board soon.

Sunset principal Pedersen resigns

Roger Pedersen has resigned as principal of Sunset Park School, effective in June.

Pedersen, appointed principal last year, said he is resigning for personal reasons. "I just felt as though I wanted to get back into the classroom," he said. This was his first year as a principal.

According to Supt. Richard Percy, Pedersen will remain in Dist. 57 next year as a classroom teacher. Percy said he and Earl Sutter, the new superintendent, will confer on where Pedersen will teach.

tions, there is no estimate on what teachers' salaries will cost the district next year.

Both the board and the MPEA suspended negotiations in April after the MPEA asked for a new salary schedule. Under the MPEA proposal, a beginning teacher with a bachelor's degree would receive about a 9.2 per cent increase over last year. All other salaries would be raised relative to the raise in base pay, according to Dan Vondran, MPEA negotiations chairman.

The board, however, has offered teachers a proposal which would give each teacher returning to the district in the fall about a 2.5 per cent increase plus $100. However, all salaries would be based on amounts in the current salary schedule, computed according to experience and education.

According to Dave Johnson, one of the members of the MPEA negotiating team, the MPEA is waiting now for the IEA (Illinois Education Association, of which the MPEA is a member) to finish audit-

Meet today, tomorrow on school work

Elk Grove Township School Dist. 59 will have public meetings today and tomorrow to explain a proposed $1.25 million remodeling plan for two junior high schools.

The school district is seeking to pass a bond referendum June 9 to finance the cost of remodeling Grove Junior High School and Dempster Junior High School.

If the referendum passes, the tax rate will increase three cents per $100 assessed valuation for all district taxpayers, according to school district figures. The current bond-and-interest rate is 35 cents per $100. In next year's budget, the rate is expected to drop to 47 cents per $100 valuation.

The increase, if the referendum passes, would bring the rate to 50 cents per $100, which is below the current rate.

Today's meeting will be at 8 p.m. at Grove Junior High School, 777 Elk Grove Blvd., Elk Grove Village.

TOMORROW'S MEETING will be at 8 p.m. at Dempster Junior High School, 420 Dempster St., Mount Prospect.

Principals of the schools will conduct tours through the buildings at 8 p.m. to point out the proposed changes.

After the tours, Allen Sparks, school board president; James Erwitl, district superintendent; and Scott Kelley, architect for the remodeling work, will talk about why the district wants to do the remodeling.

Area sanitary districts form group

Nine area sanitary districts, including four from Prospect Heights, have formed a regional association to increase cooperation and share information.

The new Cook County Association of Sanitary Districts was formed at the urging of the Prospect Heights Old Town Sanitary District (OTSD). Supt. Dick Schuldt said OTSD took the initiative because it is the largest sanitary district in the area.

Other members of the new association are the Country Gardens Sanitary District, Prospect Heights Sanitary District, Wolf Mandel Sanitary District, all of Prospect Heights; Prospect Meadows Sanitary District, serving the unincorporated Prospect Meadows subdivision; Forest River Sanitary District, serving the unincorporated Forest River subdivision; Glenbrook Sanitary District, Northbrook; Oak Meadows Sanitary District, Des Plaines and the Pinegate Subdivision, Arlington Heights.

The association elected officers at a meeting Monday night. They are Schuldt, president; Willard Beaser, director of the Oak Meadows district, first vice-president; Myron Helmerle of the Country Gardens district, second vice-president; Ken Bodle of Glenbrook district, secretary; and Harold Hodge, of the Pinegate district, treasurer.

Schuldt said the association will now concentrate on getting new members from other areas of Cook County. Dues are $25 per year per sanitary district. Schuldt said the executive board will meet June 4 to make future plans.

Murder case to grand jury

The case of a Wheeling Township man charged with murdering his wife has been turned over to the grand jury.

The grand jury will decide June 6 if John Smith, 405 Oriole Ln., will go to trial on charges brought against him by Cook County Sheriff's police. Police have charged Smith, 45, with stabbing his wife to death on May 16.

Smith, who police say apparently stabbed himself after stabbing his wife, appeared at his preliminary hearing yesterday in a wheelchair, according to police. Court Officer Irwin Kraut said Smith said nothing and "apparently has suffered a loss of memory as to the events."

Smith has been transferred from Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights to Bridewell Hospital, the county prison hospital in Chicago.

Police believe Smith stabbed his wife Irene, 53, in the stomach with a kitchen knife after a quarrel in their home in unincorporated Mount Prospect. Mrs. Smith was the mother of 10.

Correction

Prospect Heights School Dist. 23 was mistakenly listed in the Herald yesterday with school districts that have purchased civil rights insurance. Dist. 23 has not purchased the insurance and has no plans to do so, according to Supt. Edward Grodsky.

Firemen 'star' in film on department activities

There's a popular belief that when firemen aren't fighting fires, they are waiting for fires to happen.

Not so, protests the Mount Prospect Fire Department. The firemen have set out to destroy that myth with a 45-minute movie, complete with color, professional announcer and musical score. And it didn't cost the village one penny.

"We wanted to show people the variety of activities of our firemen. We hope that way they will be more aware of the need for fire prevention in their homes and businesses," said Fire Chief Larry Pairitz.

The movie, "We Protect and Serve," stars members of the fire department. Action includes fighting fires, rescuing auto accident victims and responding to ambulance calls. Settings include an abandoned farmhouse, local schools and the Great Lakes Naval Air Station, where firemen are taught how to combat gasoline fires.

"WE COULDN'T include everything. The movie would be too long," Pairitz said.

But the film-makers did include examples of the department's paramedic program, which provides emergency medical treatment at the scene; water safety demonstrations; and how firemen inspect all village buildings to make sure they meet fire codes.

The idea for a film to show the public originated many years ago, according to Pairitz, but the department just couldn't afford it.

The answer to the problem arrived in 1971 when the New Town area of Prospect Heights was annexed to the village. As a result, the Forest River Volunteer Fire Department was dissolved and many of its members joined the Mount Prospect department. Roger De Wert, assignment editor for Chicago's WGN television station, was among them.

DE WERT, WITH past experience as a cameraman, volunteered to take charge of the project. He started filming actual auto accidents and fires more than a year ago. He estimates that more than 300 hours of work went into the film, but refuses to take all the credit.

De Wert gives credit to his co-workers at WGN, including announcer Jack Taylor, who volunteered to help with the script, editing and filming. He also credits Joe Palese, a Mount Prospect resident, who donated the film and processing.

"The film could have cost us around $15,000 to $20,000 commercially, maybe higher," DeWert said. The department paid nothing for the original, which is now in a bank vault. The department did pay $325 for a print of the original.

The film has been shown to civic organizations in the village and will make the rounds of schools, church groups and other interested organizations.

"We hope it will be popular in the community and that we can get people interested," Pairitz said.

DE WERT SAID he had few problems making the film. Firemen cooperated 100 per cent, according to Pairitz. About the only trouble was finding an intelligible tape recording of a resident reporting a fire.

"We had to sift through several months of tapes to find a voice you could really understand," Pairitz said. "People just don't know how to turn in an alarm."

Teaching residents how to report a fire will be another project of the fire department, Pairitz said. Who knows — maybe they'll make another movie.

Spots language, hearing problems

SLIDES aids handicapped children

by KATHERINE BOYCE

When Debbie was 4 she had the vocabulary of a 2½-year-old.

She had an infection in both ears since she was an infant. The doctor treating her said her language problem was probably not related to the infection and she would learn more words as she grew older.

But preliminary tests by SLIDES, a state funded program to test preschool children for hearing and vision handicaps, showed that Debbie did have a hearing problem. She was referred to a hearing specialist by SLIDES and is now wearing hearing aids in both ears. Debbie is doing well in school now, said Joan Wootton, hearing consultant for the program and her "vocabulary is growing by leaps and bounds."

Debbie is an unusual case, said Helen Appeldoorn, director of the program. Most children tested don't have such serious handicaps, she said, but even a minor hearing or vision problem can put a child at a disadvantage in the classroom.

A child with a mild handicap, one who doesn't hear well but is not deaf, or doesn't see well but is not blind, often goes unnoticed by parents and teachers. The child is usually not aware of the problem because he is not used to hearing or seeing any other way.

THESE HANDICAPS often affect a child's education, usually his language ability. He may have an underdeveloped vocabulary because words sound distorted or are inaudible or he may not be able to see printed words and letters clearly. Too often this child appears to be just a slow learner. When the problem is recognized it can often be treated or the child can be placed in a special class to compensate for his handicap.

The job of SLIDES is to identify the mild handicap before the child enters school. The program was created by the state in 1968 after passage of a federal law granting state money to test children between age 2½ and 5 for mild handicaps. The program office, located in Washington School in Park Ridge, serves children in 49 school districts in Cook and Lake County.

Testing is performed free in local schools or in the slidesmobile, van equipped with testing instruments that is parked at each of the school districts every year. The slidesmobile is testing children in Schaumburg at Dirksen School this week at Keller Junior High School, May 29 to June 1 at Keller Junior High School, May 29 to June 1 at Nathan Hale School, June 1 through 8 and at the Des Plaines City Hall June 28 and 29. Parents should register their preschool children at the local school district.

Identifying learning problems among preschoolers is especially important, said Miss Wootton, because most communication skills, like language ability, are learned in the first three years of life. After a child reaches age 6 he has passed the period when learning skills is easiest, she said. After he enters school it is difficult for the handicapped child to catch up with his peers.

THE SLIDESMOBILE contains equipment used to test the hearing and vision abilities of preschool children in the north and northwest suburbs. A small percentage of the children tested have a handicap, are referred to a

The preliminary tests administered by SLIDES are called screening, said Miss Appeldoorn. They do not diagnose a handicap, they only show that a handicap may exist. The children are then referred to a specialist for further examination and treatment.

ABOUT ONE-THIRD of the preschoolers in the area come in for testing each year, a total of about 10,000 children. Of these children 2.5 per cent have a hearing handicap and 3.5 per cent have a vision handicap. About 96 per cent who are referred to a specialist have needed treatment.

The slidesmobile is equipped with a soundproof room where children are tested for hearing problems. The child wears earphones and listens to a variety of tones. When he hears a sound he raises his hand.

A child's vision is tested as he looks into an instrument and sees a slide of animal pictures, said Helen Gibbons, vision consultant. He must tell the examiner which figure a capital E points toward.

When a parent registers his child, he is given a game to take home and play to prepare the child for the tests. Some children are still frightened by the testing instruments and can't be examined. They are asked to come back for testing in a few months. All children should be tested each year because some handicaps may disappear and recur later.

SLIDES FOLLOWS the progress of children whose handicaps have been identified. The office works closely with doctors treating the children and with school personnel if the child enters a special learning program when he enrolls in school.

Two other services provided by SLIDES are testing the acoustics of classrooms and testing the accuracy of equipment used in schools for children who have hearing problems.

Equipment is tested to determine whether it meets with the manufacturers claims. The program contributes the test results to a statewide study designed to help schools purchase the best equipment.

Testing acoustics in classrooms is a service provided by SLIDES since last year. The examiner uses a sound meter to determine how much reverberation of sound occurs in the rooms. Too much reverberation can cause a problem for a hard-of-hearing child who is listening to a lesson. Ten rooms in the SLIDES area were tested last year and the program hopes to increase that number this year.

During the month of July, SLIDES consultants will evaluate the results of the tests given during the year. Next year's testing program will begin in August.

Schools urged to reconsider unit plan

A consultant has urged Elk Grove Township Elementary Dist. 59 "reconsider soon" the formation of a unit school district.

A report presented to the school board Monday by David Schmidt of the Illinois School Consulting Service encourages "reconsideration soon when issues that clouded a true objective look by some of the study committee members can either be placed in proper perspective or be satisfactorily resolved."

The board agreed to take action on possible further study of a unit district at its next meeting, June 4.

On April 5, after about six months of study, a Citizens' Reorganization Study Committee for the district recommended against further study of a unit district "at this time."

The vote to discontinue the study was 15-10, with two abstentions.

REPORTS FROM the committee and the dissenting minority, which recommends further study, have been submitted to the board.

The committee reported there were no definite educational advantages apparent in switching from a dual district to a unit responsible for only grades kindergarten through eighth. All high school grades are under High School Dist. 214.

Several proposals for unit districting were considered by the committee. Although all possible units were rejected, the most advantageous appeared to be a unit within the present boundaries of Dist. 59. Such a district would include the 20 elementary and junior high schools in Dist. 59 and would take Forest View and Elk Grove high schools from Dist. 214.

Schmidt said Monday, "It is just a matter of time before all (school) districts in Illinois become units, whether or not there is a financial gain."

THE CONSULTANT report gave three reasons for the committee's vote against a unit district:

—Loyalty and satisfaction with Dist. 214 situation "of greater degree than that expressed for School Dist. 59."

—Complication of multi-community problems and loyalties.

—Uncertainty about the ultimate effects of certain lawsuits and legislation.

The consultant's opinion contends a Dist. 59 unit would provide better educational opportunities and more money for education.

At Monday's meeting, the board also discussed the findings of the committee. Board Pres. Allen Sparks limited discussion to the committee report. The minority report was not directly discussed.

William Garvey, chairman of the facilities and transportation subcommittee, spoke for the committee. He said the district would have to repeat the study at a later date to determine if definite advantages to a unit district had developed.

Battery case dropped against Arlington man

Battery charges against Martin Seymour, 20, of 908 Braeside Dr., Arlington Heights, were dropped without prosecution Friday, in the Mount Prospect branch of circuit court.

Mount Prospect police said the complainant, John Hopkins, 919 S. Owen St., Mount Prospect, failed to appear in court Friday. Seymour had allegedly struck Hopkins March 18 near the corner of Main Street and Central Road in Mount Prospect.

Schools to rent Fairview room as computer center

Mount Prospect Dist. 57 will rent one classroom at Fairview School next year to a governmental agency for use as a computer center.

The board decided Monday night to rent the room, on the northwest corner of the school, to the Northwest Municipal Data Service, a cooperative including the villages of Mount Prospect, Arlington Heights, Des Plaines and Park Ridge. The room has a washroom and an outside entrance adjacent to it.

According to Asst. Supt. J. C. Busenhardt, the agency will pay a monthly fee of $500 for the rental. The lease will include an option to rent the room through 1974-75. Dist. 57 will pay a one-time cost of $500 to make a modification in the wall partition in the room for next year.

According to Building and Sites Committee chairman Peter Oleson, the school census indicates that room will be available at the school next year.

IN OTHER action, the board also authorized the administration to enter into negotiations with two educational agencies for rental of additional classrooms at Sunset Park and Busse schools next year.

The Northwest Educational Cooperative (NEC) has informed the administration that it would like to exercise its option for rental of an additional room at Sunset Park next year. The NEC presently rents one room at the school for a computer center. Should the district give NEC a lease for the additional classroom, the computer room will be expanded and a staff conference room and washroom for the NEC employees will also be included. The estimated cost of remodeling the room, to include a washroom, is $500. The district is responsible for all remodeling costs.

Maria Swanson, director of the Bi-Lingual Education Service Center, said she is getting ready now to submit her proposal for an extra room at Busse School to the Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction.

At present, the Bi-Lingual Center pays $400 a month for rental of one room at Busse. Rental price for an extra room, which would be located adjacent to the present center offices, would have to be negotiated, Busenhardt said.

The board plans to act June 4 on a new policy to deal with rental of excess classrooms in the district. The board has already had a first reading of the tentative policy.

The tentative version states that Dist. 57 will rent rooms to "any educational organization representing a school district, governmental agency or public service non-profit agency so long as rental does not jeopardize the physical activity, educational program or safety of the students."

The proposed policy also indicates that a public hearing will be scheduled before any action is taken by the board on rentals.

Our town's summer rip off: 1 bike stolen every 4 hours

by KURT BAER
It's the single biggest crime in Arlington Heights. Last year it struck the lives of 651 village residents. The year before, 755 citizens filed police complaints. During the summer months, a bicycle is stolen in Arlington Heights every four hours on the average. Already this year, 53 bikes have been reported stolen — 12 more than at this time a year ago. To protect their two-wheelers, which can cost upwards of $300, bike owners are resorting to tow chains, aircraft cable and $10 padlocks. It's not uncommon for a security-conscious owner to spend $20 for a lock-and-chain system. Police report that bolt cutters are a frequently used instrument in bicycle larcenies. A lightweight chain can be snipped apart with little more effort than it takes to prune a rose bush. EVEN CASE HARDENED and tempered steel chains have been broken. Spun steel cable offers a little better protection, but if the thief is determined and has the time, cable too can be cut. "The deterrent value is that it takes longer and requires a lot more work to get through one of these," said a salesman at Winkelman's Bike Shop in Arlington Heights, holding up a partially-cut steel cable. "It's good for business, but I really feel bad when people come in here and say, 'My bike was stolen, so I have to get a new one.' And it happens every day," he said. Many adults who, if they ever locked their bicycles at all, used a long-shanked lock stuck through the spokes, may find the rise in bicycle thefts difficult to understand. POLICE KNOW that some of the bikes that are taken each year are used by the stealer for his own recreation and transportation. But others, particularly the more costly cycles, find their way onto the bicycle black market. "It's big business today," says Arlington Heights Police Capt. Irvin McDougall. Last summer, Elk Grove Village police busted up what they called a bike stealing ring, charging three adults and two juveniles with lifting bikes, repainting them and then selling them at the Chicago lakefront. Some bicycle enthusiasts think the problem has gotten so serious, that it requires more than just heavier chains and stronger padlocks. MARY SPIREK of the Arlington Heights Bicycle Association says she thinks a "bicycle corral" at parks and schools, where bikes could be guarded, would help cut down the number of thefts. The bicycles would be kept in a fenced-in area and each bike would be checked in and out, by number. The system was proposed several years ago, but discarded because of its cost, said Police Capt. Maury English. Another safeguard, English said, is to (Continued on page 4)

New policy would encourage developers

Village hedges on support of low-cost housing plans

The Arlington Heights Village Board has shied away from a recommendation that private developers be encouraged to include some low-and moderate-income housing units in their building plans.

The proposal, drafted by the housing commission and accepted by the plan commission, is aimed at meeting the village board's stated commitment to develop 50 units of low, and 150 to 250 units of moderate-income housing in Arlington Heights.

Rather than accept the housing recommendation, village trustees opted for a future joint meeting with the housing commission to discuss the current status of subsidized housing programs. No date was set for the meeting.

Trustee Alice Harms said she understood that government funding for low-and moderate-income housing had been withdrawn, and that adopting the housing commission's recommendation at this time would be merely "a gesture."

VILLAGE PRES. Jack Walsh said he wanted to know what the housing commission's thinking was before acting on the proposed policy.

The housing commission report notes the current federal moratorium on low-and moderate-income housing, but states that a program to encourage private builders to include some low-rent units in their projects should be started anyway.

"While we recognize the problems inherent in the President's 18-month moratorium on the federal housing program, we feel that the foregoing procedure should be adopted now in order to take advantage of any federal funds that might be excepted from the moratorium now or in the near future, or the availability of state funds for programs administered by the Illinois Housing Development Authority."

The housing commission's report was prepared in February.

THE HOUSING commission cites five advantages in having low-and moderate-income units included in current and future apartment developments.

- Low-and moderate-income housing units could be made available faster than a totally subsidized development.

- Such units would be dispersed throughout the village, thereby reducing the adverse consequences of high land costs and promoting a better economic mix in the village.

- Low-and moderate-income housing would be made available for residents and people working in Arlington Heights.

- More centrally located sites would become available for low-and moderate-income housing.

- Responsibility for developing low-and moderate-income units would be shared among developers operating in the village.

TO IMPLEMENT the program, the housing commission has proposed meeting with developers prior to hearings before the plan commission, to discuss including some subsidized units in their plans.

After these meetings, the housing commission would file a report with the plan commission for its use in reviewing the proposed project.

The report does not indicate how many, or what percentage of units might be for low and moderate-income tenants.

A new Mount Prospect development, Huntington Commons, has designated 108 of 324 apartment units as moderate-income housing, under a state and federally subsidized program.

A FEW DAYS OF sun in between the recent torrents of rain have coaxed residents out of their houses and onto the tennis courts. For the more experienced, the warm days meant practicing up on the old game.

Steak house plans rejected

Plans for a steak house restaurant between Rand and Palatine roads have been rejected by the Arlington Heights Village Board.

The proposal to build Rustler's Steak House at 411 E. Rand Rd., and 210 E. Palatine Rd. was turned down because the trustees said they did not want to see Rand Road turned into a strip of franchise restaurants.

Flooding problems around the property and traffic congestion at the major intersection were other reasons given in support of the narrow 5-4 decision not to annex and rezone the property.

Trustee Alice Harms said that because a restaurant would almost certainly require village water and sewer services, she had little fear that the steak house would be developed in unincorporated Cook County.

In overruling a plan commission recommendation to approve the restaurant, the village board indicated that it hoped the triangular property at Rand and Palatine, opposite the North Point Shopping Center, would be planned for a larger, more unified development.

Village will work with youth council

Arlington Heights Village Pres. John Walsh told the Youth Council last night at a joint session of the two bodies the village board stands ready to cooperate fully on recommendations brought before the board by the council.

The meeting produced village support for two council projects: the printing and mailing of council minutes and agenda, and the printing of a council compiled youth services catalog.

The council, Walsh said, is the vehicle for research and "leg work" on youth related problems and possible solutions to those problems.

The village is waiting to hear from the council and has the resources to handle the recommendations or inquiries, he said.

The youth group should submit formal proposals to either the whole board or the appropriate committee for consideration, he said.

Walsh promised the board would not pass the buck if the problem lies outside the village domain. He said the village can provide the "political dynamics" for intergovernmental action with other bodies such as townships, Cook County, the state or federal government.

Walsh said that he hoped not all requests from the council would be for money to fund projects. He said the village budget has been finalized and calls for funding would be "shuffling of cards" already dealt.

The first example of cooperation came early in the meeting when the village agreed to pay for the printing and mailing of 300 copies of minutes and agendas.

Walsh also said the village would cooperate in the printing of 50 copies of a youth services directory compiled by Rod Kath, police department representative on the youth council.

Walsh said the 50 copies of the catalog could be done "in house" in conjunction with the new village public relations office.

The catalog lists area fraternal, church and service groups that sponsor youth programs ranging from ball teams and scout troops to "hot lines."

Backstretch will be surveyed

The Illinois Racing Board has begun a survey of conditions and employees on the backstretch of Arlington Park Race Track.

The study is aimed at determining the needs of backstretch workers as well as the availability of local and county social services, according to Lucy Reum, chairman of the racing board's backstretch committee.

"We went with Arlington first because they opened the thoroughbred season and have the largest group of people on the backstretch," Mrs. Reum said.

Interviewers will talk to half of the nearly 800 men and women who care for the 1,000 thoroughbred horses stabled at Arlington Park during the racing season.

Preliminary results of the survey should be available in about two weeks, Mrs. Reum said. Information on community services will take longer to compile, about 5 to 6 weeks, she said.

"WE HAVE A TOTAL group of people on the backstretch who are very important to the financial health of the state, but who aren't receiving the services they need and are entitled to," she said.

"Racing associations have been sharply criticized for neglecting the backstretch. So has the state for not fulfilling its obligations to race track employees and the racing public. And so have the horse owners for not living up to their obligations to their employees."

The survey was commissioned by the racing board in order to get "some hard demographic facts," she said. "We kept getting conflicting stories about the number of people on the backstretch, where they came from and what they need."

"Once we know what they tell us they need, we can arrange needs in terms of priority, short, middle and long range," she said.

Among the social services, Mrs. Reum cites education and health as among the most pressing. Basic education classes for backstretch employees are in their second year at Arlington Park. Teachers use a mobile classroom furnished by the racing board.

John Smith murder case to grand jury

The case of a Wheeling Township man charged with murdering his wife has been turned over to the grand jury.

The grand jury will decide June 6 if John Smith, 405 Oriole Ln., will go to trial on charges brought against him by Cook County Sheriff's police. Police have charged Smith, 45, with stabbing his wife to death on May 18.

Smith, who police say apparently stabbed himself after stabbing his wife, appeared at his preliminary hearing yesterday in a wheelchair, according to police. Court Officer Irwin Kraut said Smith said nothing and "apparently has suffered a loss of memory as to the events."

Smith has been transferred from Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights to Bridewell Hospital, the county prison hospital in Chicago.

Police believe Smith stabbed his wife Irene, 53, in the stomach with a kitchen knife after a quarrel in their home in unincorporated Mount Prospect. Mrs. Smith was the mother of 10.

For many backstretch workers

Classroom: unfamiliar place

For many workers on the backstretch of Arlington Park Race Track, the classroom is an unfamiliar, even a frightening place.

But for the second straight year, a few of the men and women who groom and train the expensive thoroughbreds that race at Arlington Park are going to school. Some perhaps for the very first time.

Harper College, together with high school districts 211 and 214, are offering several basic education classes — including English as a second language, Spanish and creative art — for track employees.

The classes are held at night in a mobile classroom purchased and furnished by the Illinois Racing Board.

The racing board this year also is presenting a class in the breeding, care and training of horses. For the over 50 backstretch employees enrolled in this course, it is a chance to get an instructional look at a business they are immersed in daily.

"We felt it was successful last year, partially because it was the first time anything like this was ever done at a race track," said Noreen Lopez, an administrator with Harper's adult basic education program.

"I think we had a total of 20 students." This year, there are 25 to 30 students attending classes two and three nights a week.

Part of the reason for the enrollment increase is that this year, unlike last, the classes are free. In 1972, to enroll, workers had to pay $5 a course, $10 for two classes.

Another incentive is the mobile classroom which is parked right in the backstretch — accessible and visible to the employees.

"Some of the students in the language class this year also were enrolled last year. I think the word of mouth is helping to promote the classes," Miss Lopez said.

The mobile classroom was purchased by the racing board and will be used at other tracks, said Lucy Reum, chairman of the board's backstretch committee.

"We don't want them (backstretch employees) to get the idea in any sense that they are second class citizens," she said.

Miss Lopez said plans are being made to bring in a tape recorder language lab for persons enrolled in the language classes.

The basics of drawing, sketching and painting will be taught in the creative arts class, which may lead to an exhibit of students' work.

Adult education classes on the backstretch are an innovation for Illinois race tracks. Though less heralded than the implementation of "Trifecta" or "Qui-nella" betting at Arlington Park, the program appears destined to have a pay off uniquely its own.

5% raises for high school bosses

Raises for High School Dist. 214 administrators will average 5 per cent for next year, unless the Dist. 214 board decides next month that's too high.

The board Monday authorized Supt. Edward Gilbert to draw up proposed merit salary increases for the district's 101 administrators using $110,000 more than was spent last year for salaries. The figure provides an average five per cent raise for administrators.

In addition, however, board members indicated they may decide to lower the amount available for raises if they don't like the way the individual raises come out. The five per cent increase is one per cent less than the amount originally recommended by Gilbert.

Gilbert told the board he will recommend individual salary increases at the June 4 meeting.

GILBERT SAID HE originally recommended a 6 per cent average raise based on the rising cost of living and on the general salary practices for teachers.

Board member Jack Costello, who recommended that the average be cut from six per cent to 5 per cent, said he was concerned because some administrators' raises in the past have been "shockingly high."

Costello added that some years Gilbert has "almost had to force some raises" to use up all the money allowed by the board.

"I just don't see 6 per cent as being in the cards," Costello said. "I can't help what other districts do around us but I think many of our administrators are quite well paid."

Last year the board provided for average three per cent raises for administrators, with some getting nothing and others getting increases of as much as 7 per cent. Costello said, "There were substantial raises available at 3 per cent and I think there will be substantial raises available at 5 per cent."

IN ADDITION, board members also disagreed about whether the $110,000 should be used to actually raise the newly adopted administrative salary scale or whether to keep minimums and maximums for salaries the same and just give raises within that framework.

Board members also deferred a final decision on whether to raise minimums and maximums for each job until June 4.

County panel gives OK to apartments

Cook County zoning officials have recommended that 96 acres in northeast Palatine Township be rezoned to allow the development of Hidden Creek, a complex of apartments, offices and shopping facilities.

The land borders the proposed route of the Ill. Rte 53 expressway, and is bounded by Dundee Road on the south and Baldwin Road on the west. The triangular-shaped property is currently zoned for single-family homes.

Final approval for the rezoning was delayed this week by Cook County commissioners until the June meeting. But the recommendations of the zoning members, who conduct a local public hearing on each proposed development, are usually followed by the county commissioners.

The residential portion of Hidden Creek, scheduled for the northern 78 acres of the development, will be constructed with three types of apartment buildings.

THREE-STORY apartment buildings would be built on the 23-acre northernmost area. The central area, surrounding a Buffalo Creek tributary, will have townhouses and duplexes. And the

"courts" section will have three buildings, one seven stories tall and the other two nine stories each.

Plans for a commercial area along Dundee Road are not finalized.

The area surrounding the Hidden Creek development has already been rezoned for various condominium and apartment projects.

Officials with the Village of Arlington Heights formally protested the rezoning in a letter to county zoning officials, on the grounds that the development would increase flooding in Arlington Heights. The village's boundaries extend to Rte. 53 on the west.

Meet today, tomorrow on school work

Elk Grove Township School Dist. 59 will have public meetings today and tomorrow to explain a proposed $1.25 million remodeling plan for two junior high schools.

The school district is seeking to pass a bond referendum June 9 to finance the cost of remodeling Grove Junior High School and Dempster Junior High School.

If the referendum passes, the tax rate will increase three cents per $100 assessed valuation for all district taxpayers, according to school district figures. The current bond-and-interest rate is 36 cents per $100. In next year's budget, the rate is expected to drop to 47 cents per $100 valuation.

The increase, if the referendum passes, would bring the rate to 50 cents per $100, which is below the current rate.

Today's meeting will be at 8 p.m. at Grove Junior High School, 777 Elk Grove Blvd., Elk Grove Village.

TOMORROW'S MEETING will be at 8 p.m. at Dempster Junior High School, 420 Dempster St., Mount Prospect.

Principals of the schools will conduct tours through the buildings at 8 p.m. to point out the proposed changes.

After the tours, Allen Sparks, school board president; James Ervill, district superintendent; and Scott Kelley, architect for the remodeling work, will talk about why the district wants to do the remodeling.

Other members of the school board are also expected to attend the meetings.

If the June 9 referendum is passed, the remodeling would replace heating and ventilating systems at both schools, improve learning centers, relocate and remodel classrooms and build small additions to both schools.

Initial plans for the remodeling were presented in October and included converting the schools to "open classroom" buildings, adding small auditoriums and air conditioning.

In an open class room, all students and teachers of a certain grade are in one large room.

After consulting with the faculty of both schools, the open classroom proposal was dropped. Traditional classrooms will be retained.

THE SCHOOL BOARD also eliminated auditoriums and air conditioning for both schools.

The initial plans had an estimated cost of $2.3 million.

Grove and Dempster are the oldest junior high schools in the district. Both were opened in 1900.

The major portion of the remodeling expense is for replacement of heating and ventilating systems. The heating systems at both schools do not provide even heating throughout the building.

Heating repair and maintenance costs have also increased recently.

The architect has said the ventilation systems at both schools, while meeting the state legal requirements, are not adequate. He said the present system requires open windows to get fresh air into the buildings. On cold and inclement days, the windows remain closed and no fresh air enters the building, according to the architect.

use the police marking system known as "Operation Identification."

Special engraving pencils are available through the police department and can be used to stencil a driver's license number on the bike wheel, frame and fork, he said.

THIS WILL HELP US in identifying bikes much more than looking for serial numbers which often are marred or completely scratched out," he said.

Village residents can also register their bikes, by serial number, at the police station.

English said the village used to give out bicycle license stickers, but that because so few people actually used them, the practice was discontinued.
